"Buy Land, Buy Land,
And Never Let Go a Handful of Sand."
—Joaquin Miller.

Now that's alright so far as it goes, but he might have gone further and said, "Buy land in and adjoining the City of New Orleans."

Also had he been familiar with all the facts in the case he should, and no doubt would have said, "and the best land in and near New Orleans that may be bought reasonably, is that owned by the Verret Canal & Land Company, Ltd."

Now you think from the above that we hold a rather high opinion of our land, or possibly you believe that this is the usual advertisement talk. Well, it is the former, and we not only believe that we have the best lands, price considered, near and in the city, but we believe that we can convince you of that fact, if you will allow us to send you our book, "Suburban Property." Whether you are skeptical or not send for the book; it's free.

LESSON FOR OCT. 28, 1906.

JESUS ANOINTED IN BETHANY.

Matt. xxvi, 6-16.

Golden Text: "She hath wrought a good work upon me."

In our present lesson we have a goodly scene to look upon. When we think of our own homes made doubly dear by "him whom, having not seen, we love," and whose presence is felt in every loving word and act, we love to look upon this home of Simon the leper, where Jesus, the center of all interest, is surrounded by those who were drawn to him by love and gratitude. It was a supper, at the close of one of those anxious and troublous days of passion week. It was informal, and although a sweet season of rest and peace, it was the last of many pleasant enjoyments of home life in Bethany, for "the Man of Sorrows" would soon depart for the many mansions of his Father's home.

It seems to us that the families of Simon and Lazarus had united to prepare a feast for the Lord. We need not suppose that the two families were related, as there were stronger ties binding them than kinship, in that both owed to the Lord a lasting debt of gratitude. It is said that Simon had been healed of leprosy by a word from the Son of God. We know that Lazarus had been called back to life after he had been four days in the grave. It was a gathering of persons whose names are eternally graven on the pages of Holy Scripture; yet the incident is given us as only one of the many sweet days that Jesus spent in the home of loving friends. Simon was the host—and was host ever in better spirits to minister to his guest? He must have watched the Master closely to anticipate his slightest wish. Lazarus was one of the guests, and now and forever will his name follow in memory when we read, "I am the resurrection and the life," the words of the Giver of Life.

The other guests at the supper were the apostles, Judas Iscariot among them. Martha served saith the Scripture; busy, bustling Martha, showing her love for the Master in her own natural way. John in his Eleventh Chapter, telling of Jesus' love for the three, names Martha first; and Martha made to Jesus the great confession of faith before many of the disciples had uttered the words there of.

It seems that at the beginning of the feast Mary was not present. Soon she entered—how must her heart beat with joy as she gazed on the assembled guests! She looked upon her brother, given back from the grave, and then upon her Lord who had been the Giver. Then, bearing in her hand the costly ointment, she came nearer to Jesus and poured it on his head as he sat at the table. The pleasure of the feast could not last—no, not where man gives vent to greed. The disciples began to murmur amongst themselves at the waste of such costly ointment that could have been sold and the money given to the poor. Jesus rebuked them, saying that they could always minister to the poor that were always with them, but that he would not be with them long, for had not Mary even then anointed his body for burial? He raised an eternal monument to Mary then and there, saying that she had done a good work, and that wherever the gospel should be preached in the whole world Mary's act should be told. Why should it not be the preface to every gospel sermon?

Up to this point in the lesson we have a most pleasing study. An appeal is made to the emotions. It is a home scene, and we have been made well acquainted with most of the personages in their joy and in their sorrows. We have seen how our Lord was with them in all. We can see the strong tie that binds them together, and we learn that our homes and our religion should be first in our affections. It is a lesson of love and gratitude. If the practical student wishes, he can easily trace the law of cause and effect, for our religion is nothing if it is not both practical and reasonable.

Mary and Martha loved Jesus, why? Because Jesus loved and sympathized with them and bestowed upon them a blessing. We, ourselves, love God, why? Because he first loved us. The heart is the seat of affection; it is the ideal starting point in character-building. Solomon says "out of the heart are the issues of life," and "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Now all of our Lord's teaching was practical. He drew largely from animate and inanimate objects around him; but here he is the center of a study purely sentimental, so great is the scope of the doctrine of Christ; teaching that all things are subject to him with whom we have to do.

We linger near this sweet scene where those that love the Lord are full of joy in his presence. Before we turn away, let us whisper a prayer of thankfulness that we have him in our own sweet homes, and see him in all the loving and self-forgetting deeds done among our loved ones.

There is no alloyed happiness in this world, and the balance of our lesson tells us that Jesus, who knows the thoughts of men, knew that one among his dozen apostles had been continually thinking of how he could betray his Master and gain thereby. Judas Iscariot went from the house of Simon to the enemies of the Lord and bargained with them for his betrayal. It has always been a matter of wonder to us how one could be with Jesus so long, hearing his words and seeing his work of love and compassion, and commit an act so base and treacherous! Why, he was even commissioned to preach the kingdom of God, heal the sick and cast out devils! The Scripture makes it possible in the only way, when it says, "Satan entered into Judas." In all history sacred or profane, there is not related a more horrible or cruel act than this of Judas Iscariot. It is fearful to know that it is possible for one to live under good influence for years and then fall away and be finally lost. Let us ever pray that we may be always "kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation."

MARS HILL CIRCUIT.

Dear Advocate: I have finished my round of protracted meetings. I was assisted at Bethesda, July 15-20, by Rev. T. H. Porter, who did some good preaching. We had a good meeting which resulted in reviving the church. We had about eight conversions and five accessions. The boys have organized a Young Men's Prayer Meeting.

At Chapel Hill, July 21-26. The only visible result was reviving the church. Brother McCaloh, of the Cumberlain Presbyterian Church, preached three good sermons during the meeting. Many of the boys and men were ready to work when called on.

Aug. 5-10 we had an old-time revival meeting at Mars Hill. The members worked for it, and they got it. The church was revived. We had about a dozen conversions and nine accessions. A prayer-meeting was started, and plans laid to start a Sunday school for the winter.

At Goars Springs, Aug. 12-16, Rev. R. L. Gilon, of St. Louis, Mo., did some good preaching. He showed himself to be a good worker in a meeting. There were several conversions, but no accessions to the Methodist Church.

Aug. 25-30, protracting from the third quarterly conference, our beloved presiding elder assisted. It goes without saying that the preaching was good, and of a convincing kind. Many expressed themselves by saying "that man got closer to me than any preacher ever did." The congregation was much too large for the house, which rendered altar work forty or fiftyst?c. .,a -l, shrdlu shrdlu almost impossihle. Yet there were from fifty to one hundred and twenty-five who gave their hands for prayer at nearly every service. We had quite a number of conversions . . . thirty-three joined the church.

In all, we have received into the church forty-six on profession of faith, and five by certificate, making a total of fifty-one, and more to follow.

I have started three prayer-meetings, and trust, one Sunday school. Pray for us that more good may be done yet. Yours truly,

E. C. SULLIVAN.

BIENVILLE CHARGE.

Dear Doctor: We closed a meeting at Castor Station on Sunday night that surpassed anything in interest that I have witnessed for many years. The church would not hold the people and we were forced to build an arbor.

There were forty accessions during the meeting. I think if we could have continued a few days longer that we might have had one hundred or more accessions. Some bright conversions. At least three hundred came forward on the last day and claimed that they had been blessed during the meeting.

Nineteen sermons were preached by Rev. D. E. Kelly, of Pearlhaven, Miss. From the first service to the close the altar was crowded with penitents. Brother Dan is a charming preacher, and won everyone to his way of thinking, if he does part his hair in the middle. God is wonderfully blessing him, and he must come to north Louisiana to stay.

Valuable service was rendered by Brotner Lay, of Alberta. Brother Lay is doing a fine work in Alberta, and is a man of promise. He is our busy man.

Salvation is rolling on over here.

RANDOLPH MISSION.

Dear Doctor Boswell: We have had some splendid revivals on the Randolph Mission this summer. We have had forty-six accessions to the church, with more yet to join, and between eighty and ninety conversions. We were ably assisted by the following preachers: J. R. Robertson, J. C. Nelson, W. L. Broom, T. L. Porter, J. A. Biffle, R. F. Cole, T. E. Gregory.

We give God all the praise. Yours in the fight till Jesus comes,

A Bumper Wheat Crop.

To produce a "bumper" wheat crop, it is absolutely necessary that you supply to your land one or more of the three elements of plant food which your soil so badly needs: phosphoric acid, nitrogen (or ammonia) and potash. The liberal use of

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers,

(say 200 to 500 pounds to the acre) will meet this deficiency. You know the highest grades are always cheaper, as they produce greater yields. These fertilizers on account of the phosphoric acid they contain, promote the growth and development of the grain and hastens maturity; the nitrogen or ammonia of which they are a part, increases the growth of leaves and stalk and its potash gives strength to the stalk and assists in the development of the grain.

So use VIRGINIA-CAROLINA FERTILIZERS and greatly "Increase your yields per acre." Don't buy any substitute brand, which some dealer may tell you "Is just as good." If he cannot supply you, write us direct for the goods and tell us your dealer's name.

The Great Difference In Life Insurance Companies

is not revealed by their names nor their claims. The day before the San Francisco disaster, all Fire Insurance Companies seemed alike to the thoughtless; there was a great difference nevertheless, and when the test came, some quibbled, some defaulted; while others drew on the reserve funds which they had ready for such a contingency, paid the large amounts due, and went right on.

¶ It is because for years the money it has received from its policyholders has been invested with unusual skill and care—always safe, always growing, always ready for the hour of need—that is the strongest and staunchest Life Insurance Company in the world. Read these figures as to the Mutual reserve.

¶ At the close of 1905, the Mortgage Loans amounted to $109,771,163.16, on which more than four and one-half millions have been received in interest during the year, and less than fifteen thousand dollars of interest was overdue at its close. Most of this trifling amount was paid in within a few days. The sum of $28,198,278.84 was loaned on the Company's policies, and $18,195,000.00 was loaned on other collateral, no interest whatever being overdue on either item. Bonds and Stocks costing $239,956,702.05 and having a market value on December 31, 1905, of $265,301,867.38 were held by the Company, and on this enormous amount not one dollar of interest was overdue and unpaid, and but one stock failed to pay a good dividend in 1905, this stock being that of a new company, subsequently sold at a profit over cost. When it is borne in mind that no such aggregation of purely investment securities has ever been brought together elsewhere, the absolutely clean and indeed perfect quality of these immense investments excites praise and wonder, felt and expressed most strongly by those who know most as financiers of the dangers and pitfalls attending the care of large investments. This remarkable showing also appeals to the plain people whose money comes slowly, who value safety and who understand that security like the above makes "insurance" insurance indeed.

NEWTON ELLIS LOVELADY, infant and only son of Gilbert and Lela Lovelady, died July 28, 1906, aged 5 months and 15 days. All that medical skill or fondest love could do was done, but he who said "Suffer little children to come unto me" transplanted the sweet little bud from earth to bloom in heaven. Oh, how sweet it will be to meet loved ones in that bright heavenly home. Father, mother and little sister, be ready to meet little Ellis at the pearly gate with fair little hands uplifted to welcome you in to that heavenly home where parting will be no more. M. A. W.

Mrs. ESTELLE FRANKLIN (nee Dent) was born in Rankin County, Mississippi, near Braxton, Jan. 19, 1878, and died Sept. 12, 1906. She was united in wedlock to Brother Jas. H. Franklin on Dec. 24, 1901. Unto them was born only one child, William, a bright little boy. Sister Franklin joined the Baptist Church while small, afterwards joined the Methodist Church. Her life was a life of consistency. Their home was a preacher's home. To know her was to love her. She was sick for quite a while, but not a murmur did we hear from her. Her only desire was that the will of our heavenly Father be done. We laid her remains in the cemetary at Line Creek Church, to await the resurrection morn. Her loved ones have the sympathy of their pastor and a host of friends. We admonish them to be faithful and true to God, for a few more years at best, and then we will cross over the river, and join with her in singing God's praise on the shores of sweet deliverance. Her pastor, J. O. WARE.

Mrs. MARY J. CLARK was born at Franklin, Holmes County, Miss., Nov. 27, 1829, and died Aug. 28, 1906. These dates mark her days, but do not bound her influence. She lives in the ten children who wait on this side, and in the many kind things done in the name of her Lord. Sister Clark was a member of the Methodist Church for fifty years. Up to within recent years she was always very active in church work, and joined her husband and children in many loving services for her Lord. She was amiable in disposition, a devout Christian, a fond parent, and a sincere friend. God gave her more strength than most women had, but all this went like the alabaster box in grateful service to Christ. Her faith was conspicuous yet she toiled as though she prayed not. When she came to cross the last river, she was not afraid, for she met her Pilot face to face. In life her face bore the marks of calm trustfulness, in death there was upon her brow a radiance which never was on land or sea. She was buried from the Methodist Church in Kosciusko, where she had worshipped for many years, being followed to the grave by a large concourse of sorrowing friends. E. S. LEWIS.

GOLDEN WEDDINGS.

Stories of the golden weddings of numerous happily married couples have of late been of frequent and very pleasing occurrence in many exchanges, but seldom, indeed, does one read of a father fortunate enough to be present at the fiftieth anniversary of his own daughter's marriage. Yet just such an incident has been reported from the town of Pana, Ill. What a beautiful thing it must have been for this aged father of ninety-one years to be alive and well to rejoice with his child on the day that marked the close of her half-century of conjugal felicity. It seems a wonderful thing to most of us that so many old couples are allowed by kind fate to spend fifty blessed years together in love and unity; but to be spared to witness a similar celebration of the long happy married life of one's own daughter is truly marvelous indeed. To be able to look back, in the retrospect of a serene old age, upon such a long stretch of joyful man and wife comradeship, is without doubt most blessed, and this parent, who is able to gaze down the many years of his own good life and then, afterwards, down through the half century of his child's wedded happiness, is surely doubly blessed, and those who have tasted, even in a small measure, of this real happiness, will be more than ready to wish this old great-grandfather and his grandmother daughter and her husband godspeed on the rest of their journey through life.

From England, too, there comes a pretty tale of an old couple of Taunton, who not long since celebrated their seventy-second wedding anniversary. Seventy-two years together! What a long stretch of time that is! Why, it is more than man's allotted span of life. How many stormy days these very old people must have weathered together, he steadily at the helm, she carefully trimming the sails, lest their precious load of love and companionship be lost; how many hours of happiness they must have enjoyed together; hand in hand, each helping each, as they moved slowly down the vale of life, serene in the knowledge that, turough rain and sunshine, they were ever heart in heart. The account of this unique celebration says that the united ages of the husband and wife amount to more than one hundred and ninety-one years, and this allows more than ninety years for either of them. How pleasant it must be for these two to sit quietly at rest in this, the very home course of their long lives, and dream and ponder together over the happiness that has been theirs for almost three-quarters of a century. The greatest blessing that one may wish for these old people, nearly centenarians to-day, is that neither may long outlive the other, and that the one left behind may speedily find his life's comrade waiting on the other side.—Times-Democrat.

LUCEDALE CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Recently it was my good fortune and pleasure to be associated with Rev. C. C. Evans in two meetings on the Lucedale Charge.

Brother Evans, though in wretched health since early in March—a mere shadow of himself in flesh and strength—has manifested a heroic spirit and is deserving of the prayers and sympathy of all the brethren.

The first meeting I held for Brother Evans was at Lucedale, beginning the second Sunday in September. At this place, a few years ago, I had the honor of organizing the Methodist Society and building the house of worship now in use. It was surely pleasant to me to again preach to the people who had done so much for me as a young preacher; and the attendance of the people upon the preached Word, their attention thereto, and the genuine sympathy manifested during the whole series of services was a matter of great encouragement to me. When saint and sinner resort to the house of God and listen so carefully and patiently to the Gospel of Christ, it is but natural that the Holy Spirit should do a work that shall tell in years to come.

The third Sunday in September I began another meeting with Brother Evans at Brushy, Miss., a saw-mill town, on the M., J. and K. C. railroad. Here a nice, commodious church has been built during the pastorate of Brother Evans, and though the house was not quite completed, yet the people met us in a prayerful spirit and much good was accomplished during the few services we were able to hold. The weather was greatly against us, but fair-sized congregations greeted us each service.

At this meeting I met many old parishioners, and I made the acquaintance of other of God's people, who gave such expressions of appreciation as made me feel very humble and unworthy.

Those added to the Church in these two meetings, though only a few in number, were such as will doubtless be a real help to the Church in every way. The convictions were deep the conversions evident, and the purpose henceforth to live for Christ clearly expressed, and when people are received into the Church after such an experience we may reasonably expect them to stand by the Church and all of its holy institutions and ordinances.

I cannot close this note without acknowledging the many courtesies extended me while laboring with the people of Lucedale and Brushy, and though I have already spoken of the heroic spirit of Brother Evans, I would not feel that I had said all that should be said if I did not speak of Sister Evans. Her health is also very bad, but she is humble, sweet-spirited, hopeful, a comfort and help, indeed, to her noble husband. Fraternally. J. W. CAMPBELL.

RINGGOLD, LA.

Mr. Editor: I will send you some items from the Wesley Circuit. We have held our Protracted Meetings and was ably assisted at Davis Springs by Rev. P. J. Elliott, Rev. Henry Murphy and the local brethren, Fulton, Boyd and Bamburg; at Carrol Creek by Rev. John O. Boyd and R. H. Bamburg; at Holly Springs by Brother Bamburg; at East Point and Wesley I was alone and did the preaching.

Brother Robert Olivar and his excellent wife were with me all round and led the music at the organ and the song service, and did it well. All things considered, our meetings were successes. We have received 35 members to date and expect a few more. The prohibition campaign was on during our meetings and was the chief topic of conversation and gained the victory by a large majority in Red River parish. The Wesley Circuit can be developed into a splendid work. We have a fine people that will go forward with the work of the Church. We have five Sunday Schools, three prayer meetings. There have been thirty-four or thirty-five new subscribers to our Church organ on the charge during the year. The prospects are good for organizing a new Church on the charge, with twelve or fifteen more members. I hope to bring up the collections in full.

Rev. H. G. Davis held our Third Quarterly Conference Sept. 18. He magnified his office; his preaching was plain, spiritual and strong; his administration was eminently satisfactory. We were delighted with him. The greatest shortage is in ministerial support, but will be looked after now, as the cotton crop is going on the market. I have never pressed the work harder in my life than this year.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, BOSTON, MASS.

What Dr. Williams Says About Consumption.

Dr. Williams, the well-known consumption specialist and Medical Director of the New Orleans Depuratorium Lung Cure, says: "Nothing but a direct application of healing vaporized medicines, antiseptics and germicides to the very seat of the disease, and these medicines can be applied only by inhaling them in a vaporized state. The lungs constitute an air cavity and can be reached medicinally only by medicated air. I will positively assert that bronchial or catarrhal consumption can be cured by these healing oily vapors that reach the seat of the disease, laden as they are with the Williams germ-killing 'Osoline.'

After many years of careful observation and examining the sputum of eleven hundred cases, I am convinced that fully three-fifths of all the deaths charged to consumption are really catarrhal bronchitis associated with dyspepsia, which is brought on from severe dosing of the stomach. My treatment goes directly to the lungs and consequently does not disarrange the stomach or impair the digestion. The treatment can be taken at home if desired."

Dr. Williams' invention of the wonderful Depurator Inhalation has made his name known all over the land. By means of this great invention the germ-destroying Williams' "Osoline" and healing antiseptic oils are combined and vaporized so that the curative vapors may be easily breathed into the lungs and air pipes, spreading these healing oils over the sore spots and inflamed tissues of patients suffering from consumption and asthma. By this means the germs are killed, the sore spots are healed and the diseased coatings of the lungs and air tubes are loosened and thrown off. The cause of the disease being removed, the patient steadily improves until a complete cure is effected.

The New Orleans office of the Williams Lung cure, 1331 St. Charles avenue, cor. Thalia, is under the immediate supervision of Dr. Williams, who visits it frequently to consult with his specialist physicians in charge of the New Orleans Depuratorium and Electro-Therapeutic Institute. Call and receive free examination, advice and free trial treatment, or write for pamphlet describing the Williams Home Treatment.

Glances at the World.

One of the daily papers of Vicksburg declares that the cities of Greenville, Natchez and Vicksburg, "where saloons are licensed, are far more orderly than Jackson, Meridian and Yazoo City, that are under blind tiger rule." For this reason the editor is strongly opposed to the agitation of the whiskey question. He does not want prohibition, for fear it will introduce disorder and do harm. Turning to another daily paper published in the same town we read a strong indorsement of the Chief of Police in his successful work of "bringing saloon violators of the law to punishment." From this editorial we infer there are "dives" in Vicksburg, and that like "dives" in all other cities, they are disorderly, and breeders of crime. It goes without saying that when saloons are licensed, and licenses are granted "to anybody, and to do business anywhere," that more or less lawlessness will follow. The whole saloon business is essentially evil, and naturally tends to breed crime. Neither paper above alluded to gives any police reports, but we venture to say that were they given they would be decidedly in favor of the cities where saloons are not licensed.

"The Clansman" is the title of a book written by a minister of the gospel. It portrays the characteristics of the negro race, and especially the evil nature which has led so many of them into crime. The book has been dramatized and thus put before the country. Everywhere the play is presented it rouses the people to fury. It was recently billed for certain cities in Georgia, but in view of the riot at Atlanta, and in the interest of safety, the city authorities forbid its production. The preachers of Jackson, Miss., undertook to have it suppressed in that city, but the authorities there found themselves powerless. The author of a play, or whoever is responsible for its production, should not wait for the law to suppress it whenever it is found to excite such race prejudice as is calculated to lead to riot and bloodshed. The owner or owners should at once take it off the boards. The reverend author doubtless receives "a royalty" on the play. If it is as vicious as represented, every penny he puts in his pocket for its production is quite as much tainted as the dollars of Standard Oil.

The skating craze seems to be universal. It is as bad as it was over thirty years ago, when roller skates were introduced, and a much greater nuisance than it was then. Boys and girls then had some respect for the rights of others, and did not attempt to monopolize the city sidewalks. Now they have no respect for anything except their own pleasure. In New Orleans there has been great complaint on the part of quiet citizens, especially those who own smoothly paved sidewalks, for here the skaters congregate and keep up a constant racket, besides occupying the whole of the walk. In one town, with a large school population, it was found that the students at the end of the first school month were deficient in their studies. The matter was investigated, and the School Board reached the conclusion that the skating craze was responsible, the boys and girls spending the afternoon and early hours of the evening in skating. The board applied to the City Council for an ordinance to suppress the nuisance. The ordinance was granted and the rink closed its doors. Reasonable indulgence in sport is healthy, but when sport interferes with duty those who are in control should look after its proper regulation.

Matters get no better in Russia, but they grow no worse. There is a gleam of hope. Under the present Premier, Stolypine, reforms are promised, which, if carried out, will tend to quiet the people. The Literary Digest says: "The current Russian newspapers show that the policy of 'strong-handed reform' to which the Russian Premier Stolypine claims to be committed has had the effect of splitting political parties, calling into existence a new party, the peaceful regenerationists, and led to a general realignment, which, however, has not affected the position of the Constitutional Democrats, who controlled the first Douma, and expect, in spite of the Government, to control the second." The reforms promised by Stolypine are tabulated as follows: "(1) The setting aside of certain crown and State lands for the land-hungry peasants; (2) religious freedom; (3) steps toward civil equality; (4) removal of 'useless' and needless restrictions upon the Jews; (5) insurance and other legislation for factory workmen; (6) income taxation; (7) the extension of local and provincial self-government; (8) reorganization of the courts, the police and local administration."

The political situation was perhaps never more perplexing to politicians than it is to-day in New York. Everything is uncertain. Mr. W. R. Hearst was first nominated for Governor by the Independence League and then sought—at least his friends did for him—the support of the regular Democrats. The contest was sharp between him and another Democrat who had never been charged with disloyalty to the party. But in the convention Mr. Hearst's friends outnumbered the other man's, and he got the prize. As we see the matter, many who bitterly opposed Mr. Hearst because of his sympathies with Socialism and independence have fallen into line, and are supporting him because he is the nominee of the party. Many others—among the strongest men—will not support him at all. On the other hand, they are fighting hard to prevent his election. This division makes the issue uncertain. The Republicans have put out a man of the cleanest record, and they are united in his support, but whether they will be able to elect him, themselves are in doubt. Mr. Hearst's vote in the city will be overwhelming. If Mr. Hughes wins, his strength must come from the country, to which the Republicans always look to overcome the Democratic majority of the city. But things are mixed and only election day will make anything certain.

The work of reconstruction is fully on in Cuba. Secretary Taft and Attorney Bacon have vacated their posts and are now at home, and Mr. Chas. E. Magoon has assumed control as Provisional Governor. Secretary Taft, before relinquishing the helm, issued the following proclamation to the Cuban citizens: "The provisional government hereby established will be maintained only long enough to restore order, peace and public confidence by direction of and in the name of the President of the United States, and then to hold such elections as may be necessary to determine on those persons upon whom the permanent government of the Republic should be devolved. In so far as is consistent with the nature of a provisional government established under the authority of the United States this will be a Cuban government, conforming with the constitution of Cuba." And, in his now celebrated address before the University of Havana, the Secretary said: "With our arm under your arm we are lifting you again on the path of wonderful progress you have traveled. We shall, I am confident, be able to point with pride to the fact that the United States is not an exploiting nation, but that she has such deep sympathy with the progress of popular government as to be willing to expend her blood and treasure in making the spread of such government in the world successful." These were wise words, and were well received by the people.

HERESY IN HIGH PLACES.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D.D.

The Nashville Advocate of Sept. 7th contained an editorial from which I quote as follows:

"Is immortality an essential endowment of the human soul? Must the soul live always, even though it would choose strangling rather than life? Are the lost, the finally impenitent, as truly immortal as the saved in heaven? Is consciousness of the pains of hell as surely eternal as enjoyment of the bliss of paradise? We do not know. That man is essentially and necessarily immortal is commonly thought to be the teachings of the Bible, but our own opinion is that the Bible is silent on this point. We are ready, moreover, even to concede that it would be a relief to us if a closer study of scripture and of the facts of human consciousness should bring the conviction that the unhappy dead will sooner or later lapse into absolute and final unconsciousness."

Is not this a departure from "the faith once delivered to the saints?" If not, then I have all my life been laboring under a delusion. I have been taught that human immortality is one of the fundamental doctrines of Christianity. It lies at the basis of the redemptive work of Christ. Christ died, not to confer upon man immortality—continued existence—but to redeem him from sin because he is immortal. Had man not been immortal, Christ would no more have died for him than for any one of the tribes of the brute creation. This is in accordance with the teachings of the Book all the way through.

The learned editor of the Nashville Advocate will have a huge contract on his hands when he attempts to explain the scriptures in such a way as to make them fit his theory. When the Son of God in one of his most solemn and impassioned discourses said, "These (the wicked) shall go away into everlasting punishment," did he mean "into absolute and final unconsciousness?" According to Dr. Winton, he may have meant this and nothing more. That is, our Savior was simply holding up a scarecrow. Bosh! The devil himself cannot devise a doctrine that will be more prolific of evil results. That is exactly what wicked men want to hear. Teach them that no matter how vile they may be nothing worse awaits them "in the beyond" than "absolute and final unconsciousness," and you open the flood-gates of iniquity; you deluge the world with vice and crime in their most hideous forms. It is true, the Doctor does not deal in dogmatic assertions. He only uses "may be's." But what right has the editor of our great connectional organ to disseminate such doubts? Can not the secular press raise a sufficiency of doubts concerning the great verities of our holy religion? Must the Southern Methodist Church employ a man on a magnificent salary to help the godless press in its pernicious work of breeding skepticism in the very heart of the church? Selah!

PASTOR-EVANGELISTS NEEDED.

Dear Dr. Boswell—I have just been reading the recommendations of "the wise" as to the proper disposition of the Russell Sage millions. The great fundamental need of humanity seems not to have been thought of. It is chiefly the top work, the things that if the greater part of the suggestions were met the mulitudes would never know or feel any help. Each object named is a worthy one, and a thousand worthy objects might have been mentioned.

The suggestions of these "wise" ones indicate very clearly the intellectual current that is dominating too largely our schools and the thought of the country through them. It is but natural that men are prejudiced to some extent in favor of the cause in which they spend their lives. They feel most keenly its needs. There is a fascination about the pursuit of knowledge, especially when one has become an independent thinker, that when caught in its current, hurries him on to the neglect of the more weighty matters of life, the cause of humanity. We would be unwise to disparage research or to discourage one man in his efforts to further the cause of education, but are we not to-day magnifying too much the intellectual at the expense of the evangelical? How many intellectual men, real giants, we have to-day in our church, and yet what a small percentage of real wide-awake evangelical preachers we have! My heart has been pained when listened to strong, forcible, intellectual sermons, but devoid of the spirit that moves men to action. How I have yearned for the consecration of those intellects that they might become burning evangelists to lead men to God! They are men consecrated in a certain sense, but not willing to go into Gethsemane, not "willing to suffer others to save."

Do we not take it too much as a matter of course that all our preachers are evangelical, the plain facts to the contrary, and too ready to excuse ourselves from the intense laboring and suffering of evangelistic work? We have our conferences, our mid-year meetings, our institutes. We emphasize the collections, improvement of church property and the material side of our church work, but how few appeals to our preachers of any kind have we ever heard to be evangelists, to be diligent "in season and out of season" to bring men to Christ. We hear sermons and lectures on questions of theology that are embalmed in the thousands of books, discussed week after week in our periodicals, but how few times do we hear men tell the young preachers how to win men to Christ and to the church. This is the one great thing. We must study its we must talk it, we must preach it, we must pray for it, or "another will take our crown." What do the multitudes care for a systematic, logical discourse on any theme if it is devoid of the life that touches and moves men? Our lives and our manner of preaching will ever be to the largest number the strongest evidence of the truths that we present.

STATEMENT OF METHODIST FAITH.

(THIRD PAPER.)

It has been suggested that in his two articles on the "Statement of Methodist Faith," that appeared recently in the columns of the ADVOCATE, the writer, while setting forth "the matter on its merits," may have failed to "fully understand and represent" the views of a certain prominent advocate of the passage of the resolution adopted by the General Conference. This friendly comment has led to the following consideration of the subject:

We should not be greatly concerned as to whether we have or have not fully represented the views of any particular champion of the measure. Our chief concern should center upon whether or not we have fairly interpeted the thought of the General Conference that adopted the measure.

If the personal views of any member would favor a more radical action than the General Conference has authorized, this is a matter of no more concern than are the views of some other member whose personal opinion would lead him to stop short of the action taken by the Conference. If this more aggressive brother should be, by Episcopal appointment, a member of the commission, he is under the same limitations and subject to the same supervision as that which hedges about the more conservative brother, whose utterances have shown that he is disposed to do less than the resolution demands.

We have said that our gratest concern should be to fairly represent the thought and purpose of the General Conference. It might with justice be contended that the resolution itself is the expression of this thought, and that any statement that sets forth a fair interpretation of the resolution should be accepted as fairly expressive of the intention of the deliberative body whose action it is. In a sense, this is true, and the fact should be recognized that the Conference in general and its members in particular are responsible for all that the resolution contains and nothing more.

But it may be urged that the speeches that were made during the discussion of the question should also be taken into account in determining the views of the Conference. It is willingly conceded that the general tenor—the predominant note—of the arguments that were advanced in favor of the action that was taken should be considered as indicating the thought of the Conference.

Let us, then, first examine the resolution itself.

The action of the Conference consists of a preamble and a resolution. The former expresses the belief "that the different branches of world-wide Methodism, represented in the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, can and should unite in such a statement of our faith as is needed" and that this General Conference should take such steps as are necessary to secure, in the near future, the co-operation of other representative churches in the preparation of a new statement of our faith. The latter requests "the College of Bishops to appoint a commission of five members, one of whom shall be a Bishop, and all of whom shall be members of the next Ecumenical Conference, who shall invite other branches of Methodism to unite with us in the preparation of such a statement of our faith, and such an expression of our doctrinal sytem as is called for in our day," provided that the preparation of this new statement of doctrine shall be undertaken only when there shall have been secured such co-operati n of representative branches of Methodism as shall give to the statement an ecumenical character, and provided that this commission shall report back to this General Conference four years hence the result of their labors.

We have not quoted this action in full, but have, we believe, accurately reproduced every one of its provisions.

We challenge the contradiction of the following propositions:

(1) This commission can do nothing until joined by similar commissions from such a number of representative Methodist bodies as shall give to the result of their labors an ecumenical character.

(2) This joint commission is authorized to substitute nothing, revise nothing, change nothing, but to prepare a statement of the common faith of world-wide Methodism.

(3) The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at some future session or sessions, is to pass upon the results of their labors.

(4) Final action on the report of the commission by the General Conference of 1910 is improbable, in view of the fact that provision is made that the members of the commission shall be members of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference of 1911, and impossible in view of the nature of their work.

So far, then, as the resolution itself is concerned, there can be no question as to the thought and purpose of the General Conference.

There remains for us the task of showing that the general trend of the arguments of the advocates of the movement unmistakably point to the same conclusion.

It is not our purpose to analyze each of these affirmative speeches, nor to assert our agreement with all they contain; but to carefully examine them with the view of determining the central idea of each.

In the first speech of the debate we find two propositions that may be accepted as containing the main thought of the speaker.

"I desire to call attention to the fact, first of all, that these resolutions reaffirm our faith in our existing standards and in our twenty-five articles of religion. Let no man think, therefore, for a moment, that this is an effort to repudiate, in the slightest degree, the faith of our common Methodism, which has been a unit from the beginning. It is a call for a new statement, a new expression of old doctrine."

"We would not alter, in any degree, these twenty-five articles. We would leave them just as they are and just where they are, to serve the intellectual and spiritual needs of any who may continue to get help and inspiration from them."

The second speech in favor of the resolution maintains the need for the specific statement of two or three important doctrines, common to Methodists the world over, that do not find a place in the twenty-five articles of religion.

The third is a carefully prepared paper, whose main proposition is found in these words:

"With other members of this committee I would reaffirm my absolute faith in the twenty-five articles of religion and belief that they contain all that is essential to personal salvation; but, with the committee, I also believe that they should be restated to meet the existing needs of the church at home and abroad."

The next affirmative speech, a strong utterance from a cultured Missouri pastor, urges the necessity for this statement, and is in entire harmony with the speeches preceding it.

This is followed by a speech from a college president, who argues that what is needed is a commission to take the fifty-two sermons of Mr. Wesley and his notes on the New Testament and glean out the essential things, and shape up what are standards of doctrine. It must be a new statement of the old truth.

The next affirmative speech presents an argument in favor of the right and propriety of the formulation "of a more consistent and a more logical statement of the truths we all hold."

One of the most attractive evangelists in Southern Methodism followed in a spirited address, the key-note of which can be gotten from sentences like these:

"As I understood it, no one has proposed a change in the creed. As I understand it, no man on this floor has objected to a single article in our Methodist creed."

"I am not afraid to risk a commission, headed by one of our Bishops and with the brains of this General Conference, to moderately state what we do believe in such a form that we can get at it."

The closing speech, like the opening, was made by the mover of the resolution, Dr. W. F. Tillett. The most careful reading of this speech has failed to discover anything out of harmony with the foregoing.

We have now examined every speech made in favor of the passage of the resolution, except one or two brief statements that do not affect the matter under consideration. If the results of this examination have been justly stated, there can remain no doubt as to the real purpose of the General Conference in adopting the resolution.

This writer has no confidential knowledge of the views of any participant in the debate that preceded the adoption of the resolution; but taking their public utterances to be the honest expressions of their private views, he flatters himself that in proving that he fairly represented the thought of the General Conference, he has also shown that he "fully understands and represents the views" of a certain prominent advocate of the passage of the resolution adopted by the General Conference.

NEW ORLEANS PREACHERS' MEETING.

The New Orleans preachers met in regular session Monday morning, Oct. 22, and the following reports were given:

The Presiding Elder reported that the work of the district was in fine shape; that several new charges would be created and several new churches organized. The financial and spiritual outlook for the district is good.

Brother Warlick is showing himself to be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The district is prospering in his hands.

Carrollton Avenue — Sunday school in fine working order; graded system instituted; teachers taking training study course. Epworth League active and hopeful. The missionary societies studying, working and giving. The church services are well attended. Several additions to the church.

PARKER MEMORIAL.

Notwithstanding peculiar difficulties and discouragements during the year, Parker Memorial expects to have a good report to make at Conference. The burning issue at present is the completion of the new church. The foundation for the whole building has been laid, but only the Sunday school room has been completed. There is urgent need for the finished church, and definite steps are being taken looking to that end. The Sunday school is wide awake and progressive. With an enrollment of over 200, it has a good average attendance. A noticeable feature has been the interest taken by some of the classes in the building of the new church. Some liberal contributions to the building fund have been received from this source. Recently a Sunday school choir has been organized, which meets regularly for practice and which will add to the efficiency of the school. An important feature of the work at Parker Memorial is the song service, which is held on the last Sunday evening in each month. Special attention is given to congregational singing, and, in addition, the capable choir renders some of the best selections of anthems and other forms of sacred music. The interest in these services has been very marked. The women of the church are well organized and active in their efforts to advance its interests. The attendance upon the regular services is good, and, altogether, the outlook is encouraging.

FIRST CHURCH.

The First Church, pastor and people, have labored under great disadvantages this year, being without a house of worship; but the services at the High School are well attended. Quite a number have been added to the Church by profession of faith, and the congregation is perfectly harmonious and full of hope. The handsome First Church will be completed early next spring, and Brother Wray and his people are working and praying that they may go into their new building with a great revival. The Sunday school and missionary societies are in a flourishing condition.

[Reports from the other churches will be given next week.]

Color work already under way for the new volume of The Century includes pictures by Anna Whelan Betts, J. C. Lyendecker, and Sigismond Ivanowski. The latter artist has already painted, for a near issue of The Century, a portrait of Maude Adams in the character of Peter Pan.

OUR DEPENDENCE UPON GOD.

Imagine David standing outside of himself, commanding himself to do this, that or the other thing. That is the attitude of a true disciple, commanding himself to do just what God wants him to do, the mind, the intellect taking their rightful position, and the whole thing thus brought into harmony. Now David was in earnest when he commanded himself in this way: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." David has some idea of the frailty of human nature, of human forgetfulness. How easy it is to forget God's benefits! We do not realize that it is an expression of God's will that we have these comforts of food and clothing; shelter from the storm; all blessings of social life; all blessing that come to us from special answers to prayer; special interferences of his divine providence protecting and keeping us, carrying us along in such abundance. We sometimes live as though we thought we could steer our own course, as if able to furnish ourselves with what we want, able to keep life going within ourselves; yet it is but by the expression of God's will, God's power, God's grace day by day that we live. Every meal that we eat; every blessing that comes to us, comes from God. David commanded himself not to forget what God had done for him; you and I must do the same thing if we would come into the pleasure of God. We must command ourselves not to forget what God has done and is doing for us. He crowns us with loving kindness; loving kindness so great, tender mercy so abundant; we are crowned with them in this life, and in the life to come "he crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies."—From "Life Secrets."

"Moments are little things, yet by their proper use a book may be read, a picture may be painted, a profession may be learned, and a life made useful."—Selected.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Missionaries' Departure.—Our five missionaries, Misses Myers, Dye and Nichols, under appointment to Korea, and Misses Lester and White, appointed to China, spent two happy days in Kansas City en route to Seattle. The Methodists of Kansas City filled to overflowing the Central Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Sunday night, August 26, on the occasion of a farewell service. The church chancel had been decorated with beautiful palms and flowers, and this loving tribute made sweet and joyful their last service before sailing to re-enforce the workers at the front. The pastor, Rev. Paul H. Linn, introduced the five missionaries, each of whom spoke a few moments on various missionary questions. The one disappointment in the service was the absence of Miss Nettie Peacock, Macon, Ga., who was appointed to China, but who was ill at her home. She was remembered in fervent prayers. September 2 the party of five sailed from Seattle for China and Korea. Miss Eldering, who sailed from New York on the 19th of June, and seventeen days later reached Pernambuco, writes the Secretary that she has reached her destination in Brazil—Sao Paulo—in safety and good health.

Programme for week of Thanksgiving and prayer:

First Day—China.
Second Day—Mexico and Cuba.
Third Day—Brazil.
Fourth Day—Korea.
Fifth Day—Indian Mission.

Of course, the programmes in full have been sent to each auxiliary. It is earnestly hoped and expected that each member will interest herself not only to come, but bring some one with her. Let us endeavor to get more of our million church members to join our ranks of missionary colaborers.

Then, if each member of the society would gather up facts of interest about the country under discussion each day, about the work done and the needs; how much we could get out of this week of prayer, aside from what others would be enabled to get!

KOREANS.

In Korea one is not thought fit for church membership unless he is vigorously at work trying to make other Christians. Nearly all the churches in Korea are self-supporting, paying their pastors a good salary. They are noted for their activity and religious work, their generosity and their ability to support their own churches and schools. Most of the missionary work has been done in Northern Korea, but the prospect in the south is just as hopeful as the north.

A STATESMAN'S VIEWPOINT.

Edwin H. Conger, L.L. D., United States Minister to China, 1898-1905, said in an address delivered at the Tri-State Missionary Convention, Kansas City, May 16, 1906: "When the first missionaries were sent out from the United States to foreign lands, had I been on the ground I should have probably advised against the taking of such a step. But time, history, and the progress of the good work have demonstrated that the promoters of the enterprise were right, and I am glad to acknowledge my change of heart, and my cordial and unreserved indorsement of such efforts. It is no longer questioned that mission work was needed wherever on the globe the gospel was unknown. That the results of this work have everywhere been successful and encouraging is a statement approved and attested by every one who has thoroughly and without prejudice investigated the work of any mission field in any part of the world.

"It has been my pleasure and privilege, as well as my official duty, to observe and to familiarize myself with the work of missionaries in various parts of the world, but more especially, more intimately and more exhaustively in the unlimited—as yet scarcely touched—field of the Orient."

Time and space prevent further mention of this splendid address, full of encouragement and interest. I wish everyone would read it in the October number of Go Forward.

MISSIONS TO-DAY.

According to the tables just compiled, the number of Chinese Christian communicants has doubled every seven years since 1842.

In one city where forty-five years ago there was not a single Christian, to-day there are over 8,000 believers. The tale of increase is just commencing in China. Next to China is Korea, with its 10,000 church members and 20,000 candidates, noted for their close and intelligent study of the Bible. At the close of last year there were about 200,000 Christians with about 450 ordained Japanese Christian ministers, and 600 unordained teachers and evangelists.

In Africa some 750,000 native Christians are forming communities, which have won such official recognition that governments encourage missions for the sake of their fruits in citizenship."

A GIFT FOR THE LORD.

Andrew Fuller once asked an old friend for money for foreign missions. The friend said: "I will give you five pounds, Andrew, seeing it is you." Fuller handed it back. "I will take nothing," he said, "seeing it is I." The man saw the point, and replied: "Andrew, you are right. Here are the pounds, seeing it is for the Lord Jesus!"—(Missionary Review.)

PROGRESS IN PORTO RICO.

One Sunday in June a new Methodist Church was dedicated at Mannabo, Porto Rico. After the sermon eleven were baptized and ten received into the Church. Three couples were married, and at the communion service, which followed, seventy communed. In this community three years ago there was nothing but opposition to all missionary effort. Mannabo is now the center of a circuit of thirteen appointments.

OTHER ITEMS.

The new missionaries have reached their destinations in Korea, China and Brazil, and reached their appointments.

More missionaries are needed in Brazil, as Misses Perkinson, Bowman, Stewart and Della Wright were granted a year's furlough.

Bishop Hoss reports our Brazil work in better condition than it was a year ago.

Our schools in Cuba have opened well, notwithstanding the threatened insurrection.

The Perry pictures, put up in a package of forty-eight, can be had by sending fifty cents with your order to Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, Nashville, Tenn.

FAMILY GOVERNMENT.

There is but little family government in these latter days, unless it be when the children have their parents under good control, which, alas, is too often the case in modern times. This is "free America" and the young people seem to be finding it out, and are exercising their freedom to an alarming extent. They are catching the spirit of anarchy, and we are raising a nation of anarchists, who disregarded the laws of home (if, indeed, the modern home has any laws), and who will later on wince under the rules of school, or refuse altogether to attend any institution that undertakes a rigid form of government; and who, in after years, will break the laws of the country when it suits their convenience. Did you know that there is less family government in America than in any other nation under the sun?

We could learn some good lessons from the homes of Chinese, Japanese, Turks, and even from Africans, on the subject of family government. Is it any wonder, then, that this is the most lawless country on the globe? We send missionaries to Japan, but life is ten times as cheap in the United States as in the land of the sinners. In Germany there are about five homicides annually for every million of inhabitants; in England and Wales there are ten or twelve to every million; in the United States there are one hundred and thirty homicides to every million of people; or twenty-six times as much murder in our country to the population as in Germany and about thirteen times as much as in England. In twenty-five years the rate of homicides has become four and one-half times as great; or where in 1881 we killed twenty-five people out of every million, in 1903 one hundred and twelve per million.

Yesterday we slew 25 human beings, to-day we killed 25, and to-morrow it will be repeated, and soon on every day on an average until something is done to check this awful and ever increasing avalanche of crime. Did you ever think that this rapid increase of crime is in the same proportion to the rapid decadence in family government? The wild and mad rush for wealth and pleasure has caused parents to abandon the old-time discipline in the rearing of children. The few who want to have home government are often far lacking of moral courage, overpowered by the lack of it in the homes of their neighbors. They are called cranky, fanatical, "old timey," or puritanical.

Socrates, who lived before Christ's teachings were known to the world, yet who seemed to catch a ray of prevenient light, once said: "Could I climb to the highest place in Athens, I would lift my voice and proclaim: 'Fellow citizens, why do you turn and scrape every stone to get wealth, and take so little care of your children, to whom some day you must relinquish it all?'" Children are not reared these days; they "grow up" like weeds. They are turned loose to do almost as they please. They play on the streets or in the highways or public places by day, and run around where they please to frolics and "parties," "sociables," or "clubs," or young people's meetings by nights.

After a few years of "sweet oblivion" on the part of the parents, they wake up to the fact that they have bad children, who are beyond their control, on the way to the jail, chain-gang, gallows and to hell, and they implore the preacher to pray for them, and wonder why they are so bad. As a last resort they send them to a convent for protection, or to some other kind of school, hoping it may do something for them in some way. Alas many parents wake up to the situation too late. They let their girls dress (or undress) according to the latest fad in the fashion book, let them run after the world because everybody else does; and then wonder why their children are not Christians and lovers of spiritual things, and why they chafe under the restrictions of a well-disciplined school.

Mothers, fathers, let us wake up before it is too late, set our homes in order, have some family government, whether the children like it or not. They will thank you when they are older if you control them rigidly when they are young, and will curse you throughout eternity if you allow thm to have their way and slip down to hell. May God give us a long-needed revival of old-fashion family government, where father and mother have strict rules, and rigidly enforce them; where they keep their children all the time under their supervision, regardless of what their neighbors do. May God give us mothers and fathers, not only pious, but of sufficient backbone, moral courage, and wisdom to control their children. Many pious parents have bad children. It ought not so to be. The Bible says: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Let us believe the Bible. Read prayerfully, study the following passages: Gen. xviii:18-19; 1 Ti. iii:2-5; 1 Sam. i:12-22-25; Phil. vi:1-4; 2 Ti. iii:1-5; Prov. xxii:6; Prov. xiii:24; xix:15; xxii:15; xxiii:13-14; xxix:15-17. After reading these, call the children in, beg their pardon for not being more strict and controlling better, and promise them and God to do your duty by them in the future if it kills you. Have a prayer-meeting about it, and God will bless you. May God help us all to control our children and train them for his glory.

J. W. Beeson.

MRS. BERNICE JONES.

Mrs. Bernice Jones (nee Sheffield), wife of Rev. R. R. Jones, was cut off in the midst of eminent usefulness, and just when it seemed she was needed most.

She was born at Pine Hill, Wilcox County, Alabama, September 18th, 1885. After having improved the excellent advantages afforded in the community where she lived, she entered the Judson at Marion, Alabama, where she graduated with distinction in June, 1904, and took a post-graduate course the next year. On the 24th day of October, 1905, she was happily united in marriage to Rev. R. R. Jones, and at once began life's work in earnest. In the early summer of the present year there appeared evidences of failing health and strength. Everything was done for her that could possibly be done to arrest the disease, but to no avail. In Birmingham, Alabama, on her way home from Colorado Springs, Colo., she quietly and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus in the early morn of September 7, 1906. On the following Sunday the beautiful casket, with its precious dead, was placed in the Baptist Church, Pine Hill, Alabama, where about ten months before she and her now broken-hearted husband stood at Brymen's altar and listened to the words that made them one. A large concourse of friends and relatives attended the funeral obsequies, and followed the remains to their last resting place in the old cemetery of her native town. Alas! How true the saying: "First at the bridal, and then at the tomb."

The deceased made a profession of religion at the age of eleven, and joined the Baptist Church, in which communion she continued a consistent member until her marriage. The first opportunity presenting itself thereafter she voluntarily united with the M. E. Church, South, reconsecrated herself to God and placed herself in the fullest sympathy and harmony with her husband and his great work. On all fitting occasions she conducted prayer meetings, testified publicly of her faith in Jesus and exercised her gifts in public prayer.

Added to this, consecrated zeal and service was the rich endowment of unaffected modesty, which so much adorns womanhood. This was a ruling characteristic of her nature. Hers was a sunny life. Always bright and cheerful, amiable and gentle, she won all hearts and drew them to her. Cultured, refined and consecrated, the end came when she had but just entered the threshold of life's great mission. But she was ready. Her last intelligible utterance was: "I know, and can trust my Savior." To sorrowing friends, weeping relatives and disconsolate husband, let me say: "If the earth has for you one charm less, heaven, at least, has one attraction more."

GOOD-BY!

"Good-by!" 'Tis but a little word,
Yet it breathes a tender prayer;
"May God be with you, dear,
And keep you in his care!"

"Good-by!" Though many leagues apart
Our separate pathways stray,
"God's holy love will keep us near,
And guide us all the way."

"Good-by!" I know no dearer word
To breathe my heart's fond prayer
Than, "God be with you, dear,
And keep you in his care!"

"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty; they shall behold the land that is very far off. And the inhabitants shall not say, I am sick; the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And there shall be no more curse; but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him. And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light; and they shall reign forever and ever."

Very early in the reading the hat was slowly raised, and the big, sunken eyes opened. What sort of girl was this, reading the Bible in a public place to an old woman who had forgotten her spectacles? He listened, and looked. Not a syllable of all the blessed words escaped him. If he had ever known them, it was so long ago that he had forgotten them entirely. He noticed the neat, fine figure and the dainty boot and beautiful face, and wondered whether that was the sort of girl who read the Bible, and was familiar with such things as these.

He was glad there were several verses, and that she read them slowly. He confessed that it was not a bit disagreeable, and then, the voice was so musical.

The old lady sat down on the seat, and was looking straight up into the young woman's face, while two fugitive tears rolled down from the faded blue eyes. And when the sweet voice read the last verse, she murmured:

"Yes, yes, to be sure," and wiped her eyes meditatively. "Them's blessed verses, young woman, an' I'm a-going there;" and she settled back on the old bench with a look of sweet content.

"Yes, indeed," answered Miss Margaret, as she took her seat, and opened her book, "the best of it all is—it's true."

Just here the train whistled, and the depot trio boarded it.

The young man took a chair in the parlor car, and, in a few days, was landed in a far Colorado city, where he failed to find the strength he sought, but where he opened the old, old Book, new to him, and read again and again the blessed words which the sweet voice had brought to him that June day in the dingy little station at Cross Valley.

And Miss Margaret went back to the city to start her journey again next day, never knowing how safely and divinely she had been "kept in all her ways."—Exchange.

TALK IT OVER WITH YOUR WIFE.

There are thousands of families homeless, or living in poverty and wretchedness to-day, who could have been living in comfort, in good homes, if the husbands had confined their business affairs to their wives.

Women are very much better judges of human nature than men. They can detect rascality, deception and insincerity more quickly.

I know business men who would never think of employing a manager or superintendent, or a man for any other important position, or of choosing a partner, without managing in some way to have their wives meet the man, and get a chance to estimate him, to read him. They invite the man whom they are considering for an important position to their home for dinner, or to spend a Sunday, before deciding. They want the advantage of that marvelous feminine instinct which goes so directly and unerringly to its mark.

I have known of several instances where a wife had cautioned her husband against having anything to do with a man with whom he was thinking of going into business, but the husband ignored the wife's opinion as silly, and disregarded her advice to his great sorrow later as the man turned out exactly as the wife had predicted.—Success Magazine.

"GWINE BACK HOME."

As we waited in the L. & N. depot at Nashville for the train, some one began crying, and an excitement was raised among the passengers. A brief investigation proved that it was an old colored man who was giving way to his grief. Three or four people remarked on the strangeness of it, but for some time no one said anything to him. Then a depot policeman came forward, and taking him by the arm, shook him roughly, and said:

"See here, old man, you want to quit that! You are drunk, and if you make any more disturbance I'll lock you up."

"'Deed; but I hain't drunk," replied the old man, as he removed his tear-stained handkerchief. "I'ze lost my ticket an' money, an' dat's what's de matter."

"Bosh! You never had any money to lose! You dry up, or away you go!"

"What's the matter here?" queried a man, as he came forward.

The old man recognized the dialect of the southerner in an instant, and, repressing his emotions with a great effort, he answered:

"Say, Mars Jack, I'ze been robbed."

"My name is White."

"Well, den, Mars White, somebody has done robbed me of ticket an' money."

"Where are you going?"

"Gwine down into Kaintuck, whar I was born an' raised."

"Where's that?"

"Nigh to Bowling Green, sah, an' when de wah dun sot me free I cum up this way. Haint' bin home sence, sah."

"And you had a ticket?"

"Yes, sah, an' ober twenty dollahs in cash. Bin savin' up fer ten y'ars, sah."

"What do you want to go back for?"

"To see de hills an' de fields, de tobacco an' de co'n, Mrs. Preston an' the good old missus. Why, Mars White, I'ze dun bin praying for it fo' twenty y'ars. Sometimes de longin' has cum till I couldn't hardly hold myself."

"It's too bad."

"De ole woman's buried down dar, Mars White—de ole woman an' free chillen. I kin 'member de spot same as if I seed it yisterday. You go out half-way to de fust tobacker-house, an' den you turn to de left, an' go down to de branch whar de wimmin used to wash. Dar's fo' trees on de odder bank, an' right under 'em is what dey all is buried. I kin see it! I kin lead you right to de spot!"

"And what will you do when you get there?" asked the stranger.

"Go up to de big house an' ax Mars Preston to let me lib all de rest ob my days right dar. I'ze ole an' all alone, an' I want to be nigh my dead. Sorter company fur me when my heart aches."

"Where were you robbed?"

"Out doahs dar, I reckon, in de crowd. See? De pocket is all cut out. I'ze dreamed an' pondered—I'ze had dis journey in my mind fur y'ars, an' now I'ze bin robbed, an' can't go."

He fell to crying, and the policeman came forward in an officious manner.

"Stand back, sir!" commanded the stranger.

"Now, gentlemen, you have heard the story. I'm going to help the old man back to die on the old plantation and be buried alongside his dead."

"So am I!" called twenty men in a chorus, and within five minutes we had raised enough to buy him a ticket and leave fifty dollars to spare. And when he realized his good luck, the old snow-haired black fell upon his knees in that crowd, and prayed: "Lord, I'ze been a believer in you all my days, an' now I dun axes you to watch ober yere white folks dat has believed in me an' helped me to go back to de ole home."

And I do believe that nine-tenths of that crowd had tears in their eyes as the gateman called out the train for Louisville.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

IT IS THEN EASY TO BELIEVE.

By Bishop O. P. Fitzgerad.

When the kingdom of God, in righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, comes to our own hearts in its fullness, it is then easy for us to believe it will come in all the world.

Nashville, Tenn.

The grace of God, like electric force, is unseen, but its power is felt and manifested in transforming the life and conduct of all who come under its influence. It makes them sons of God, and angels of mercy to the world.

Rodney Smith, the English evangelist, familiarly known as "Gypsy" Smith, now in New York, in opening his mission, said: "If people would only support their own pastors as they do the missionaries, they would not need an evangelist like himself." The saying is not new by any means, but it cannot be too often repeated and impressed.

The gamblers of Lawton, Oklahoma, came to the conclusion that the law against gambling could not be enforced. But the sheriff was ordered to enforce the law. He appointed special deputies, and in a little while the gambling devices were collected and piled up in the court-house square. The gamblers declined to claim the property, and soon it went up in smoke—ten thousand dollars worth. The good people were jubilant. The gamblers were sad, but wiser.

There was a time when the majority of people looked upon peachers as objects of charity. The preachers themselves were largely to blame for this, for they said little or nothing about being paid for their services. The economy of the Church likewise had something to do in creating the false idea. The word "salary" was not known among us. The preacher simply had an "allowance." What the people handed over to the stewards was a gift. It did not occur to them that they were paying an equivalent for value received. It is no longer so. Preachers are paid for their services, the amount being governed by circumstances, and fixed by the stewards after consulting with the preachers.

KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS.

Keeping God's commandments is the sum of human duty. "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." When the young ruler of whom we read in the scriptures asked Jesus what good thing he must do to inherit eternal life, he was told to keep the commandments—every one of them. It may be that one commandment is "first of all" in the order of importance as well as in the order of time, but the scriptures teach that one who "keeps (acknowledges) the whole law, yet offends in one point, is guilty of all."

The laws of Moses, promulgated for the government of the Jews, were reckoned at six hundred and thirteen: of these, two hundred and forty-eight were positive, and three hundred and sixty-five were negative. To keep so many laws, the Jews said: "was the work of an angel"—a task far beyond human strength. So it is, but when the heart is filled with love to God and man, more than human strength is imparted, and the task is comparatively easy.

Reasons for keeping the commandments are clear and satisfactory. First, because they embrace the rules by which God governs mortal beings in this world, and determines their future in the world to come. The idea of government under the control of a supreme being is universal. Expressive of this idea is religious worship, which is found among all nations. The man who does not acknowledge moral government is an exception. Among the Jews, one who did not acknowledge God was characterized as a fool. The astonishing thing among enlightened people is that so many fail in the matter of devotion. This is not because of outright rejection of God, but because of the spirit of human independence, it may be of defiance; and the feeling, too often indulged, that, notwithstanding a sinful life, God will have mercy, and finally save. Many who cannot deny God "do not like to retain him in their knowledge."

Where God's commandments are known, if not obeyed by all, they act as a restraining force, otherwise there would be not only vastly more irreligion among men, but lawlessness of all kinds. Men are not solely restrained by human law. To suppose so is a great mistake, if the object in view is to make good citizens. It is not in the power of human law to make or unmake good citizens. We have heard it said a thousand times, "You cannot make men good by law." That is a fact. It is equally true that men cannot be made bad by law. If a man violates the law, it is not because the law inspired the violation, but because of the lawless spirit within him.

God governs in this world. He has devised legislation to cover and direct human conduct in every relation of life. We do not say there is special legislation for every individual action. In some cases it is specific, while in others it is general, and men are left as intelligent agents, to apply. This every one who desires to know the will of God can do, and thus always be on the safe side of every important issue. There is literally no need why any sensible man should go astray. "The wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err." By God's laws shall men be tried and their future determined.

Second—We should keep God's commandments because human happiness depends on it. To enhance the welfare of men is the purpose of God in all his dealings. He has never enacted one law that does not tend to that end. This is true as respects both the temporal and civil life of men. Nature works under God's supervision for man's good, giving the early and the later rain to supply his bodily wants. And God ordains governments, and sets up rulers, not for the oppression of men, but for their good. If there are exceptions to this rule, it is because of human imperfection, or because rulers abuse the authority conferred upon them. But even under oppressive laws, there is greater security, and more happiness than in a land where every man is a law unto himself. Infinitely greater is the happiness of a people when its rulers recognize God and enact and execute laws in accord with his will, and in the interest of all the people.

But God's purpose with respect to human happiness reaches its climax in the gospel, based as it is on the divine love, and acting as a corrective of the outer life, and the regenerator and purifier of the soul. In this gospel we have sufficient information concerning the future life to satisfy any reasonable soul. But a great deal more is said about this life—our duty to God and our fellow man. It is perhaps true that most of us are concerned about the future rather than about present relations and duty, and doubtless many persons would be surprised to find out how little is said about the life beyond the grave compared to what is said about the present life. A little study of the question would reveal the reason why. God designs his gospel to make the world better and happier, and there is no better way to bring this to pass than by teaching men their duty to God and each other, and bind them together for the common good. A man's personal experience may make him extremely happy. It may add greatly to his happiness to tell men that he is ready for heaven and going there when he dies. But no Christian can accomplish much by simply telling his experience. He can do much by proclaiming the truths of the gospel, and putting in operation its mighty agencies for good, and living every day so as to impress men that he believes it and is happy in it.

This blessed gospel, with its commands and promises, comes to us to-day as fresh and full as when it first found expression in the words of Jesus. It reveals the will of God, and teaches us how to live and how to bless our fellow man. We know what it is. Happy are we if we obey it—happy here and happy in the hope of heaven. Its demands are inexorable. If disobeyed, we will feel the full weight of its penalties at the judgment. To reject it is to reject Jesus, the headstone of the corner—the foundation of the church, and Jesus himself has said: "Whosoever shall fall upon this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder."

BOOK CONCERN FUNDS.

The General Conference Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose business it is to estimate and apportion to the Annual Conferences "the expenses connected with the General Conference, including the expenses of judicial conferences, of fraternal delegates and disbursements of all kinds ordered by the General Conference that do not relate to the publishing interests," announce that the duty has been performed. The Commissioners say that "Heretofore (prior to the General Conference of 1904) the expenses of judicial conferences, fraternal delegates, various commissions, etc., have been paid out of book concern funds, thus diminishing the dividends to the Annual Conferences. All because convinced of the unconstitutionality and injustice of this use of book concern profits."

Perhaps it is not generally known that the proceeds of our publishing house have likewise been drawn upon to pay the expenses of various commissions ordered by our General Conference. At least, it has been so stated in the Midland Methodist, the editor of which ought to know, as the paper is printed on the spot. It is quite as unconstitutional for us to appropriate the proceeds of our publishing house to the expenses of commissions that have no connection with our publishing interests as for our sister Methodism, the restrictive rule which forbids it being the same in both branches of the church.

Now that attention has been called to the matter, this drain on publishing house profits, be it great or small, will cease, and the General Conference be obliged to devise other methods of paying the expenses of its commissions.

BE WARNED IN TIME.

The voters of Louisiana will be called on at the ensuing election to vote on about half a dozen measures proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State. There is danger when so many propositions are before the people of becoming confused, so as to lead the voter into indifference, or to vote for measures he would disapprove if they were presented one at a time.

One measure to be submitted is a proposition to amend Article No. 230 of the Constitution so as to tax church property, which now is exempt. There is no good reason why church property used exclusively for religious or charitable purposes should be taxed. There is no speculation in church buildings or parsonages, or in schools, and it does not seem consistent to levy a tax on them, while manufacturing institutions, with as many as five employees—designed exclusively for money-making purposes—are allowed to go free. The separation of Church and State is sacredly guarded by our Constitution, and for this reason the Church is not allowed to put her hands into the State treasury. A move of that sort would be resented by the State. Why should the State lay hands on church property and levy tribute? If a church owns real estate, and sells or rents for gain, as is sometimes the case, it would be no wrong to tax it.

We hope our preachers in the State will study this question, and if we are right in the matter, warn brethren against the burden that it is proposed to lay upon them. Do it immediately.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Carroll Varner has taken work in the Holston Conference. His address is Knoxville, Tenn., R. F. D. No. 8. He does not inform us what charge he is serving.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, of the Jena Charge, Louisiana Conference, has favored us with a club of twenty-two new subscribers. Brother Roberts has our hearty thanks.

We are under obligations to Rev. J. H. Smith, Louisville, North Mississippi Conference, for a club of twenty-five subscribers. That is good work. Who will follow next?

Rev. J. A. Randolph, chaplain now in the Philippines with his regiment, expects soon to be in the States. He will probably attend the session of the North Mississippi Conference, of which he is a member.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, of the Trenton Circuit, Mississippi Conference, says: "Conference is drawing nigh, and I am endeavoring to have a good report." Should Brother Nolen fail, we feel sure it will not be his fault.

A good Christian woman, much interested in this ADVOCATE, tells us that she "prays daily for the production and circulation of wholesome literature." We wonder how many brethren and sisters are like-minded?

Brother M. R. Jones, writing from Hurley, Miss., tells us that the storm of September 27 destroyed the tabernacle and some of the tents on the Salem Camp-ground, and for this reason the camp-meeting for this year was not held.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, presiding elder of the Jackson District, is closing the year's work in fine shape. He is expecting to make a good report at Conference. He tells us that Bishop Ward raised $6,000 at Yazoo City on Sunday, the 14, to finish the new church.

Rev. Theo. Copeland reached his new charge in St. Louis and entered upon his work on Sunday, the 14th of October. He received "a great welcome, and is delighted with the appointment." We trust that his labors may be crowned with abundant success. He is at home, 1927 St. Louis Ave., St. Louis.

Rev. J. M. Bradley, transferred to the St. Louis Conference, is comfortably housed in the parsonage at Charleston, Mo., and is at work—well pleased. He is in the midst of a strong Southern Methodist element, which is rapidly growing. And we expect Brother Bradley to keep it growing,—and in the right direction.

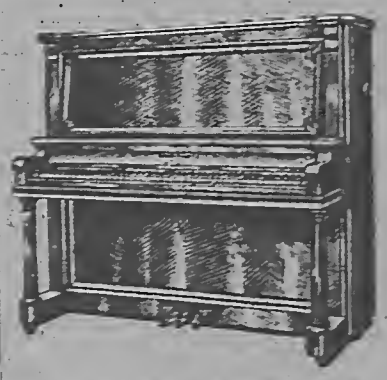
Rev. J. T. Murrah, in a note dated Oct. 18, informs us that Sister Wier, wife of Dr. T. C. Wier, died suddenly at 5 o'clock a. m., in the parsonage at Coldwater, Miss. We deeply sympathize with our brother, one of the "Old Guard," in this hour of sadness. Brother Murrah has promised to give us the particulars later. later.

Our brother, Rev. A. S. Lutz, of Berkely, Cal., rejoices in a completed and paid for church. It cost twenty thousand dollars, and was dedicated by Bishop Atkins on October 14. Brother Lutz says: "Bishop Atkins was at his best. The church is in fine condition, and the dedication was a great victory for our Methodism on the Pacific coast. Since Brother Lutz's pastorate in Berkely, about eighteen months, the San Francisco Examiner says: "The membership and finances have doubled, and every claim has been met."

Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Columbia, Miss, is now engaged in revival sevices with promise of great success. He writes under date of October 20: "Large congregations all the week. House packed last night. A number have asked for prayer. Merchants agreed among themselves to close in time for services each night. Baptists have called in their services for Sunday. Am closing my third year here, and much appreciate this evidence of the loyalty of the people to the pastors. It was their wish that I should do the preaching." A telegram from Brother Clifford, sent us on Monday morning, says of the Sunday evening service: "Main auditorium and Sunday school room packed-full last night. Many asked for prayer. Several accessions, and more to follow."

The death of Col. David Zable removes from our city Methodism an active and prominent official of Rayne Memorial Church. He was highly esteemed among his fellow citizens as patriotic, and among his old comrades of the war as a brave soldier. As a Christian he loved his church, and faithfully served the Master. He was born in New Orleans in 1832, and died October 21, 1906. Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, who received the Colonel into the Church, was called by telegraph to conduct the funeral services. We presume he will give us a suitable memoir.

We had the pleasure last week of a visit from Dr. W. F. McMurray, Church Extension Secretary, who was en route to Texas. He spent one day in the city investigating the needs of our Church in the matter of houses of worship. The Doctor is an intensely practical man, and is giving thorough attention to the details of his office.



Avoid alum and alum phosphate baking powders. The label law requires that all the ingredients be named on the labels. Look out for the alum compounds.

NOTE.—Safety lies in buying only Royal Baking Powder, which is a pure, cream of tartar baking powder, and the best that can be made.

AN APPRECIATION AND SUGGESTION.

Mr. Editor: I wish to express my approval and thanks through the columns of your paper to Mr. I. C. Enochs, of Jackson, Mississippi, for his substantial contribution to the endowment fund of Millsaps College. Every Methodist and friend of Christian education in the State ought to feel grateful to such liberal givers. I would like also to suggest that some big-souled Methodists, with money, in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, give a like sum to the endowment fund of Grenada College. A friendly rivalry among rich church members in this Conference as to who will give the most and the quickest will not be looked upon with disapproval by the Trustees of Grenada College. The College needs your contributions, for education must ever be the strong right arm of Methodism. Give, brethren, of your abundance.

COLDWATER CHARGE.

This charge comprises two churches, one at Coldwater, on the Illinois Central Railroad, and one at Love Station on the same railroad. At Love Station we began protracted services on Sunday night, Aug. 26, and closed Sunday night, Sept. 2. There was a good meeting in its visiole and general results. Thirteen members were added to the church; nine by profession of faith and four by certificate. We are indehted to Brother W. H. Echolls, of Cockrum Circuit, and Brother J. B. Randolph, of Hernando, for valuahle help during the meetings. Both these brethren rendered earnest and faithful service. Our bouse of worship at this place, by recent repairs and painting outside and witbin, with carpeted aisles and cbancel, presents a bright and attractive appearance. Our good sisters here bore their part and wrought with the hrethren in rendering their church comfortable and inviting.

At Coldwater we have a solid and loyal membership. Our house of worship is in excellent condition; our congregations are good; we are not troubled witn card playing and dancing, and our young people are orderly and of good report.

Our meeting at Coldwater began Wednesday night, Sept. 5, with preaching by Brother J. T. Murrah, of Senatohia. Our people were delighted and edified by his preaching. He remained with us through Friday night. Brother W. W. Mitchell, of Sardis, came to us the Sunday night following and was with us at each service save one (when he was called home to attend a burial service) till Saturday morning following. He preached to attentive and serious congregations, strong, clear sermons, tending to awaken serious thought and conviction. Brother W. G. Mosier, of Arkabutla, was with us part of the time and preached an impressive and edifying sermon. Three persons were added to our membership during the meeting.

An earnest effort will be made to hring up the assessments ordered by the Conference: the pastor's salary, in excess over several years past, will be looked after by the stewards, and we hope to make a full report at the Annual Conference. We wish to see Coldwater Charge assume her wonted place as one of the gilt-edge appointments of Sardis District.

PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I take pleasure in reporting that our work at Purvis continues to prosper. Our congregations are gratifyingly large most of the time, and the revival spirit abides among us. It is not an unusual thing for penitents to come forward for prayer at the regular sevices, and new members are heing received from time to time. Up to date we have had twenty-eight accessions to the church. There has been only one death among our membership during the year, and very little serious sickness. For these signal evidences of God's goodness to us we ought to he deeply grateful.

The recent storm did immense damage to the crops and to the timber interests throughout this portion of the State. From fifteen to fifty per cent of the best pine timber has been blown down, and the cotton crop bas been injured twenty-five per cent or more. In some instances it is almost a total loss. A number of our members sustained heavy loss by reason of the devastation wrought hy the hurricane a few weeks ago, but, notwithstanding the magnitude of the calamity, they are still hopeful and of good courage.

Several weeks ago the pastor appointed two popular young ladies, namely, Misses Edwina Clark and Edna Jordan, to solicit contributions for our Orphans' Home, at Jackson. Thanks to their diligence and the generosity of the people, they succeeded in raising for that most worthy cause the sum of $109.60. Our assessments are all up in full. Fifty dollars excess has been paid on our assessment for foreign missions, and applied as a "special" to Granberry College. In addition to this, one of our laymen, Brother James Hand, is supporting a missionary in China.

The parsonage has recently been handsomely furnished for the pastor and his bride by the generous-hearted people of Purvis, and they are now comfortably domiciled in their new home. The Lord has been very gracious to us in many ways.

All of our official members, I am glad to say, are subscribers to the Advocate Yours fraternally,

A MEMOIR.

Mr. J. P. FEATHERSTUN was born near Somerville, Tenn., in 1831. The exact date is not known. In his early young manhood he moved to near Memphis. There he was converted to God and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was married near Holly Springs, Miss., Oct. 18, 1854, to Miss M. E. McCulley. The wife and companion of his labors survives him. No children were born to them. Shortly after their marriage they moved to near Senatobia, Miss. Here he died Sept. 1, 1906, in his seventy-fifth year.

The subject of these brief chronicles was a most remarkable man. His fellows will not soon, if ever, see another like him. His character was like a rugged mountain boulder with some sides polished to unusual beauty, the others left in nature's rough or with the mason's uneven chiselings.

By his industry, good judgment and frugality he accumulated quite a competency. His fortune would have been much larger had he not given with a liberal hand. No man can ever say that one dime was illy gotten; or that he used it to oppress a single soul. His money was his servant; he never served it; and he used it only for noble purposes: for the cause of Christ his Lord and for the good of his fellow-man. He lived economically that he might give the more to his church, to the poor and to help educate struggling young men. After having given most liberally to the erection of a new church in his home town he gave the church a handsome parsonage. His private beneficences were many, some of them large; but they were never known save to those closest to him. Many preachers on poor charges, destitute widows and unfortunate men have been the beneficiaries of his bounty. The world will never know how many homes were blessed by his thoughtful and unostentatious liberality.

He helped to educate nine young men. Two of them were from parsonage homes, seven were preparing for the ministry. He had a perfect passion for helping young men. His love for them was unbounded. He often said that his investment in them gave him greater satisfaction than any other investment he had made.

He was a good man, of deep piety. The Word of God was his daily companion. No day passed without his having read some portions of its sacred pages. He read it through at least once a year for fifty-two years immediately after his marriage he erected in his home a family altar. Until broken health forced him from it he daily ministered before God at this shrine. It was a place of Christ's epiphany to his soul. He loved the house of God, and sore was the trial to him when he was away from this sanctuary. He served the church as an officer in it for nearly fifty years.

A man of intense convictions, his likes and dislikes were strong. He was not without his prejudices. The intensity of his nature was at once his strength and his weakness. But human, he was not without faults. Yet the grace of God did all for him in overcoming them, and in sanctifying his life. In him was a demonstration of the triumph of grace over nature.

Thirteen years ago he laid aside his business to give himself a period of rest. In these last years he gave much time to Christian work. He often went to neighboring churches for the revival seasons. He loved the old ways and the simple life. He never became reconciled to some modern methods; he simply endured them. Congregational singing, plain preaching, experience meetings, the mourners' bench, these were his delight. He was mighty in prayer. One of the greatest prayers I ever heard came from his soul in agony for a loved one.

His long period of sickness deprived him of many of the means of grace in the house of God, but in his home he talked much of God's goodness. It was a benediction to be with him and to hear him talk. He longed, without murmuring, for his release and to be at rest. God gave him a triumphant death; gloriously he launched out into eternity. His spirit went home to its mansion prepared; his body was buried in old Bethesda Cemetery, at Senatobia, to await the resurrection morn. There it shall rest in its windowless palace of death till God shall call it forth.

Though dead, he shall yet live in the lives of those he loved and helped. The monument he reared to himself is in living characters formed for service to God and his fellow-man. Through them will be sent to other generations the large, unselfish love of this servant of God.

"His rest shall be glorious."

Most makers of lamp-chimneys don't mark their wares—possibly they are ashamed to.

If I didn't make as good chimneys as I do, I wouldn't mark mine either.

I mark mine "MACBETH"—my own name—because I am proud to be known by them.

My Index—it's free—tells other reasons why my lamp-chimneys are marked and why I am proud to put my name on them. May I send it to you?

"Buy Land, Buy Land,
And Never Let Go a Handful of Sand."
---Joaquin Miller.

Now that's alright so far as it goes, but he might have gone further and said, "Buy land in and adjoining the City of New Orleans."

Also, had he been familiar with all the facts in the case he should, and no doubt would have said, "and the best land in and near New Orleans that may be bought reasonably is that owned by the Verret Canal & Land Company, Ltd."

Now you think from the above that we hold a rather high opinion of our land, or possibly you believe that this is the usual advertisement talk. Well, it is the former, and we not only believe that we have the best lands, price considered, near and in the city, but we believe that we can convince you of that fact if you will allow us to send you our book, "Suburban Property." Whether you are skeptical or not send for the book; it's free.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

Golden Text: "This do in remembrance of me."—1st Cor. xi, 24.

The most solemn and most impressive part of our worship is the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's supper. The impression of sadness is first in the mind of childhood. Well do we remember the old-time quarterly meeting of the Methodists, and the sacramental meeting of sister churches. They began on Friday night, preparatory services being held at stated times until Sunday morning. It was a sweetly sacred time. A deep, heart-felt piety pervaded the church and the home. A spirit of prayer was upon all. The coming of Sunday morning found all ready and longing for the sacred service. Father and mother lead, and the younger ones followed, and by families the bread and wine was partaken, and souls were nourished with that spiritual bread that came down from heaven. The solemnity of it all as it comes back to-day tells us to "forsake not the assembling of ourselves together." In this spirit let us hearken to the loving Master as he instituted the first memorial of his death and atonement, "for Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us."

The time was the feast of the Passover, and every Jew felt it his duty to take part in a service commemorating the deliverance from Egyptian bondage. They had been taught how Christ had provided the plan of preparation for the feast. The lamb was to be slain, the blood sprinkled on the posts of the door; they were to eat in haste, staff in hand and shoes on their feet. eThse forms had been followed through all the ages until now; the time had come when they were to be shown that the slain lamb was a type of the crucified Christ. All of the ancient ceremonies were henceforth to be seen in the light of the cross. This law or ordinance was about to be nailed to the cross, and Jesus was preparing to give a sacrament in its stead, so he sent two of his disciples into the city to prepare for his coming. In giving them directions he spoke of "such a man" as if he had had a conversation with the man at some time previous, not face to face perhaps, but in a way that is only possible to God. Perhaps in the same manner as when the owner of the ass on which he triumphantly entered the city, gave the animal to the disciples without a word of objection, we should not think this a wonder or even remarkable, for "all power in heaven and in earth," was given to Jesus. We should not be inclined to account for it in any other way than "it is the Lord's doings, and marvelous in our eyes," and it is marvelous only because it is the Lord's.

The disciples had found the man, and the large upper room furnished and prepared, and had made all ready. Jesus came with the twelve and sat down to eat. Now, we can call to mind Da Vinci's great painting that the most of us have so often seen. Many times have we tried to name the different apostles in the picture, aided by our knowledge of their characters. The passover feast began, and very soon the Lord told the twelve that one among them would betray him. They all began to be very sorrowful, and to ask the Lord, one by one, "Is it I?" Even Judas asked the Master, "Is it I?" John's account says that Peter told John to ask Jesus who it was, and the Lord made it known by dipping a sop and handing it to the guilty man. Soon after this, Judas arose and on his way to the door Jesus called after him, "What thou doest, do quickly." Then the account reads that Judas went out and it was night. Are we to learn that man can be so hardened in sin that he can eat the broken body and drink the blood of our crucified Lord while having in mind such teaching?

Taking the bread, Jesus said: "Take, eat; this is my body." Did they remember how Jesus had said: "I am the living bread that came down from heaven, which if a man eat he shall never hunger?" As bread is the life of the body in that it sustains and strengthens it, so Christ is the life of the soul, sustaining and strengthening it. He then took the cup and told them, "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." "Take it and divide it among yourselves." When was the time that all this was not fresh in our minds? When did we first learn its meaning? It was an object lesson of the sweetest and most tender kind, because we have seen it since early childhood, and mother being among them that received the broken body and shed blood, we will always remember it as the most sacred and holy part of our worship. When we kneel meekly on our knees, and listen to the solemn words of the minister, it seems that Jesus is near—yes, and mother, too.

Many have been kept away from the communion by a wrong application of St. Paul's words in 1st Cor. xi, 29, concerning eating and drinking unworthily. He says: "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread." He was writing to a people who had been in the habit of making an unholy meal of the emblems, which brought the sacred service into ill-repute. It is well that we should all examine ourselves, and spend a season in meditation and prayer. Not that that will make us more worthy. We are made fit to be partakers by our faith in Christ; in the same manner we have righteousness, and by faith we are saved.

Let us never stay away from the communion; rather let us be eager and anxious to mingle with God's children on that sacred day, for we get strength of soul, and we feel that we are numbered with them that desire to "show forth the Lord's death till he come." What a wretched and lonely feeling there is in the heart as we see others going forward and taking the Lord's supper, and we kept away of our own will. Do not stay away, O wilful child of God, for it is Jesus that bids you come. Remember that "if we confess our sins, he is just and faithful to forgive our sins." You punish your own selves when you stay away from the table of the Lord. It is Jesus' table, Jesus' body and blood, and you have taken him for your Savior, and you, as his child, have a right to come, truly repenting of your sins, meekly kneeling on your knees.

AN INTERESTING MARRIAGE.

To-day, at 1 o'clock p.m., we celebrated the rites of matrimony between Mr. William E. Thrash, of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss May Louise Joyner, of Moss Point, Miss.

Miss Joyner is the youngest of nine daughters of Brother and Sister Joyner, and the last one to be married. She has only one brother, the Rev. N. E. Joyner, of the Louisiana Conference, who for a number of years was a missionary in Mexico. He is now stationed at Alexandria, La. Their father and mother are honored and worthy members of the Moss Point Methodist Church, and have recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

YAZOO CITY, MISS.

Yesterday, the 14th, was a great day for Methodism in this city. Bishop Ward occupied our pulpit morning and evening, and greatly edified and strengthened our people with two strong and convincing sermons.

At the close of the morning service he raised $5,450, which we hope to make $6,000 within the next few days. This will complete our splendid $25,000 house of worship without debt, save the $2000 due the Board of Church Extension. We have paid for our parsonage, which cost us $3,300, and now we are prepared to complete the church, since the great fire two years ago.

As this is my fourth year here, my successor will have to seat the church and put in the pipe organ, when we will have completed a handsome and well-adapted property free from debt.

We all feel our indebtedness to Bishop Ward for the splendid and helpful service rendered us, and he will ever receive the kindliest welcome from our people in Yazoo City.

Our new Bishop seems intent on grasping the peculiar situation in Louisiana, preparatory to a judicious adjustment of the men to the works. "So mote it be."

"Increase Your Yields" of Grain.

As 20 bushels of wheat takes from the soil approximately 14 pounds of phosphoric acid, 35 pounds of nitrogen and 18 pounds of potash—the necessity of using fertilizers is very plain. Green and stable manure can be sometimes profitably used on wheat, but then they are usually poorly balanced, and on some soils, those very rich in nitrogen, for example, would be positively injurious.

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers,

on the contrary, can be, and are, adapted in composition and quantity of ingredients to any soil or crop. Those most used, perhaps, contain 8 or 10 per cent. phosphoric acid, 2 or 3 per cent. nitrogen and 2 to 4 per cent. potash. Particularly on some clay soils, these furnish a well-balanced ration for the wheat. On some clay and most sandy lands, however, fully twice this percentage of potash should be used, while many soils need nitrogen. Buy only the high-grade VIRGINIA-CAROLINA FERTILIZERS, and you cannot make a mistake if your seed selection and cultivation are proper. They will "increase your yields per acre."

Get Well Acquainted With The Mutual Life

¶ It has been in existence sixty-three years. Public confidence and patronage have made it and kept it the largest and staunchest Life Insurance company in the world. It is owned by its policyholders. It protects thousands, but there are many others who should have the same protection. How about you? People who are so thoughtful and kind as to wish to provide as they can to-day for what will happen some other day, when they are taken from those they love and support, should get acquainted with.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company

Let them read its history; analyze its statements; examine its investments; consult its agents. They will find a reason for its strength and stability and a reason for their confidence and patronage.

¶ The new management of the Mutual Life has been in control for nine months. Its report for the first six months will be mailed to anyone on request, or may be had of its agents. It tells what has been accomplished in conformity with the new Insurance Laws; shows the vast reductions, and indicates the unusual advantages yet to reach its policyholders. Its plain figures, given in a plain way, will convince any fair-minded person that The Mutual Life to-day justifies the good opinion of Bishop Chas. C. McCabe, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who recently said:—

"After long and careful consideration, I am thoroughly satisfied that the present administrations of both companies (the New York Life and the Mutual Life) are now effecting great economies and reforms, and that these institutions, purged as by fire, are now in a position to afford the protection of life insurance in better form, and on better terms, than any known in the past."

It justifies also the good opinion of Mr. James C. Colgate and his associates, who, having policies to the amount of $5,000,000 in the Mutual Life, recently "resolved that the present executive officers and trustees are, in the opinion of the Policyholders' Protective Association of the Mutual Life, faithful to its interests, and that their administration of its affairs has been and is efficient, economical and beneficial to the policyholders."

MARY ELIZABETH CUNNINGHAM was born in Morgan County Ga., June 2, 1837; moved to Alabama when quite small and then to Mississippi when still a child; married Rev. J. T. Cunningham Feb. 14, 1860, and passed to her reward Sunday morning, Sept. 23, 1906. She was converted in childhood and joined the Baptist Church; upon her marriage to Brother Cunningham she joined the Methodist Church, and never did a church have a more loyal member or a Methodist itinerant preacher a more faithful and loving wife. Eight children, all grown, live to testify to her mother-love and thoughtfulness. Two of her five sons are preachers, Hal T Cunningham, of the East Texas Conference, and James E. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference. One daughter is the wife of Rev. Mr. Hobson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Water Valley. Sister Cunningham was one of the best women I ever saw; gentle in nature, winning in manner, cheerful in disposition forgetful always of self, faithful to her duty, she will always appear to me as one of God's best. Faithfulness aptly describes her whole life. Her husband is heart-broken, her children sad; but they do not mourn as those who have no hope. We shall see her again. T. W. LEWIS.

Sister MABEL McCARTY was born in Lincoln Parish, La., Jan 18, 1883, and died July 2, 1906. At the age of 12 she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Kelly, La., and until the day of her death she was ever found faithful. A loyal, consistent Christian; it was her pleasure to serve her church and her Master in every possible way. On Jan 15, 1901, her mother died, leaving to her care her younger brother. By her own life she was able to influence him for good. On Aug. 18, 1904, she was married to Mr. E. D. McCarty, of Gilbert, La., where they lived until Jan. 18, 1905, when they removed to Harperville, Miss., where they resided for one year, then returned to Gilbert; here they lived until God saw fit to call her home. A life that had been consecrated to God in childhood, had served him in youth, was thus ended in early womanhood. It was not in great achievements that she won her crown, but in the little things of life which, after all, constitute true greatness; "the same shall be greatest in the kingdom of heaven." She leaves her husband, father and three brothers to mourn her loss. Yet they mourn not as those who mourn without hope. Hosts of friends still love her memory and cherish tokens of her handiwork; their loss has been her gain. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

J. B. FULTON, P. C.

Miss ANNIE BESSIE S. DEAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Dean, was born April 10, 1890, in Grant Parish, La., and died at the Shreveport Sanitarium, Oct. 10th, 1906. Up to Friday, Oct. 5, as far as known, she was in perfect health, during the afternoon of that day, though she held her place in her class at school, she began to complain. On reaching home, some two miles distant from the High School, where she was a student, she was found to be suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis, requiring an immediate operation. For this purpose, accompanied by a sister, and the family physician, she was taken to the sanitarium, where the operation was performed, from the effects of which she never rallied. She was universally loved by all who knew her sweet, gentle character. Her ambition along literary lines, her devotion to God and constant communion with him by prayer, were most unusual for a girl of 16 years. The esteem of her worth by the people who knew her was voiced in the presence of hundreds who followed her remains to the grave. Such a combination of ambition, energy, and devotion I have not seen in one so young. Let us trust that her noble aspirations have been realized. J. A. PARKER.

Little MARY CLARA, daughter of Brother and Sister Zach Nichols, and granddaughter of Brother and Sister C. E. Foust, was born Jan. 5, 1902, and went home to Jesus Aug. 11, 1906. For little more than four years she blessed and brightened her earthly home, was the sunshine of parents and grand parents; her sufferings were short, from Thursday until Tuesday, congestion soon doing its work. It was a sore trial to the hearts that loved her so fondly. Her sweet sunshiny disposition made her many friends and the more endeared her to her own. Her kind, affectionate and obedient disposition betoken for her a life of usefulness. But now that she is taken by him that said "suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven," there is less of sunshine on earth, but more in heaven. We would bow with sorrowful, trusting hearts and say "thy will be done." Her baby prattle and glee will no more ring through the hallways of her earthly home, but in the "mansion prepared" over there. Good-by, little Mary Clara, until we meet in the happy beyond.

POPLARVILLE, MISS.

Mr. Editor: We are at last domiciled in our new parsonage at Poplarville. It is a house of which the church may well be proud. A two-story building, with seven rooms and all finished. Last June, when our church was burned, the way looked rather dark before us, but our little flock began to devise plans by which we could build a parsonage and also rebuild the church in more substantial form.

I assured them of help from friends and brethren of our Conference when the people knew of the situation; hence, we proceeded to inform them and appeal for help. Thus far our responses have been few — some of the preachers have written me: "We read your appeal to the congregation last Sunday, and enclose you the result." We thank these brethren, and wish others had done the same.

We have our plans, etc., for a brick building and expected to begin work before this, but the great loss sustained by some of our people in the recent storm has stopped us for a little while. I have yet to receive an appeal where a church has been burned to which I have not given my people an opportunity to do something. I have never had a people that would not respond.

By the help of the Lord and my brethren, we will come up out of the ashes in a few months. This is the first year Poplarville has tried to stand alone. Hence, with the loss sustained it has been hard for us.

But our assessments will all be paid. We have just organized a W. H. M. Society with a good membership and we are looking toward the future with a bright face and strong faith. We are not expecting to move, hence will not ask for the next Conference. Bishop Ward is going around us. I suppose looking after those places that want new preachers. Yours fraternally,

D. P. BRADFORD.

What Dr. Williams Says About Consumption.

Dr. Williams, the well-known consumption specialist and Medical Director of the New Orleans Depuratorium Lung Cure, says: "Nothing but a direct application of healing vaporized medicines, antiseptics and germicides to the very seat of the disease, and these medicines can be applied only by inhaling them in a vaporized state. The lungs constitute an air cavity and can be reached medicinally only by medicated air. I will positively assert that bronchial or catarrhal consumption can be cured by these healing oily vapors that reach the seat of the disease, laden as they are with the Williams germ-killing 'Osoline.'

After many years of careful observation and examining the sputum of eleven hundred cases, I am convinced that fully three-fifths of all the deaths charged to consumption are really catarrhal bronchitis associated with dyspepsia, which is brought on from severe dosing of the stomach. My treatment goes directly to the lungs and consequently does not disarrange the stomach or impair the digestion. The treatment can be taken at home if desired."

Dr. Williams' invention of the wonderful Depurator Inhalation has made his name known all over the land. By means of this great invention the germ-destroying Williams' "Osoline" and healing antiseptic oils are combined and vaporized so that the curative vapors may be easily breathed into the lungs and air pipes, spreading these healing oils over the sore spots and inflamed tissues of patients suffering from consumption and asthma. By this means the germs are killed, the sore spots are healed and the diseased coatings of the lungs and air tubes are loosened and thrown off. The cause of the disease being removed, the patient steadily improves until a complete cure is effected.

The New Orleans office of the Williams Lung cure, 1331 St. Charles avenue, cor. Thalia, is under the immediate supervision of Dr. Williams, who visits it frequently to consult with his specialist physicians in charge of the New Orleans Depuratorium and Electro-Therapeutic Institute. Call and receive free examination, advice and free trial treatment, or write for pamphlet describing the Williams Home Treatment.

See the Southwest.

It is sometimes well to let well enough alone, but don't gauge your results by your neighbor's. The fact that you are doing as well as the other fellow doesn't spell anything. You may have it in you to do ten times as well. Why depend on his business compass if your own points Southwest?

Take time to investigate the proposition. You will find that "investigation" and "investment"—in-vestment of time and energy as well as money—are closely allied terms in that great country.

Glances at the World.

Another furious tornado last week swept through some of the South American countries, and passed over the waters touching the Florida coasts. It was most destructive—destroying towns and country homes, and killing people by the score. It was equally as destructive to shipping interests, many vessels going to pieces before the gale. Some tales of distress are peculiarly affecting. One planter living on an island was away from home. On going back he found his home swept away, and his wife and two children missing. He could find no trace of them anywhere. They were doubtless blown out to sea and drowned. This was the second or third storm experienced this season, and the most destructive of the three, save at Mobile and Pensacola.

Mrs. Varina Howell Davis, widow of Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy, died of pneumonia after a week's illness in New York last week. Mrs. Davis was a brilliant woman, of a wealthy family, and occupied a high social position all her life. As the wife of the first and only president of the late Confederate States, she was "the first lady of the land," and justly held in high esteem in administration and social circles. During the years immediately following the war, and as long as Mr. Davis lived, her home was near Biloxi, Miss. After the death of Mr. Davis, on account of her impaired health, she went to New York City, where she spent the remainder of her life. She was buried in Richmond, Va., beside her husband.

According to a dispatch received from Tokio by the New York Sun, the Japanese are greatly agitated over the exclusion of Japanese children from the white public schools of California. It appears that the California authorities, in drawing the color line, decided that Japanese children must take their places in the schools set apart for colored people—negroes and Chinese. This action incensed the Japanese in San Francisco, and it was not long until the news reached Japan, and the dispatch says the "child-loving nation was cut to the quick." The situation, it is reported, is grave. Mass meetings are being held and the whole of the United States comes in for denunciation. Government authorities are trying to keep the people quiet. The matter may lead to an unpleasant and sharp correspondence, but nothing beyond that will happen.

President Roosevelt has had in mind for months past a visit to Panama. He will make the visit next month. His purpose is to view the canal route, and to secure, if possible, definite and personal information concerning the problems to be met and solved in the construction of the great waterway. Mr. Roosevelt is a practical man—quick to see things—and if any man can within a few days find out the real difficulties in the way, and how to overcome them, he can. If he discovers that the slowness with which the work moves is due to the management of those in charge, we may expect him at once to make changes. If those in charge are doing the right thing, and doing their best, his visit will encourage them, and "give a new impetus to the work." The whole country is interested in the canal—especially the people of the South, and they would be glad to see the work pushed as rapidly as possible.

The courts of the country are making considerable headway in the prosecution of trusts which have conspired to restrain trade, and the railroads for violating the law against rebates, etc. A few days since in Ohio the Standard Oil Company was found guilty of conspiracy and the penalty as fixed by law was assessed. In New York, the New York Central and Hudson Railroad Company was convicted of giving rebates to the American Sugar Refining Co. and fined $108,000. The judge before whom the case was tried, in passing sentence, used some wholesome language. It was severe, but just. He said: "Such a violation of law is much more heinous than the ordinary, common, vulgar crimes usually brought before the criminal courts. Those are crimes of sudden passion and temptation. These crimes we are dealing with were committed by men of education, business experience and standing in the community, and as such they should be expected to set an example of obedience to the law. This corporation received large and valuable public privileges. It was under the highest obligations to treat all citizens alike. Under these circumstances and for an offense so clearly flagrant, it is the duty of the court to impose a penalty commensurate with the gravity of the offense." Men who have the proper appreciation of law, and who know the influence of those of great wealth and intelligence, are obliged to concede the force and justness of the judge's remarks.

Many English editors have said something in regard to the Atlanta riot, and almost to a man display utter ignorance of conditions as they exist in the South. And for the frequent lynchings, some of them seem to blame the general government, which they suppose could stop the work if it would. That it does not, the Daily News says, is "an utterly humiliating confession of political weakness." The News, however, comes near the truth when it says, "apart from the race feeling (which it supposes is universal and dominant in the South), one of the chief causes of lynching epidemics in the United States is the utter uncertainty of American criminal law. Punishment does not come swiftly, as it should, to impress the imagination and deter other offenders." There is truth in this statement. But least of all does the Saturday Review understand the situation. Presuming that hatred of the negroes is general in the South, it says: "If a policy of extermination or return to slavery were practicable, it is certain the whites would support it almost to a man." The Southern man who hates the negro simply because he is a negro is an exception. And, if there is a Southern man who would return the negro to slavery we have never heard of him. Certainly we do not know him. The Chronicle says: "So long as the negroes are dependent on the more powerful race, so long as they are forcibly excluded from all the privileges of self-government, it is the simple duty of the States to protect its black subjects equally with the rest." That is exactly what the States propose to do. The humblest colored man, who attends to his business, and keeps himself free from crime, not only receives the protection of the law, but he has the respect of all the people.

He must be a remarkable evangelist indeed of whom it can be said, "No slang ever passes his lips." Yet this is said of a popular and successful revivalist, who, at the time of his conversion, "could not read or write." It is said that "he practices the utmost care in public and private speech," and has acquired a style "unusually beautiful, dignified and forcible," showing that it is not necessary to stoop to the level of the slum-dwellers to attract and hold the attention of men.

REV. SAM P. JONES.

BISHOP GALLOWAY'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL, CENTREVILLE, GA.

"I am here not to eulogize the distinguished dead, but to lay a flower upon the grave of a personal friend, and pay grateful tribute to the memory of a most remarkable man. I have come to weep with those that weep. A great state has lost its best-known citizen, a great church its most popular and powerful preacher, the nation its most noted evangelist and the cause of public morality one of its mightiest and most fearless champions. In the strength of his years when his sun was at the zenith, before his powers had begun to fail or his voice to lose its charm, this great man in Israel has been summoned to his rich reward.

"What strange paradoxes were wrapped up in that masterful man and his brilliant career! He was a genius without eccentricity, a great personality without peculiarities, unique without being erratic, a wonderful orator without the graces of oratory, a marvelous preacher with little concern for the rules of homoletics, and a philosopher without the aid of a pale guide and a student's lamp.

"He had all the gifts, without the cultivation, of a great philosopher. What he lacked in learning, was made up in the keen penetration and clear discernment of a student of human nature. If limited in his familiarity with history, he knew the forces that make history and determine destiny.

"Had his knowledge of books equaled his acquaintance with men—had he known the history of the human heart as well as he knew its great motives and subtle passions — he might have commanded a much larger place in the story of his times.

"He had many rare qualities and attractive virtues, but one great gift—the gift of commanding utterance. And upon that his fame will rest and his influence abide. His pre-eminence was as a preacher. God anointed him to be a prophet in Israel, and clothed him with a power seen but a few times in a generation. He was not called to wield a pen, but to be a voice crying in the wilderness. He might have succeeded at the bar, but his throne was the pulpit, and his mission the redemption of his fellow-men.

"And what a master of assemblies he was! Measured by the multiplied thousands that crowded again and again to hear him, and by the dead consciences he awakened, and the penitential tears he started, and the high purposes he inspired, and the reforms he instituted, and the converted souls he led to his Lord, he must go down in history as one of the most conspicuous figures of the last half-century.

SPRINGS OF HIS POWER.

"Were I called upon to state in a few words the qualities that give greatness to this master of assemblies, and enabled him to sway with the wand of a magician the vast thousands that crowded to his ministry, I should say they were his philosophical insight into the secret springs of motive, his power of lucid and luminous statement, his rare genial humor, the breadth and wealth of his genuine love for humanity, and the marvelous qualities of his wonderful voice—all under the domination and inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

"He said more quotable things than any man of his generation. There are few homes in which some saying of his is not repeated. He had a genius for proverb-making.

"I believe that one secret of his strange power as a preacher was the fact that all his appeals were directly to the human conscience. His theory was that the conscience was on the same level, whether in a philosopher or a child—whether in a scholar or an illiterate. And that the message needed to arouse the one could not fail to awaken the other. Therefore, like St. Paul, he felt himself a debtor to the Greek and the barbarian, to the wise and the unwise.

"He demonstrated the fact that the day of the preacher and public speaker has not passed. The living voice is as potential to-day as ever in the world's history. The printed page may inform the mind, but the living messenger is necessary to kindle passion and urge men to action. The preaching function of the priesthood can never lose its authority. As in the olden times, when Isaiah's voice was heard in Israel, and Paul preached on Mars Hill, the divinely called man with a message will ever be the mightiest force in his generation.

"His life of almost unexampled activity was dominated by one high and holy purpose—to do good to his fellow-men and faithfully serve his generation by the will of God. From that purpose he was never deflected, and from God's service his heart never felt the slightest alienation. To that high aim every ambition was subordinated, and every energy put in commission.

"Believing that Providence had clearly indicated his field of largest usefulness, to be unconfined by the narrow limits of a local pastorate, he retired from the regular itinerant ministry, and made the nation his parish. Whatever the judgment of others as to the wisdom of that course, he never doubted that God had ordered it, and his blessings would approve it. In every state of the Union his voice was heard by eager thousands, preaching with the same fearless fidelity and Christly sympathy as to the humble friends and neighbors on his first Georgia circuit.

FEATURES OF A NOBLE CHARACTER.

"Without attempting any recital of the facts of a brilliant history, I shall merely mention a few features of a noble character.

"First of all, because above all and best of all our honored brother was remarkable for the strength and solidity of his moral character. There was granite in its foundations, and every living stone was polished after the similitude of a palace. Flaws there may have been, but no fissures — discolorations, but no suggestion of disintegration. The storms of life sometimes strained, but never moved it. The rains descended, the floods came and the winds blew, but when the sky had cleared he stood unshaken and majestic as a mighty mountain. However much men may have criticized his utterances, or questioned the wisdom of his policies, no one ever doubted the integrity and purity of his character. Had there been in it any serious weakness, some curious or critical or envious eye would have quickly discovered it and loudly proclaimed it, but throughout his brilliant career, every hour in the fierce public glare, his mission and methods as a reformer inviting and encountering stubborn hostility, he fought and wrought and finally died, without the faintest shadow on his beautiful character. There were notches on his trusty blade, but not a blur on his noble name.

"He genuinely loved his fellow-men, and never lost hope for humanity. He believed in a Gospel that can redeem a world, and like his Lord, he went out to seek and save the lost. And no poor prodigal ever got so low or wandered so far as to be beyond the reach of his hopeful message and helpful sympathy. And that made the world love him so. There is nothing more divinely attractive than the radiance of hope, and nothing more cheerless and forbidding than the notes of discouragement and despair. Tell a poor, blasted, blistered soul that there is hope for him, and his wailings will turn to pleadings, and his despair into the tones of prevailing prayer. It was this ever reiterated Gospel for the worst sinner that helped to attract the thousands to his ministry.

"The bells of St. Michael's in Charleston, S. C., that have chimed the hours of morning and evening prayer since colonial times, have a strange history. They have crossed the Atlantic ocean five times. During the Civil War they were shipped to Columbia for safekeeping. But on a certain famous march to the sea they were burned and broken into fragments by the hands of a vandal. Every sacred piece was gathered up, and all shipped back to the foundry in which they were originally cast. There they were made anew and brought home to the tower of St. Michael's without the loss of a single note or the lowering of a single majestic tone.

"Thus, this good man believed, God could do with every sinful, broken human life. Gather up scarred and scattered fragments, make them anew in his image, and put cathedral music into the redeemed soul.

SUBLIME MORAL COURAGE.

"His moral courage was nothing less than sublime. What he conceived to be the path of duty he would pursue, though a lion crouched in the shadow of every tree. No threat of man, or fear of all the legions of darkness, could stay his course or hush his imperial voice. And yet there was in him nothing of rashness, and he never spoke without premeditation. His was not a harsh, but a gentle nature. He had a strong, soft hand. The tones of his voice were authoritative, but the undertones were gentleness and love. Though he sometimes showed the sternness of a Hebrew prophet, he really had the tenderness and sweet persuasiveness of an apostle. Who but this master of the human heart could unite such startling and overwhelming plainness of speech with lyric tenderness and irresistible persuasiveness? With a sternness that was at times as awful as Sinai, he united a pathos that made every eye a fountain of tears.

"If he sometimes used the muck rake, it was not simply to expose the rottenness of society and the wickedness of the world, but that the healing light of the truth might shine upon and cure it. He uncovered sin that it might be destroyed. He rent the robe of hypocrisy that its ghastly deformity might cease to deceive. But for every penitent he had a mantle of charity, and for every home-coming prodigal a joyous welcome.

"He was free from the weaknesses and vices of narrow natures. His great soul was too generous for jealousy and too broad for bigotry. Envy found no hiding place in his brotherly and sunny heart. He coveted no man's position or possessions, and envied no human being his fame or his fortune. It never occurred to him that any rival stood in the way of his attainments or achievements. No Mordecai sat in the gateway of his noble soul. He rejoiced that the world is wide, with an inviting field for every honest toiler, and ample reward for every faithful workman; that there is a chaplet for every heroic brow, and a throne for every really royal soul. While deeply appreciative of his large place in the nation's esteem—pardonably proud of his wonderful and long-sustained popularity — he generously rejoiced in the honors and success of every worthy man. I never heard him speak a disparaging word of any mortal who had high aims and a serious purpose. His generous hand would have withered had he attempted to pluck a star from another's crown. Such magnanimity is one of the final tests of true greatness.

"But time fails me to speak more at length of my glorified friend. We would fain have kept him longer, but the Lord knew best. His was a life that cannot go out; it will go on.

"The end came, not exactly as he had hoped, but as beautifully and triumphantly as any heart could wish. It was just after a great revival in which, as on so many notable occasions, God had wonderfully honored his ministry. With the tears of a penitent still gladdening his eyes, the tired preacher was told that it is time to rest. Between a revival and an expected family reunion, the angels met him and carried him to the house of many mansions. In that heavenly home may there be no vacant chair!"

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

As I was looking after the children this morning, while wife was preparing dinner, my mind reverted to what I heard a man say the other day, while speaking of Canton's refusal to allow "The Clansman" presented to that little town. He said that he thought Canton had better vote whisky out before condemning such a play. Now comes Natchez, with a petition of 143 of her elect ladies, asking the mayor not to allow "The Clansman" to come to their town. I wonder if they ever display such earnestness to get rid of the saloon? If they can keep "The Clansman" out, they can run the saloon out also.

I believe that if the women of this county would try, they could drive out all the saloons in the land—for "the hand that rocks the cradle rocks the world."

There is no defeat for women who recognize their life a mission of God. "Some years ago a small town in Virginia was almost deluged with whisky. The men of the town paid no attention to it, but finally the women organized themselves and said this curse must go. Our children shall no longer be subjected to the awful monster." There was a good deal of sport made of them. They were called 'the petticoat brigade,' and the like, but it never deterred them. They went right ahead. They had a mission to accomplish: they could not stop; and in three weeks' time they marched their husbands to the polls and swept their saloons from the face of the earth."

How easy it would be to clean up the filth around us, if we only had a few to fight in the cause of right! But the devil is using some women to carry on his work. They are bold. In a certain city in our State a mayor had to be elected. Several men were running, some of them good men. These low-class women said to a great many of the voters: "You vote for So-and-so, or we will leave your town." They carried their point, and are still in that town, a stench to decent society.

God give us women—and men, too—who, like the illustrious statesman, will say: "Give me liberty or give me death!"

L.

THE LAW OF THE SABBATH.

By far the greater number of the evangelical churches of to-day teach, and have taught since the Reformation, that under the latter economy of grace and divine revelation, the law is not abrogated. The Son of God, in the days of his incarnation, when teaching, with repeated emphasis, upheld the sanctions and penalties of the law. Most clearly did he state that not one jot nor tittle should pass therefrom. Paul maintained that the law was just, holy and pure, and magnified its righteousness.

Now, there are basic truths and sure foundations. May not the earnest, thoughtful consideration of them lead us to a settlement or decision on the law of the Sabbath Day?

First, are we still under the sanction of Jewish law of the Sabbath? Most assuredly we are. Our Lord never combated or opposed that law, either in spirit or letter. He only opposed the Pharisaic misconception of its workings. But the Divine authority of its observance was as fully maintained by him as by Moses. As with regard to all other moral law, he infused into this law a higher purpose and a broader meaning, but never, either by direct statement or implication, did he impugn its strictest observance. So far as its essence is concerned, it stands to-day as full in authority as under the economy of that earlier day. Furthermore, this law of Sabbath observance is one of three in the Decalogue that are given with specific fulness. The commandments against idolatry and covetousness are likewise emphasized. Surely the commandment that covers the greatest space among these divine statutes must be of equal importance with the others as to its maintenance.

In conclusion, it seems to me a reflection on divine wisdom to regard God in the light of an empiricist, as trying a thing under one economy or during one period of scriptural history, and then, finding it a failure, to try another experiment. If I read the life and teaching of Christ aright, he never did away with any good thing. Surely, he never dishonored his Father by establishing a system of ethics, or giving of moral laws, contrary to the revelations given of God before his appearance.

THE GOOD WOMEN AT WORK.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Our president makes it my duty to represent our Home Mission Society. It is a year old, is connectional and doing fine work. We have added to the looks and comforts of our church inside, and expect soon to be able to repaint it, etc. We are preparing a Thanksgiving box for our Orphans' Home, which, I hear, is much needed. Itinerant might find it would add to the comfort of his parsonage if he could influence the ladies to organize a Home Mission Society in his town. Hoping he will succeed, I am respectfully,

MRS. J. G. GUNN.

A STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN FOR MISSIONS.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren—Only a few weeks more remain until Conference, and in a considerable number of pastoral charges there is still much to be done in raising the assessments for missions as well as in collecting funds for other causes. Hence there is need of prompt and strenuous effort. We brought up full collections last year, despite the shortage in the cotton crop, the prevalence of yellow fever and the partial interruption of business due to quarantine restrictions. While the continued rains and the recent storm have wrought widespread injury to the crops and to other lines of industry, the country is still prosperous, and the outlook is by no means dark. Taking the situation as it is, it ought not to be any more difficult this year for our Conference to bring up its missionary assessments in full and over than it was last year. What has been done can be done again, if every pastor will do his best. Probably the worst failure that can befall us as pastors is the failure to use all diligence in advancing and advocating the cause of missions.

The Nashville Advocate of October 5th contained the following encouraging statement from our Missionary Secretaries: "The quadrennium which has just closed has been the greatest in the missionary operations of our church. The increase in membership in our foreign fields, which was over twelve per cent last year, and the steady growth in collections at home, giving an advance of over a hundred thousand dollars during the four years, are indicative of the blessing of God upon our native church and upon our Methodist people, who are coming into a deeper sense of personal responsibility to Christ for the preaching of the gospel to every creature. Seventeen annual conferences, 121 districts and 3277 pastoral charges have paid their assessments in full for foreign missions during the past year, and 83 districts their assessments in full for both foreign and domestic missions. This is a decided advance over the preceding year, in which twelve annual conferences and 100 districts paid out."

In every wide-awake, aggressive denomination of Christendom the call is ringing out for an advance movement in missions. Never before has the heathen world been so accessible to missionary effort or so clamorous for the gospel as to-day. Open doors and whitening fields greet us on every hand, and the Macedonian call comes sounding to us over the seas from the Dark Continent, from South America, from many Oriental lands, and from the isles of the sea. Never before has there been such a numerous band of trained workers ready to carry the gospel to every land as is now to be found in America and in England.

The following inspiring report from Kentucky appears in the October number of "Go Forward," which has just been received: "The Louisville Conference made a great stride toward the front in its missionary collections this year. The whole Conference paid out and over on foreign assessment. They paid last year $8683.37; this year, $12,287.89. That is forty-one per cent advance over last year, when they reported 'an unparalleled advance.' Also more than a thousand increase in membership, and progress on all lines." Over and over again it has been demonstrated that an advance in missions means an advance in every other direction. "To give is to live."

Considering the greatness of our resources and the size of our membership, we ought not to be content to let other Conferences forge ahead of us in missionary matters. We have made a good record so far, but as yet we have scarcely begun to realize what great possibilities are before us, and how momentous are the issues of the hour. The South Georgia Conference is now supporting upwards of forty missionaries, in addition to taking care of the regular assessments for missions. They have gotten far beyond the low aim of merely paying out. Let us do our utmost to put our Conference in the very forefront in missionary zeal and liberality. We will never achieve large things unless we plan large things. Let us not hamper our Missionary Secretaries or our Mission Boards by falling short a single dollar on our assessments.

Despite the cry of hard times, most professing Christians are not too poor to spend money for things that they like. Fun, excessive feasting and excessive finery get many a dollar that ought to find its way into the Lord's treasury. Not a few well-to-do church members spend more on a single fashionable dinner or reception, or on tickets to the theatre than they give in a whole year perhaps to the church.

Let us take the laymen into counsel with us in this supremely important work, and make them feel the burden of responsibility for the world's evangelization. Mr. McConaughy, Secretary of the Forward Movement of the Presbyterian Church, puts the case about right when he says that "so far as concerns the foreign missionary enterprise, the layman has not been in it."

Above all, let us not forget to pray the Lord of the harvest to put it into the hearts of his people to give abundantly of their means for the spread of his truth. "Let us advance upon our knees."

Yours in the Master's cause,

M. M. BLACK,

Conference Missionary Secretary.

"ON TO SONGDO!" AGAIN.

BY BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

The Annual Meeting of our Korea Mission has just closed at Seoul. The year has been one of success, the membership of the churches advancing from 759 to 1227, besides 1694 probationers, who will not be received into full connection until after further instruction and examination. The people are turning to Christ as I have never seen in any field.

Indeed it may be said that the Korean churches have been in a state of revival for the past three years, the revival movement growing in power each year, and still advancing with increasing momentum. The harvest is simply out of all proportion to the strength of our force. No Church in Korea has a mission force adequate to the need of the hour, and least of all has our Church. It is reported that at one of the stations of the Presbyterians as many as 1100 adult persons have been baptized and received into the Church during the current year. If we take into account the age of our mission, and the number of missionaries we have engaged, the growth of our own membership is not less phenominal. The mission must be re-enforced speedily with more missionaries, and provision must be made at once for training a native ministry.

We have delayed too long the matter of a school for young men, and we are now suffering the results of such delay. We have no adequate supply of native workers upon whom our brethren can rely for caring for our rapidly growing young church. The matter cannot be postponed longer. I would not be able to postpone it, even if I were inclined to try to do so. Providence forces me to take action, and I am thankful that in a remarkable way our God enables me to take the first step in this direction.

Some fifteen years ago Mr. T. H. Yun came as a student to Emory College, while I was president of that institution. He availed himself of the opportunities there presented most diligently, and after a few years' stay in America he returned to his own country, well qualified to serve his people in the highest place. Being the son of the Minister of War, and having qualifications so superior to other men of his time, he seemed called to a career of political service. Accordingly he has occupied during the last decade several positions of authority and influence under the appointment of the Emperor of Korea. He was one of the representatives of his nation sent to attend the coronation of the Czar. He served in the Department of Education. At one time he was the Vice-Minister of State. More recently he has been repeatedly offered the position of Foreign Minister, but has firmly declined the offer.

From the first he has felt keenly the need in his country of a great Christian school. A few years ago he and his father made each a contribution of a thousand yen ($500) to begin a fund for the establishment of such an institution. The authorities of the Church, not seeing their way clear to begin the work, put this fund at interest. From accrued interest, as well as from a few smaller contributions, the fund has now grown to something more than three thousand yen (about $1500).

I had not proceeded far in the inspection of our Korean work until all the facts of the case forced on me the conclusion that the inauguration of the enterprise could not wait longer; but I had no man for the place, unless I could get Mr. Yun himself to undertake the work. After much prayerful consideration of the subject I opened the matter to him. I found him eager to undertake Christian work, but he felt his way hedged up by the customs of his country, more imperious than written laws. He is the eldest son, and as such inherits all the property, and all the responsibilities under Korean usage. At first it seemed impossible to overcome this barrier, not because he cared for property, but because to break with the responsibilities of his position would involve him in embarrassments that would hinder any work that he might undertake of the character proposed, if indeed it might not utterly defeat it. He said to me, with profound emotion, "I have often and deeply regretted that I am the first born in my father's house."

The difficulty was further aggravated by the fact that under Korean usage a father may before his death transfer the responsibilities for all these matters to the eldest son, and this transfer General Yun had recently made, so that Mr. T. H. Yun was already entered upon the duties of the first born, according to the Korean law of primogeniture.

As we talked and prayed over the matter for several days Mr. Yun finally said there was one relief which might be possible. If his father would voluntarily relieve him of the matter and give him his freedom the obstacle would be removed, and it was agreed that I should present the matter to General Yun.

No one unacquainted with Oriental custom can well understand what such a proposal involved to both father and son, and at first I hardly dared to hope for a favorable issue. I never felt more keenly the sense of responsibility, nor realized before so perfectly the life tragedies involved in the age-long usages of family life in the Far East, especially in the lands whose social customs have been formed under the power of Confucian ethics. However, I determined to make the effort that my dear friend and former pupil might be made free to enter upon a high career of Christian usefulness for which he is so well prepared and in which only he can find his highest happiness. It is freedom when though he renounces an estate in turning to the work of the Church.

General Yun was not in the city of Seoul, but was visiting relatives in the city of Songdo as we supposed. Accordingly I timed my visit to that station on the last day of Annual Meeting, hoping to find him there on my arrival. But on reaching Songdo, to our regret, we found he had gone to a mountain resort some ten miles into the interior. The weather was bad, a steady rain falling during the entire day we were tarrying in Songdo. We began to fear that it would be impossible for me to meet him during my stay in Korea, but, contrary to all our fears, about dark he returned to the city. Early the next morning I called on him with a view of presenting the matter. I was accompanied by Brothers Hardie, Gerdine and Cram, the last of whom acted as my interpreter. I presented the matter as clearly and forcibly as possible, dealing with the venerable man in perfect candor, as well as with the deference due his station and his relation to the serious proposal which I had come to set before him. He heard the matter patiently, making many inquiries, but at last said something like this: "He is my eldest son, and I have reached the age when I wish to turn over to him the interests and responsibilities belonging to him as my first born, and to free myself from cares during the remaining years of my life. When he went to America I told him to learn all he could, and he fell into your hands, though I did not know you. After a time you returned him to me, and since his return he has been a man different from other Koreans, walking always in a straight line. I now return him to you for the work you propose, and will resume the cares from which I have relieved myself." I expressed to him my great appreciation of his self-sacrifice, telling him that the gift of a man to a great work was far more than a contribution of money, and that I hoped that his son would stand between my people and his people as a medium of communication through which might be brought to Korea the benefits and blessings which we had in our hearts for his nation. After our interview was concluded and we had left the house he sought his son and formally declared to him his decision in the matter.

No man can forsee all the consequences of good faith which are involved in this extraordinary transaction. There is no man in all the kingdom of Korea better known or so well beloved as T. H. Yun. This testimony I have both from missionaries and men of the world living here. The fact that he undertakes such work will make a national impression. I believe it marks the beginning of a new era in the history of the people as well as an epochal development of the work of our Church in this land.

Nothing could be more influential for good than that the Church should rise to the height of this great opportunity, and nothing could be more damaging and discreditable to us than that we should fail to meet it with a great and generous response. I cannot bring myself to believe that the Church will hesitate for a moment when these facts are brought to the attention of our people.

Such an enterprise in the hands of such a man must be made monumental in character. The school must have ample grounds and commodious buildings. It must have a staff of instructors qualified to render the best possible service. Already we have a considerable plat of ground, and negotiations have been opened for the acquisition of an additional area.

Neither Mr. Yun nor our brethren in Korea, nor myself, expect everything to be done at once. We propose a modest beginning to meet immediate needs. In an old house standing on a part of the ground a school will be opened at once in which Mr. Yun and one of the missionaries will undertake to teach as many young men as can be accommodated. Meanwhile it is proposed to put the ground in order and get ready for the erection of the first building.

This building can hardly be finished for use before next June. It should cost no less than five thousand dollars—a sum which will seem small to many in our country, after reading all I have said, but we who are on the field know what such a sum will accomplish as a beginning in a land where there have been so few schools of any sort, and none of the kind which is now proposed. It should be remembered that this is but the beginning, and we confidently trust that the God who has led us so wonderfully thus far, will, in his good providence, bring to pass all things necessary for the consummation of this great work.

As I have intimated above, Bro. A. W. Wasson, one of the missionaries, will be associated with Brother Yun in this work, and his good wife who has had experience as a teacher in the University of Arkansas will also assist with such classes as she may find it practicable to teach during the current year.

This in brief is the plan for the beginning of a work which I dare say will grow to historic proportions and wield an influence national in its extent, and it may be even international in influence. It will certainly build up the kingdom of God, and serve the highest interests of a people whose hearts are being wonderfully turned toward the Christ of our holy religion. They have suffered much and they are open-minded toward the truth as it is in Jesus. I confidently rely upon the Church at home giving immediate and warm indorsement to this great work so auspiciously begun. I trust generous souls will send Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Nashville, Tenn., prompt and liberal contributions to the erection of this first building of our proposed school at Songdo.

More than ten years ago, when Mr. Yun had but recently returned from America to his own country, he wrote me a letter, bearing upon this interest which is now taking shape. I printed in the Nashville Christian Advocate a part of that letter, with comments upon it, my article being headed with the caption, "On To Songdo!" In response to that letter a number of contributions were sent to me, and by me sent to the Board of Missions, which funds furnished the means whereby the Korean Mission was opened. Among other contributions, I remember, a good woman, living near Huntsville, Ala., sent me $500. The Korean Mission has a membership of 1200 souls, and this membership grows daily by leaps and bounds. Behold the fruit has come so soon from a plant which at the outset was so small! Dr. C. F. Reid and Bishop E. R. Hendrix, and others who had to do with the opening of the work in Korea, may well rejoice in seeing how God has established the work of their hands.

Now, again, I raise the cry "On To Songdo!" If so much has been accomplished during the ten eventful years just passed, what may we not hope will come in the years immediately at hand? Let us have at once the first building for the new school. "On To Songdo!"

SUPERANNUATES' HOME.

Dear Dr. Boswell: The home for superannuated preachers in the Columbus District has been purchased. It is now a real thing. We have been agitating the question and trying to get to the material objective for quite a while in North Mississippi. Now the ball has started to rolling, and I trust it will roll on till other and larger things are done for our noble itinerant veterans. The last District Conference, in accordance with a resolution passed by the preceding Annual Conference, appointed a committee of three to take in hand the matter of a home for superannuated preachers to be located within the bounds of the Columbus District. On this committee were appointed Judge F. A. Critz, Dr. S. M. Rainey and Hon. T. J. Hopkins. Judge Critz, as chairman of the committee, has given the matter careful and painstaking attention, having written a personal letter to each pastor in the district and urged a speedy and generous collection for this worthy object. Brother Poe has had the cause on his heart and mind, and in the meantime sought out a place in Shuqualak. He wrote Judge Critz of his find—price, condition, etc. The Judge authorized him, on his representation of the property, to purchase the same at once. This we have just consummated. We bought the place for the small sum of $200. The lot is 40 feet front by one acre deep, and is high, level, dry and beautiful, being situated near the M. & O. railroad, and but a hundred yards, or little more, from the depot. This lot gives ample room for chicken-house, cow-house, and garden. It is too level ever to wash, too sandy ever to get muddy, and, besides this, is well drained.

Brother Poe and I made the purchase, secured the title papers properly executed, subject to Judge Critz's inspection. We gave our personal notes for the payment of the purchase money, which is as follows: $100 to be paid Nov. 1, 1906, and $100 to be paid in six months, with 8 per cent interest on latter note from date.

The house, of course, as might be inferred from the price, is inferior, and will have to be changed in some respects and repaired considerably. They think there that $50 to $75 will make it all right and comfortable; but I am quite certain that it will not take less than $200 to $300 to make it comfortable and put it in such condition as it ought to be. It must be made comfortable, as it is needed for occupancy at once. The home, as it is now, consists of two main rooms 16 x 16, a side room the full length of the house, and a front porch, which will have to be new or quite so. A brick chimney will have to be put up or else heaters procured. With these things done and some other little things in and outside the house, it can be made a cozy, comfortable little home in which the tired itinerant can rest awhile. We did not purchase it till I had called the Board of Stewards together, or several of them, and we had talked the matter over. They all, of course, knew the property and the range of prices in the town. They all considered it a bargain. Now, we shall need the money to meet these notes and put the property in comfortable condition.

The house must be ready for occupancy by the 1st of November. Our good Brother and Sister Newsom must go into it by that date. They have to give up and get out of the little house they now occupy at that time, and there is not a house in town for rent at any price. The little town of Shuqualak is almost an ideal town for such a home. It is a beautiful, healthful, well-drained place, with the finest deep-well water in the country. It is a good community of clever, refined and religious people. They are anxious for the home in their midst. They love Brother Newsom and offer to raise at once $75 or more to pay on the home. With the home bought at a low figure and building material very cheap in that section, and this money and management to start on, we can certainly foresee a good home in the near future for the weary and worn servants of God. Now, let everybody who will, respond at once. The home is a reality, the only one in North Mississippi Conference. Let us all rally to it, pay it out and fix up, and at least have one comfortable place for the superannuated preachers in North Mississippi. Let preachers in the district and out of it take collections—simply put it on its merits—and let private individuals respond with $10, $5, $2.50, $1, and on up and down the scale.

Brethren, don't throw this paper down and forget it; don't go to sleep and run the risk of waking with other thoughts. Send it to-day to Judge F. A. Critz, Westpoint, Miss.

LETTER FROM VICKSBURG.

No more interesting publication has come to our table than the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE (Nashville) of October 5. While much is obtained trhough the regular weekly press on the vital subject of missions, and our list would not be complete without the monthly visits of the Go Forward, this special issue of the Nashville Christian Advocate, on the subject of missions, is both timely and helpful. Such a series of contributions as appear in this issue and such a resume of the work done by our great church makes this copy especially valuable. It is a "multum in parvo," and will furnish material for future use. A clear and concise statement from the different standpoints by such writers, and the presentation of the different fields, make it a valuable number.

In the contribution of Rev. P. L. Cobb, on Mexico, we have some very suggestive statements; and rendered the more so at this time when we are bidding for an influx of population from Catholic Europe. In one sentence, speaking of Mexico City, he says: "Life here is more strenuous, and pleasure is made a business, and the most noted preachers have not succeeded in drawing the people."

The same, I believe, may be said of every community dominated by the Roman Catholic Church in Louisiana and Mississippi. "Life is strenuous and pleasure is made a business." Where these people bear rule, the Sabbath is shamelessly desecrated, and business proceeds as upon any other day. That the most noted preachers have not succeeded in drawing the people is accounted for by the fact that the people are almost priest-ridden, as in Spain or Italy; under penalty they must hear no heretic, as they choose to call the Protestant ministry. And this in Louisiana or Mississippi as much as in priest-ridden Mexico. Brother Cobb states that "Mr. Moody confessed to failure, and that George Stuart did not reach the nonchurch-going people."

Neither is Mexico alone in this particular, for it may as truly be said of every other community where the dominating influence is of that communion. At the risk of being accused of meddling in politics, just at this time, I would warn against the importation of a class of people whose only recommendation is their ability to tant—Puritan, if you so call—civilization is not a thing to be jeopardized at any price. Our Ameria thing to be jeopard at any price. Our American Protestant Sabbath is not to be sacrificed for such a bagatelle. Bishop Candler and others have given us such descriptions of the moral conditions on the isle of Cuba that we are ready to join in the charge that the heathen are at our doors; and Bishop Hoss, in the last issue of the Nashville, in writing of Brazil, says: "Taking the country, at large, not more than fifteen or twenty per cent of the people can even read and write, and in my judgment the propagation of the Protestant religion is a necessity on many grounds." It is not strange that a people reared under such influences, and educated to believe that their religious teachers occupy an especially favored place in the Church of God, should give implicit obedience to their command; neither is it to be expected that those teachers would readily surrender such power.

It matters not whether it be in Cuba, Brazil, Mexico or the United States, the principle is the same, and the influence is demoralizing to our republican, Protestant civilization.

NEW ORLEANS PREACHERS' MEETING.

The New Orleans preachers met in regular session last Monday morning at 11 o'clock. Following reports were handed in:

LOUISIANA AVENUE.

The entire interior of church and Sunday school room has been freshly tinted, with handsome effect. A new carpet has been purchased, and will be put down this week. The church has been equipped with electric lights and complete system of electric fans. The pews and interior woodwork have been varnished. Star system of grading in Sunday school has improved attendance and quality of work. A good number of substantial additions to the church membership.

RAYNE MEMORIAL.

Good congregations, three accessions. The Young Men's Bible Class, taught by Ex-Governor Shands, was started under happy auspices. Subscriptions for Conference collections were taken, and will be in full.

SECOND METHODIST.

We have about the best choir in the city, and it is hard for the preacher to keep them at home, such is the demand for their services. We have had many delays about getting our new church building under way, but we are now about to emerge from the woods. The Church Extension Board made us a donation of two thousand dollars and offered us a loan of two thousand. We are going to accept both. Our congregations are fair in the morning, and quite good at night. We have been baptizing some infants, and have received into the church a small number of applicants by letter. We wish we had taken in more. We have a splendid, active Senior League, such as any pastor or church would rejoice to have around.

ALGIERS.

Algiers has a remarkably fine Epworth League. The League Rally on last Sunday night filled the church to the walls. The church rejoices in one of the most capable league presidents and Sunday school superintendents in the city.

Many of the members are praying that the church shall be led into the methods of work that will enable it to reach its fine field of opportunity.

FELICITY STREET.

Felicity and Dryades churches have at last become one. A large majority of the Quarterly Conference voted for it, and Bishop Ward has so declared that these two are one.

We have now two new Boards of Trustees: one board for the mission, the other for Felicity Street. The $16,000 and over will be turned over to the new boards.

We have $5,000 to build or buy a parsonage, and have received nearly forty members this year. All claims will be up in full for Conference. There seems to be a good feeling among the members, and a bright future is in store for old Felicity Street Church.

Sunday school, Epworth League, prayer-meeting, all are doing well, and a large attendance upon public worship.

Grenada College has an exceptional offer to worthy young ladies who wish to pay part of their expenses while at school, by doing light work, which will not interfere with their studies. Write to the president, Grenada, Miss.

Recollections of Whistler in Paris, Venice, and London by Cyrus Cuneo, the artist, and Otto Bacher, the etcher, both of whom enjoyed delightful comeradeship wth the great painter, will be among the features of The Century in 1907.

To the Members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, M. E. Church, South:

The Week of Prayer and Thanksgiving is at hand. The manifold blessings from God to the Woman's Foreign Mississionary Society during the years that are past and especially during the year just closed, manifest by advance at home and in foreign lands, call for thanksgiving. The gathering in of precious souls in the mission schools of the Board and the revivals in churches in heathen lands awaken gratitude.

The need for power in the life of the individual, for wisdom in direction of the work committed to the Woman's Board, and for increase of trained, consecrated women to fill the vacancies in the misison fields, call for prayer. Every mission field is embarrassed by decreased forces.

Prayer and praise are keys that unlock the treasure-house of God. Prove Mal. iii. 10, throughout the week by private prayer at home, by observance of the week in auxiliaries, by enthusiastic public meetings, and by gifts, like Mary of old, fragrant with love and gratitude.

In the service of Christ.

MISS HARRIET'S CORNERS.

Round the restaurant table sat an agreeable little company, composed of some gentlemen, a lady, and a girl with charming face and vivacious ways. Meal and conversation were proceeding pleasantly, until—the waiter upset a cup of chocolate in the girl's lap!

After an interval, during which chairs were thrust back, napkins flourished, and exclamations launched, the frightened waiter doing his best to repair damages, the flurry subsided somewhat, and the party reseated itself.

"My dear Harriet," cried the lady, ruefully, "your pretty suit is ruined!"

"Oh, there are more in the shops," was the gay rejoinder.

The waiter, having got a smile from the heroine of the accident, went off in a dazed condition. The gentlemen were staring silently.

"Now look here, Miss Harriet," began the man with white hair, recovering first, "tell us how you did it!"

"Did what!" mischievously.

"Kept your equanimity, when most women would have—well, no matter! I was looking right at you when it happened, and the corners of your mouth went back instantly in a smile, and"—

"Oh, did you notice that?" asked the girl, suddenly interested. Then she checked herself, coloring. But the others scented a story and insisted, until Miss Harriet yielded, laughing.

"Well, since Mr. Pierce is discerning—but, really, there's nothing to tell, you know. I had a new hat sent home once, the night before Easter. I was to sing in church, and that hat was the prettiest thing! Oh, don't be frightened"—laughed merrily—"I won't describe it. In fact, I never got very familiar with it, anyhow; for when I left my room a moment, my puppy found it and had a personal interview with it. No, I didn't shake the puppy—he was a dear. I just dropped into a chair and contemplated the ruins.

"But presently I caught sight of my face in the dressing-table mirror, and—I forgot even the ruins! 'Is that you, Harriet Corey?' Why, it was the most woebegone, forbidding countenance—my mouth made a perfect capital U turned upside down. It came to me that that was how I probably looked whenever things went wrong.

"Well, I experienced immediately. I made the corners of my mouth move back and up, and I decided that a presentable face was better than an Easter hat. And I concluded right there that when things went wrong I'd at least see that the corners of my mouth stayed up. Really, you've no idea," she finished, ingenuously, "how it helps when horrid things happen. You just can't feel cross and blue if you keep your corners right."

Miss Harriet, absorbed in her narrative, had been unaware of admiring eyes. Now her cheeks began to redden.

"It's better than controlling corners in wheat!" murmured Mr. Pierce.—Youth's Companion.

THE HERO OF THE BRIGADE.

Mike was the pet of the fire brigade men. He was only ten, quite a little boy, in fact, but he liked to be considered a man. His father had belonged to the fire brigade, and he died from wounds inflicted while endeavoring to save the inmates of a burning house. His mother had died from the shock, and had left behind her little baby boy, Mike, when he was only a few days old.

Another fireman's wife had taken the tiny fellow to nurse with her own children, and he had been called Michael, after his father. As he grew up he loved to go to drill with the brigade men, and to watch them cleaning the brass of the big fire engines and escapes. He would run, fetch, and carry for the reward of hearing some story about people rescued from burning houses, and so on. If any boy were liable to be spoilt, that boy would have been Mike, but it seemed impossible to spoil him. He was always obedient to his foster-parents and teachers, and unselfish towards the children when he played with them.

Mike's ambition was to go on the fire engines with the men when they were called to action. He had often pleaded to be allowed to go, but in vain.

One night as he lay dreaming, a strange light seemed to fill the room through the window from outside. Then the cries and shouts of men and women from the street below filled his ears. Something was on fire! For a moment his brain grew dizzy; and he felt afraid, for he knew the fire must be near. Then he jumped up and looked out of the window.

The fire station was built with two great wings front the main building, and between them was a large courtyard. In this courtyard Mike could see a throng of people looking up toward the house, their faces lit by some light which came from above—whence he could not tell. With trembling hands he pushed up the window, and looked up. The flames came from the roof of the very building he was in. The fire was quite close to him!

When the people saw Mike at the window they gave a great shout.

The little fellow looked down on the great seething mass of faces, and then above and around at the huge flames leaping and jumping higher and higher. They seemed to be closing in all around him. He wondered how it was he had been left there alone, when a child's cry of fear made him turn round to see little Willie, a child of three, come through his bedroom door. As the door was opened, a volume of dense smoke poured in, and beyond Mike could see the angry flames that curled up and up. For a moment the smoke blinded him, then he rushed forward and slammed the door to, clasping the little sobbing boy in his arms.

"I'se so fwightened," Willie whimpered.

"Hush! hush!" said Mike, soothingly to the little fellow, who was motherless like himself, and a great favorite. "Mike will take care of you."

This he said with great courage, but feeling as if he were telling a story, for he was perplexed and bewildered, and saw no way of escape.

He took Willie to the window, and called and shouted to the people below. They called and shouted in return, and in the din and roar of voices Mike could scarce hear what they said. It seemed as if they were bidding him have courage, that the fire escapes were all in use on the other wing of the building, and that help was coming.

He tried to be brave for Willie's sake, who was quite happy now he was no longer alone. He clapped his hands with glee as he saw the flames leaping up and laughed with childish mirth as he watched the people below.

"What are they all doing, Mike?" he asked.

And Mike, who saw the smoke slowly creeping in under the bedroom door and heard the hissing and cracking of the burning wood, laughed too, watching all the time for the promised help to come.

Then he saw the firemen take a large blanket and hold it under the window where he stood, and which was three stories high. He knew what that meant well enough; he had not lived in a fire station all his life for nothing. It meant that he was to leap from the window into the blanket, which would be lowered as he reached it.

For himself he was not afraid, but for Willie. He was such a little chap, and he could never be persuaded to jump. He could not throw him into the blanket, for he was but small himself, and he knew instinctively that his strength would not be equal to the task of aiming straight.

With a cry, almost of agony, and a tightening of his arms around Willie's baby form, he hurled himself into the space below.

Cheer after cheer arose from the anxious spectators, but Mike heeded them not, for he was quite stunned by the fall. When he came to, it was to find himself and Wille in a warm room with a cosy fire, while his foster-mother was bending over him and trying to get him to drink some cordial.

"Brave boy!" she whispered; and Mike's heart leaped at the words.

Then she explained to him how he had been left behind in the hurry and confusion of the fire alarm. She had taken her two children away, meaning to return for him and Willie. But the fire had gained ground so rapidly that she had been unable to do as she wished.

"But you are safe now, my darling, and little Willie too. You saved his life, Mike!"

"Oh, no!" cried Mike, flushing all over.

"Yes," she returned; "if you had not carried him in your arms he would have dropped on the ground through fright, and have been dashed to pieces, and you risked your life by carrying him, too. Every one says so."

But Mike would not have it. "There was nothing else to do," he answered simply, and said the same when he was grown up and a fireman, with more than one medal from the Royal Humane Society for saving lives at the risk of his own.—Cassell's Little Folks.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1906.

We are told that Dr. Gordon's address is regarded by some as "marking a religious epoch." That is to say, the truth has at last dawned upon the world.

The figures setting forth the prosperity of the State of Maine, material, educational and otherwise, under prohibition rule, justify the editor of the Western Christian Advocate (Little Rock, Ark.) in saying, "Under prohibition the father makes high wages, the mother cares for the home, and the children are in school."

The Atlanta authorities have agreed to issue saloon license to "white men" on condition that they shall not sell liquor to negroes. Why did they not go a step further and bind the saloonists not to sell liquor to bad white men? It would have been consistent, and just as easy to detect the bad in one class as in the other. The country can never rid itself of "suspicious and dangerous characters" among white men.

It is generally conceded that the order closing saloons in time of danger is rigidly enforced. It was so in San Francisco immediately after the earthquake, and for three weeks or more. The people were sober, and during the time life and property were never more secure. It was so at Atlanta at the close of the recent riot. Indeed, the closing of the saloons was necessary to put a stop to the disorder. What can be done for a short time in the interest of safety can be done all the time if officers of the law make up their minds to do it.

One of our Northern exchanges had much to say about the atrocities of the Atlanta riot—the murderous attack on innocent blacks, men and women. The denunciation was justly deserved. But, wading through all the editor had to say, we failed to see a single word in condemnation of the outrages that inspired the mob. The assault on white women by black brutes, four in one day, were not even mentioned. An intelligent stranger, reading the editorial, would have concluded that the rioters had no provocation whatever. That editor could have stated without trouble the crimes of which the negroes were guilty, but he did not. Why?

REPORT OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

To the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences:

The Publishing Committee of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE held its annual meeting for 1906 in the ADVOCATE office Thursday, Oct. 15. Rev. W. B. Lewis, Chairman, presiding, and Rev. F. N. Parker, Secretary. Eight of the nine members were present. The editor and the business manager made their formal reports, after which each made fuller statements of the general work and condition of the paper, and of their plans for it. The Committee made a thorough examination of the editorial and business management. The paper was found to be in better financial condition and in higher favor amongst our people than it has been for years. The substantial evidence of this appears below.

By the authority of the Publishing Committee last year the editor and publisher made an arrangement with Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, a member of our church, to become the business manager. This arrangement relieves the editor of a great burden of care and responsibility, and leaves him entirely free for editorial work.

The Committee was more than pleased, it was delighted, with the most excellent showing made. There have been added to the subscription list this year 2753 new names. It became necessary to discontinue 550 names, of which 150 were due the ADVOCATE three years subscription price. At the beginning of the year the paper had a subscription of 4472, at the end it has 6675, a net gain of 2203, or nearly 50 per cent. This increased circulation enables the publisher to command a better class of advertisements and to sell his advertising space at better rates. It is from this source of desirable advertisers that a large per cent of the paper's income is derived. If a paper's circulation is evidence of its readers' esteem for it, this showing is proof sufficient of growing regard.

But why may not the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE have a circulation of 10,000? With a constituency of 125,000 Methodists it should have this easily. It is earnestly hoped that the campaign will be vigorously pushed. We must have it. As an inducement to this end it was agreed that the clubbing rates in force last year be continued. These are most favorable terms, and there are very few families who cannot afford this price for their church paper. The publisher will keep this offer before the church.

During the past year the business manager has installed an entirely new printing outfit, press, linotype, etc., at a cost of $10,000, so that the ADVOCATE office is now well equipped for creditable publishing. The only thing lacking is a satisfactory folder and paster. The manager reported that an order had been out for some time for this machine, and he was sure that it would be in and at work by December. Then the ADVOCATE will be pasted, so that the pages will not be loose, as they now are.

W. W. Drake, T. W. Adams and W. W. Woollard were elected the Executive Committee for the ensuing year.

The following resolutions, signed by J. T Murrah, W. H. Huntley and W. W. Drake, were adopted:

"Resolved, That the Publishing Committee highly appreciate the faithful, able and conscientious work of Dr. Boswell in the management of the ADVOCATE, and that we urge all our preachers and people to sustain him in bearing the burden of its conduct by their patronage and encouragement.

"2. That we are gratified over the mechanical improvement of the ADVOCATE under the management of the business manager, Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers. From the large increase in the circulation during the past year, we are disposed to forecast what we cordially hope—that it will reach the 10,000 subscription mark at an early date."

No man in our church has sought more earnestly than has the editor of our Conference organ to care for and promote the cause of our Zion and her Lord. But it is not practicable to always satisfy everybody. Most of all is it difficult to always please conflicting advocates of pending issues. The Committee unfeignedly believe that no man in our connection has a truer or deeper love for our church than has Dr. Boswell. As the editor of our official organ he merits our full support.

We think that much of the large measure of success which has attended the ADVOCATE this year is due to the fidelity and efficient service of the pastors in the three controlling Conferences. They have made real what the editor and business manager made possible.

I cannot close this report without speaking of the gratification the other members of the Committee felt at the presence and evident good health of Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan. His long and honorable connection with the ADVOCATE entitles him to the highest regard of his fellow committeemen, the editor and the ADVOCATE readers.

For Committee.

BISHOP WALDEN ON THE NEGRO PROBLEM.

There is scarcely a live community in the whole country that is not manifesting interest in the negro problem. In the public print, in pulpit, in church meetings, and in social gatherings the matter is under discussion. Somtimes the discussion takes a sensational turn. It did this on Monday morning, October 22, at the Methodist Preachers' Meeting in Cincinnati, Bishop Waldon of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and President of the Freedman's Aid and Education Society furnishing the sensation. In his address he advocated government paternalism for the negro, saying: "This country will not fulfill its objects until the nation comes to consider its relation with the negro as that of a guardian to a ward." The good Bishop seems to have forgotten that that is the very relation the government assumed when the negroes were set free, and found out in a little while that the experiment was a miserable failure. The Bishop denies that the negroes, to any great extent, are lazy. The Northern traveler, he says, going through the South, "sees but few lazy ones. He will make a good business man, and a good citizen if we only give him a chance, and the problem is with us individually, with the Methodist Episcopal Church collectively, and with the great United States government in a paternal sense." Let Bishop Walden's views prevail, and it would be but a short time until the government would have on its hands a horde of wards demanding bread and clothes as well as protection and education. It might be well for the government to take them in hand—the lazy and shiftless ones—and make them understand that they must work and behave themselves. Once impressed with the fact the United States will punish them for crime, there would be less of it committed, even by the vagrant classes. But impressed that the government is their protector, there is no telling to what length they will go in the commission of evil deeds.

Such talk as indulged by Bishop Walden bodes no good. It clearly shows that after forty years of service in connection with the Northern Methodists' operations among the negroes of the South he does not understand the matter as it relates to the average negro. He has had to do with the better classes—the aspiring and religiously disposed. These, we take it, the Bishop understands, and judges the whole race by them. We have known Bishops to be misled in the same way by white folks.

SOMETHING NEW IN SOUTHERN METHODISM.

A good brother has favored us with a rather lengthy clipping from a local paper giving the details of a plan, now in process of execution, if the writer of the article is properly informed, by which one of the charges in our church proposes to set aside the usage of the Church and supply its pulpit after the manner of Congregational denominations.

The article referred to is headed in bold type: "To Call New Pastor." It informs the public that the present pastor has let it be known that he will not return to the charge next year. The writer does not say how the present pastor found out that he will not return. He speaks as if the matter is exclusively in the pastor's hands—that it is his province to say whether he will go or stay—a thing no preacher, who is subject to the appointing power, has a right to say.

In view of the pastor's announcement, the people are represented as casting about for a successor—a very natural thing for them to do, and we cannot blame them. But that they should deliberately agree to go outside their own Conference and settle on a man whose pastoral limit has not expired, and disturb him and the sister church to which he ministers, by extending "a call," is going several steps beyond anything we have heard of in Southern Methodism.

It is said that the brother who has been "called" has agreed to the arrangement "for three thousand dollars a year." This we trust is a mistake. And there is a slight drawback. The church is not a $3,000 church. The friends, though, of the brilliant doctor feel that they can raise the amount by going to outsiders, or as the Mormons call it, by "milking the gentiles."

The article from which we gather this information closes by saying "no definite action has as yet been taken in the matter." We suppose not. The definite action will be taken by Bishop Hendrix—the umpire of the matter. But the statement, we take it, is about as near the truth as any statement in the article. No Methodist, acquainted with our itinerant system, could have written after the style set forth. The writer, no doubt, has heard some men talk, or of some writing, and, supposing that our preachers and churches conduct a mutual exchange business after the fashion of some of their neighbors, concluded that the Church had actually called a preacher, and that the Church and preachers were at perfect liberty to enter into a compact.

We do not believe that the church named has called a pastor. We do not believe that the brilliant doctor is a party to any such business. His more than forty years of loyalty to our itinerancy forbids anything of the kind. We write thus only to show the absurdity of such a statement in regard to a loyal church and a loyal preacher

FAITH IN THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

In our issue of Sept. 13 we had an editorial on "Faith in the Holy Scriptures." The first paragraph of the article contained these words:

As far as we know, there is not now a man in public life who parades as a disbeliever. But it is confidently affirmed that there is plenty of infidelity of an insidious character among our people. Those who stand accused would indignantly deny the accusation, for some of them are in the pulpit, and in our institutions of learning. They have commanding positions and can do harm. A few that might be named are eminent.

The above words seem to have offended some of our brethren, who took it for granted that we had reference to men in the pulpits and institutions of learning of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. What we said was characterized as "trial by newspaper." We have been told that the Church courts are open to us, and that it would be the proper thing to file charges and have offenders tried according to law. That is even so, but it happens that the men in mind who "might be named" are not members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and we do not feel free to file formal charges against them. We do feel free, however, to call attention to their teachings, and warn the readers of our paper against them.

We can readily see how brethren understood us as referring to preachers and teachers in Southern Methodism. We used the terms "our people" and "our institutions of learning." We should have been more guarded in the use of words. Yet it is a fact that all the people of our country are "our people," and all Christian schools of the country are "our institutions of learning." As to the preachers and teachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, if there is one who, because of denial of the essentials of our holy religion, subjects himself to the charge of infidelity, we do not know him, nor have we heard of him, and pray we never may.

PERSONALS.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Pine Grove, La., has secured a list of twenty-six new subscribers to the Advocate, and forwarded the same to the office. We feel greatly indebted to Brother Rutledge.

At the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting on Monday morning last it was decided to hold the Union Thanksgiving service in Felicity Street Church. Rev. T. J. Warlick, the presiding elder, was chosen to preach the sermon.

Rev. R. A. Meek, presiding elder of the Greenville District, has planned for a Sunday-school district meeting, to be held in Cleveland, Miss., next week. Dr. Hamill will conduct the exercises. Much interest is felt in the work, and a large attendance is expected by the pastor, Rev. W. S. Lagrone.

Ex-Gov. Shands, of Mississippi, elected to a chair in the Law Department of Tulane University, has moved to the city and entered upon his duties. He has identified himself with Rayne Memorial Church, and has shown his interest in the work by taking charge of the Young Mens' Bible Class, recently organized.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Columbus District, informs us that the work under his charge is "moving along quite hopefully—salaries and collections are coming up well. There have been some great revivals, and a goodly number added to the church. On the whole, the outlook is encouraging, and everything speaks better for the church and the world in the future."

All the members of the Advocate Publishing Committee were present at the Annual Meeting last Thursday, except Rev. W. E. Boggs, of Shreveport, viz: Revs. W. T. J. Sullivan, J. T. Murrah and W. W. Woollard, of North Mississippi; Revs. W. B. Lewis, T. W. Adams, and W. H. Huntley, of Mississippi; and Revs. F. N. Parker and W. W. Drake, of Louisiana. The meeting was pleasant and gratifying in every particular. Both Editor and Business Manager thank the brethren for their approbation and words of encouragement.

Dear Doctor Boswell: Our revival at Second Church still continues to spread. It has already run two weeks and will continue one week longer. Rev. R. O. Weir was with me for two weeks. His preaching was with demonstration of the Spirit and power. His sermons are strong, logical, Scriptural, and eloquent. He did a fine work here. My people were sorry to see him leave. He wears well.

Brother E. K. Means, of First Church, will assist me this week. He was with me last year and wrought a good work. We are praying for a great revival.

A SUCCESSFUL MEETING.

Dear Doctor Boswell: Please permit me, a little local preacher, licensed this year, to report a meeting held at Hintonville, Miss., a little place that had been neglected because there seemed to be no use to make an attempt on account of it being small, and a Baptist community.

I went there on the fifth Sunday in July, then followed on the first Sunday in each month. I procured Brother H. A. Wood to lead in the preaching and Brother A. A. Phillips to lead the singing. So with the two young men of God and our pastor, C. H. Ellis, we went there on Saturday night the 7th of October, and begun a battle against sin in the name of our Lord, and he came and made one in our midst, owned and blessed us, in that sinners were brought down and many were converted to God.

There were 25 converted and 5 backsliders reclaimed, and 3 persons claimed sanctification. We organized a church with 29 members and there were 5 who gave their hand, stating their intention to join some other church at first opportunity; also several who will come in with us soon.

We now have an organization with 29 members; a fine Sunday-school, a Wednesday night prayer meeting, with 5 or 6 ladies who will pray in the meeting. We also, with the help of our pastor, have a fine church lot, one-half acre large, and a building committee and a finance committee who are at work to build a house for the Lord.

Our pastor, with Brother Wood, will begin soon at Wingate, and the writer hopes to commence right soon at Little Creek for another battle for our God against sin. Yours in the fight for holiness to the Lord and against sin, praise his name for ever.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At a meeting of the Womans Home Mission Society of the Methodist Church, in Hernando, Miss., on Oct. 22, 1906, a committee was appointed to write an appreciation of the late Mrs. Alice Stovall Phillips.

The committee submits the following:

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in his wisdom has seen fit to call one of his children, our friend and beloved sister, Mrs. Alice Stovall Phillips, and since we know he is too wise to err, and too good to do wrong, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we humbly submit to this dispensation of providence.

Resolved, That her promotion has cost our society one of its most faithful and consecrated members.

Resolved, That her fidelity to her Master's cause and her godly walk among us will be long remembered and appreciated.

Resolved, That we extend to her bereaved ones our sincere sympathy and pray that the Spirit that ever sustained her may guide them through life.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of the society, a copy be sent The Times Promoter, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

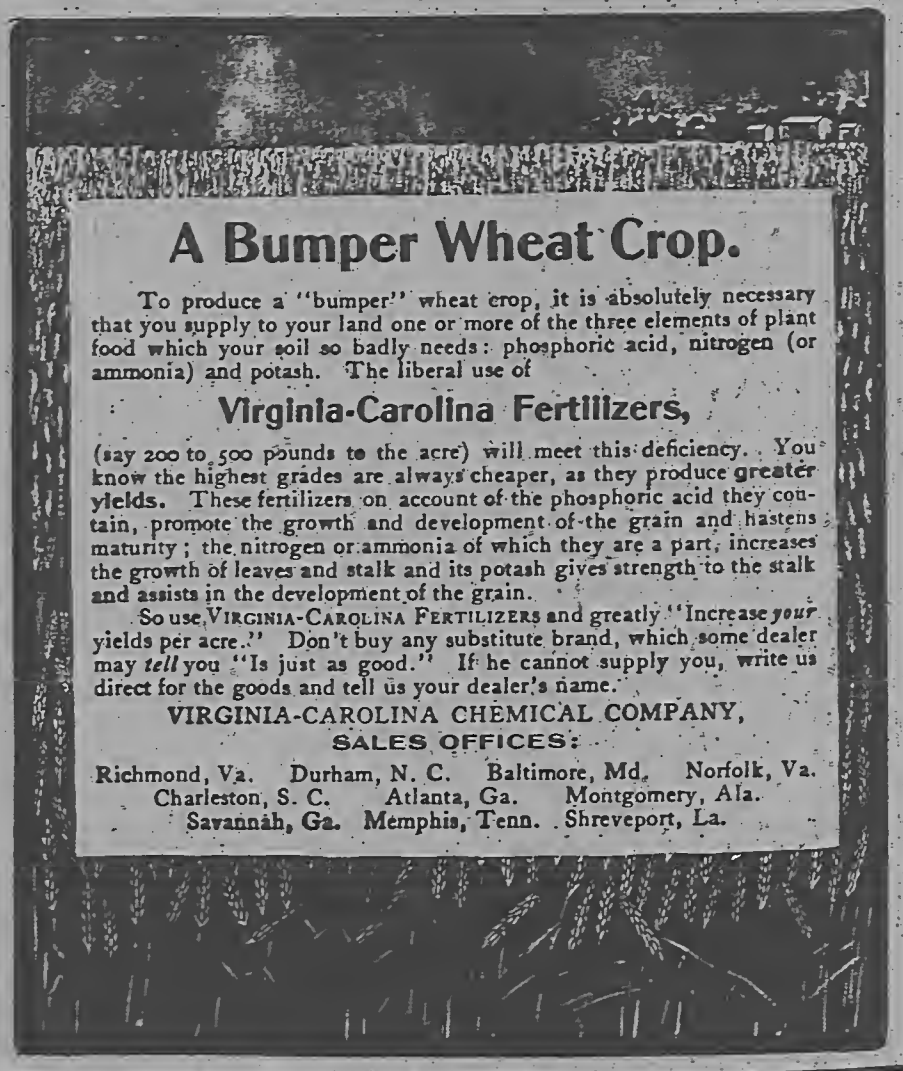
"Buy Land, Buy Land,
And Never Let Go a Handful of Sand."
---Joaquin Miller.



Now that's alright so far as it goes, but he might have gone further and said, "Buy land in and adjoining the City of New Orleans."

Also, had he been familiar with all the facts in the case he should, and no doubt would have said, "and the best land in and near New Orleans that may be bought reasonably is that owned by the Verret Canal & Land Company, Ltd."

Now you think from the above that we hold a rather high opinion of our land, or possibly you believe that this is the usual advertisement talk. Well, it is the former, and we not only believe that we have the best lands, price considered, near and in the city, but we believe that we can convince you of that fact, if you will allow us to send you our book, "Suburban Property." Whether you are skeptical or not send for the book; it's free.

A Bumper Wheat Crop.

To produce a "bumper" wheat crop, it is absolutely necessary that you supply to your land one or more of the three elements of plant food which your soil so badly needs: phosphoric acid, nitrogen (or ammonia) and potash. The liberal use of

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers,

(say 200 to 500 pounds to the acre) will meet this deficiency. You know the highest grades are always cheaper, as they produce greater yields. These fertilizers on account of the phosphoric acid they contain, promote the growth and development of the grain and hastens maturity; the nitrogen or ammonia of which they are a part, increases the growth of leaves and stalk and its potash gives strength to the stalk and assists in the development of the grain.

So use VIRGINIA-CAROLINA FERTILIZERS and greatly "Increase your yields per acre." Don't buy any substitute brand, which some dealer may tell you "Is just as good." If he cannot supply you, write us direct for the goods and tell us your dealer's name.

LESSON FOR NOV. 11, 1906.

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE.

(Matt. xxvi; 36-50.)

Golden Text: "Not my will, but thine be done."—Luke xxii, 42.

Leaving the "upper room," where the supper was prepared and eaten, Jesus, followed by the twelve, gave them his last loving discourse as they walked along. "I am the vine, and my Father is the husbandman," he began. His talk, as related by John, in chapters 15 and 16, must have been given as they came down the heights on which the city is built, and as they reached the brook Cedron, where it must have been that he offered the prayer contained in chapter 17. After he prayed they crossed the brook and ascended the Mount of Olives to a place called Gethsemane. After entering the garden a few steps, he said to the disciples: "Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder." Then, taking Peter and James and John, he went a little distance farther (this same three that had ever been nearest to him). They were with him when he brought back to life the little daughter of Jairus; also on the Mount of Transfiguration they witnessed the glory of the kingdom. Now they, of all the rest, were chosen to be near him as he prepared himself for the ordeal through which he must pass. Then Jesus said to them: "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; tarry ye here and watch with me." They could go no farther with him. The great High Priest must enter the most holy place alone. So, moving away about a stone's cast, he fell on his face and prayed. The climax of sorrow was reached by "the Man of Sorrows." All the sadness, all the disappointment, the rejection by those he came to save, the persecution, the denial, the betrayal, and the desertion by those that had been closest to him—all this in one great, heavy burden bore him to the ground, and in agonizing prayer he cried, "O my Father!" It was only at this hour that he had ever used the pronoun "my" in supplication. The purport of his prayer was that the cup of suffering might pass from him "if it be possible." It was not possible, for the redemption of man could not be consummated by the sacrifice of any less than an innocent victim. A divine sacrifice! The Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. He, through the Eternal Spirit, offered himself, without spot, to God."

When we look upon this great agony of suffering, we first see Jesus as man, and we can readily understand and give him our fullest sympathy; then we see him in "all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," and we are lost in amazement that we have been bought with such a price.

"Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." Finding relief and strength in prayer, he arose and rejoined the three he had asked to watch, and found them sleeping. We have often asked: "How could they sleep?" He did not upbraid them, only affectionately reminding them that they must ever watch and pray that they enter not into temptation. Is it possible that this warning was suggested by Satan tempting him, even in that holy hour? Three times he left them and prayed the same pleading prayer. Nature shuddered and shrank, but the divine will was conqueror. All heaven was drawn to him to comfort him, and an angel was sent to bear the loving consolation. There were none on earth to pity, so it was needful that the ministering Spirit be sent. Mark says that while the angel was with him he prayed the more earnestly.

The Father sends the same help to "all who shall be heirs of salvation" (Heb. i, 14).

The agony was passed. The will of God must be done. The great plan of man's redemption must be established. All that followed in being persecuted and even crucified was received with calmness, for they had all been met and conquered in contemplation. He returned the third time to where Peter, James and John were sleeping, sleeping while he lie praying. Again he asked if they could not watch one hour. "Sleep on, now, and take your rest." The rest was not for long, however, for in a moment he said, "Rise, let us be going; behold he is at hand that doth betray me."

The light from the lanterns must have been seen through the trees as they were carried by the throng of soldiers and servants led by Judas Iscariot. Judas, one of the twelve, the leader! Never in the wildest flights of fancy has man been able to portray a traitor so devilish. Only a demon could conceive such an act. And look! under the guise of the emblem of love, he strikes with the dagger of treachery! "Judas; betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?"

The soldiers are advancing to take him. "Whom seek ye?" asked the Lord. "Jesus of Nazareth," they replied. "I am he"—the "I am" was too powerful for them. They couldnot lay hands on him, but the foremost of the company fell backward to the ground. As soon as they regained their feet they advanced on the Master the second time, and the same question was asked and answered. Jesus added: "If, therefore, ye seek me, let these go their way." Then Peter drew his sword and cut off the ear of the high priest's servant. Jesus told him to put up his sword, for if it were necessary for his defense, he could ask his Father and he would send more than twelve legions of angels. If that was done, how could the words of Isaiah be fulfilled; "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter." Now we write, (and we wish we did not have to write it): "They all forsook him and fled."

Now the Lord of Glory was indeed in the hands of his enemies, and the treatment he received was as nothing compared to the contempt the world has ever heaped upon those that instigated it. We must study and reflect deeply on this part of our Lord's life, leaving obedience from the things we suffer and at all times bowing to the will of our Father in heaven, knowing that there are many "deep things of God" "that we know not now, but shalt know hereafter."

TEXAS AVENUE, SHREVEPORT.

Dear Doctor Boswell: The brethren will probably be interested in the state of our church at Texas Avenue in Shreveport.

We closed on Sunday, Oct. 21, the second series of revival meetings for this year, in both of which I was assisted by Rev. A. W. Turner, our pastor at Grand Cane. Mr. R. N. Jeffery conducted the singing in the last meeting. The preaching was as good as I have ever heard in a revival meeting. It was Scriptural, doctrinal, sound, and evangelical. Brother Turner has learned to combine sound doctrine with evangelical ferver.

Mr. Jeffery literally sings the Gospel and it wins its way, often where a strong sermon fails. I heartily commend him to any brother who needs help in his line.

In the first of these meetings our results were in numbers of members added to the church. In the last it was more in the deepened spiritual life of God's people, though there were some conversions and several valuable accessions.

Several of our preachers attended the last meeting, namely: Brothers R. J. Harp, J. M. Brown, H. G. Davis, T. M. Vaughan and J. S. Sanders.

When I took charge of the church on Jan. 14, it was more than $450 in debt. All of this but the last payment of $60 has been met, and this we expect to pay when it comes due on Dec. 15, and we will be free of debt.

The stewards are planning to build or buy a parsonage next year, and everything is looking up. If there is no serious backset within the next few years, no better fortune could befall a preacher in the Louisiana Conference than to be read out to "Texas Avenue, Shreveport."

H. N. BROWN.

A GOOD NOTE FROM BARLOW.

Dear Doctor Boswell: When I think of the abundant goodness and mercy of God during the year now closing, I feel like saying, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow, Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

We came to Barlow on Jan. 4; were met by a number of the good ladies who are always thoughtful of their pastor, and who had arranged for our comfort, and on looking around, we soon saw that we had been sent to a very pleasant place, and had a large number of very fine people to serve. Doctor, we have as good people here as you can find anywhere. However, we did not find everything just as we would have had it; we found very few indeed reading the Advocate, but we went to work and have secured 38 new subscriptions and 2 renewals this year.

We went to work, praying and trusting, as best we could, and the Lord has blessed us abundantly. I have not made less than three hundred pastoral visits. I have a good horse, one that Brother J. F. Powell, of Yazoo City, gave me, and I have used him. You need not ask me if I love Brother Powell. Tom (my horse) is a great friend of mine, and is very valuable. He is about seven or eight years old, weighs twelve hundred pounds, has all the saddle qualities, can fox trot eight miles an hour, is a very fine driver; in height, he is sixteen and a-half hands; the only objection in riding him, Doctor, is that you have to go by yourself; no one can keep up with you. If horses can go to heaven, Tom will not be far from John Wesley; but I do not think that Tom is any greater as a horse, than Brother Powell is, as a man.

Well, Doctor, we have held six protracted meetings on the charge, and all of them have been successful. We were assisted by Brothers H. B. Watkins, H. G. Hawkins, B. F. Jones, J. T. Leggett, B. H. Rawls, H. W. Featherstun, and J. W. Brown; all of whom did faithful and efficient preaching. During these meetings, and other services held during the year, we have received into the church eighty-one, the most of whom were on profession of faith. We think we will be able to report everything in full at the Annual Conference.

We are busy now trying to get ready for Conference. Pray for us, brethren, that the Lord may still lead us on. May God bless you, Doctor, and the dear old Advocate.

R. W. THURMAN.

Barlow, Miss.

LIFE OF REV. SAM P. JONES.

Mrs. Sam P. Jones and Rev. Walt Holcomb are preparing to issue at once a life of Rev. Sam Jones. This, it is announced, will be the only authorized edition. Mr. Holcomb when seen, said:

"Mr. Jones and I had planned to begin on his life some time in December. But after his death Mrs. Jones said that it was best for us to begin at once and get it out.

"In deference to her wishes I have, therefore, cancelled all engagements and have begun work on his life's history. Mrs. Jones has some of the most valuable material which we are going to use in this work.

"This will be the only authorized edition, and we wish the friends of Mr. Jones to know that Mrs. Jones is to issue herself the only authorized edition of a work of his life."

P. S.—Should anyone know any valuable material that could be utilized in preparing the biography, kindly forward it to Rev. Walt Holcomb, Cartersville, Ga.

LUTHER EDGAR HOLMES died Sept. 11, 1906, aged 5 years and 5 months. We miss our little Edgar, and our hearts are sad. Ah, sad, sad are we since the death angel entered our midst and took from us our little darling, so full of life and sunshine. He was sick only a few hours and it was, oh, so hard to give him up—so hard to say: "Father, thy will be done; thou didst give and thou hast taken away." Yet it should not be so, for we know God doeth all things well and have the blessed assurance that Jesus has gathered the little lamb into hist fold—"For of such is the kingdom of God." Indeed, it would bring happiness to our sad, broken hearts if we could call him back, but how selfish to want him back in this old world of sorrow and death. Our loss is his eternal gain. Grieve not, dear papa and mamma, your baby is not dead—only gone before to make heaven brighter and sweeter for you, and is now watching and waiting to welcome you there.

"GRANDMA."

Belle Bower, La.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. MINERVA ISABELLE SMITH, of Conn, Miss., a member of Pisgah Methodist Church, Hermanville Charge, died of typhoid fever after an illness of about six weeks. As I (her pastor) held her by the hand, her spirit was borne across the bright crystal sea to find the loved ones gone before. She was born Jan. 24, 1857; was married to Mr. A. M. Smith Nov. 26, 1874, and died Oct. 13, at 9:50 p.m., 1906. Sister Smith was for many years a member of the M. E. Church, South, and discharged her duty consistently as a member. She was a devoted wife, a fond mother, a true and tried friend to those in trouble, and especially was Sister Smith ready at any time to do anything that would add to the comfort of her pastor, and it was the faithful discharge of these duties that rendered her loss irreparable in the community. She leaves a large circle of affectionate relatives and friends to lament their bereavement. She bore her long and painful illness with patience and fortitude. Despite the zealous and faithful efforts of her medical attendants, and loving care of the family and friends, who were ready with willing hands to attend to her every want, there is a darkened home and a vacant chair. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope, for we will meet again.

J. H. FOREMAN, Pastor.

Mrs. SUSAN THOMAS NISBET was born April 22, 1850, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 10 years. She was happily married to Mr. N. E. Nisbet, Oct. 30, 1867, and died at her home in Union County, Miss., April 30, 1906. For some years Sister Nisbet has been a great, but patient sufferer. I have never known one so patient and cheerful as was she. She was never heard to murmur nor complain at her lot. She was always cheerful and happy. Sister Nisbet's godly life affected every other life it touched for good. She was indeed a living epistle, known and read of all men. She certainly let her light shine, that others, seeing her good works, were made to glorify God. Sister Nisbet's last days and months were days and months of suffering, from which she is forever free. No one could be in her presence and not get inspiration. "She is now joining" in the athems of praise with the glorified throng of the redeemed around her Father's throne. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn their loss. May the Holy Spirit comfort them in their sad bereavement! Sister Nisbet loved all her pastors. She had a nice, comfortable room she called her preachers' room.

So the prisoner is released.
Lightened of her fleshly load.
Where the weary are at rest.
She is gathered unto God.

Her pastor,

B. P. FULLILOVE.

MURIAL THOMAS, daughter of Oscar L. and Katie Thomas, was born in Rankin County, Miss., Nov. 30, 1899, and died in the same county, Oct. 1, 1906. Though this little one was here in this world only about seven years, still I am sure her life was not in vain. She was received into full connection into the church about three weeks before her death. She was anxious to unite with the church. She was always glad to go to Sunday-school, and several have spoken of how well she knew her lessons. She was a ray of sunshine in the home. God saw best to send her into this world for a few years and best to take her away. While the home is sadder for her departure, still heaven has been made more real and attractive. It is God's doings. He knows best. Let us be submissive, and he will make it plain after awhile.

Her pastor, M. H. MOORE.

Mrs. MARY DOUGLASS BEASLEY, wife of Mr. W. F. Beasley, one of the leading merchants and the postmaster of our little city, died here last Sunday of rheumatism, and was hurled Monday, the 15th, at the family burying-ground near Atlanta, Tex. Mrs. Beasley was one of the leading ladies in all work for the benefit of the public, such as Sunday-school and church. She was married to Mr. W. F. Beasley, Jan. 24, 1878. Four children are left, besides the grief-stricken husband. We desire to extend the bereaved ones our sincere sympathy.

FROM THE COLPORTER'S DESK.

The new "Pastor's Reports to Annual Conference" must be used this year. (The old will not be recognized.) Each pastor should have a copy before Conference, that he may make his reports intelligently and accurately. Send me 5 cents in stamps or coin and get one by return mail. Several presiding elders have ordered enough for their districts. There is no good reason for inaccurate reports or for delay in handing them in as soon as the Conference is organized.

Any preacher, official or other church member, who has not already done so, should order at once a copy of the new Discipline, 1906. Postpaid, only 30 cents.

I have in stock a lot of Methodist Hymnals and Young People's Hymnals Nos. 1 and 2, music and words, which I am anxious to close out before Conference. Brethren, please help me to do so. It is positively necessary that the Colporter have collections in full by Nov. 15 at farthest. That small amount which has been due for some time is part of an aggregate that is much needed at once. Please do not put it off until Conference. It is needed in order to get ready for Conference.

G. W. BACHMAN.

PINE GROVE, LA.

Dear Doctor: Our protracted meetings have been held and are gone, but not forgotten, for we were graciously blessed in them by the faithful and earnest preaching of the brethren who came at our invitation to help in the work.

Brother H. C. Murphy, from Provencal, helped at Killian Chapel, with good results. Brother J. F. Waltman, of Live Oak, assisted at Pine Grove; a good meeting, though it rained every day. Brother Hunter did the preaching at Pipkins Chapel, except one very able sermon by Brother W. R. Harvell. The last mentioned meeting resulted in twenty accessions to the church, and others have since joined. To God be all the glory.

We have also baptized more than a dozen infants, and, better still, one boy has been born to us (on the 28th of August), and he is doing nicely.

Find inclosed herewith for the "dear old Advocate" a list of twenty-five names, all new subscribers. May the blessings of God rest upon you and your work. The paper goes to the various homes to carry its message of love. Fraternally,

What Dr. Williams Says About Consumption.

Dr. Williams, the well-known consumption specialist and Medical Director of the New Orleans Depuratorium Lung Cure, says: "Nothing but a direct application of healing vaporized medicines, antiseptics and germicides to the very seat of the disease, and these medicines can be applied only by inhaling them in a vaporized state. The lungs constitute an air cavity and can be reached medicinally only by medicated air. I will positively assert that bronchial or catarrhal consumption can be cured by these healing oily vapors that reach the seat of the disease, laden as they are with the Williams germ-killing 'Osoline.'

After many years of careful observation and examining the sputum of eleven hundred cases, I am convinced that fully three-fifths of all the deaths charged to consumption are really catarrhal bronchitis associated with dyspepsia, which is brought on from severe dosing of the stomach. My treatment goes directly to the lungs and consequently does not disarrange the stomach or impair the digestion. The treatment can be taken at home if desired."

Dr. Williams' invention of the wonderful Depurator Inhalation has made his name known all over the land. By means of this great invention the germ-destroying Williams' "Osoline" and healing antiseptic oils are combined and vaporized so that the curative vapors may be easily breathed into the lungs and air pipes, spreading these healing oils over the sore spots and inflamed tissues of patients suffering from consumption and asthma. By this means the germs are killed, the sore spots are healed and the diseased coatings of the lungs and air-tubes are loosened and thrown off. The cause of the disease being removed, the patient steadily improves until a complete cure is effected.

The New Orleans office of the Williams Lung cure, 1331 St. Charles avenue, cor. Thalia, is under the immediate supervision of Dr. Williams, who visits it frequently to consult with his specialist physicians in charge of the New Orleans Depuratorium and Electro-Therapeutic Institute. Call and receive free examination, advice and free trial treatment, or write for pamphlet describing the Williams Home Treatment.

Glances at the World.

The way to deal with persistent violators of the liquor laws and other statutes has just been shown by Judge Elliott in the court at Amite City, La. Two men convicted of carrying concealed weapons were fined $150 each, and sentenced to thirty days in jail. Two men found guilty of retailing liquor were each fined $500, and sentenced to jail for thirty days. Another man, found guilty of retailing on three counts, was fined $1,100, and sent to jail for sixty days. It is probable that all their profits in the trade were eaten up in paying their fines, and when through serving out their sentences in confinement they will let liquor selling alone. It may be, though, that they are hardened cases, and if so, they will give Judge Elliott's court a wide berth.

Disasters occasioned by earthquakes and storms and railway wrecks have been frequent of late months. The last was on Sunday afternoon, October 28, when an electric train at Atlantic City, N. J., loaded with pleasure seekers, went through a drawbridge into deep water, and drowned fifty-three persons, and injured many more. The disaster is attributed to "criminal carelessness," but whether the carelessness was on the part of the bridge-tender, or on the motorman on the car, does not appear. The draw was not in proper position when the train came in sight, going at a rapid rate. Two cars plunged into the water, and lodged on end, packing the unfortunate passengers tightly together, and killing them instantly. Notwithstanding the carelessness (which will be the coroner's verdict, unless it can be shown that the drawbridge failed to work) nobody will be punished. The railroad company may be compelled to pay damages, which is poor pay for precious human lives.

The New York Christian Advocate informs its readers that Rev. Henry Gabriels, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ogdensburg, New York, who conducted a pilgrimage to Rome, was received by the Pope, and read an address in which he stated that "Catholicism was making rapid strides in the United States, due to the complete freedom which the church enjoyed and the good will of the American civil authorities." He might have added, because of the entire separation of church and state. And the Bishop quoted President Roosevelt as saying to him: "Tell the Pope that I sent him my profound regards. I have tried to treat Protestants and Catholics alike, as my latest appointments show. I will try to perpetuate this policy. This Republic will stand for many a century. I expect that there will be Catholic Presidents as well as Protestant. I trust that they all will treat each other as I have tried to do." Just why President Roosevelt felt called on to send such a message to the Roman Pontiff, we fail to see.

The liquor leagues of the country assume to be in good spirits, and not at all despondent over repressive measures. They stand more in dread of the Anti-Saloon League than anything else, but have a contempt for all temperance measures. A former state senator, now treasurer of one of the leagues, recently said in a meeting that "opposition to the liquor selling usually crystallized in words rather than deeds. At present, he declared, the opposition has attained tidal wave proportions, but he expressed the opinion that it has reached its limit and the future would see it gradually disappear." And the chairman of the league's congressional committee declared that the sentiment of Congress toward the liquor traffic had changed, and that the members were tired and disgusted with the attitude of the opponents of the liquor trade. Of forty-eight bills affecting the liquor trade produced at the last session of Congress, only six passed, and none of these concerned the retail trade. On this supposed change of the attitude of Congress the liquor interests are evidently basing their hopes. These well-organized forces must be watched.

The press dispatches have been giving a distressing account of things in San Francisco. "Brigand politicians are fattening upon the public funds so sorely needed. Bandits of the most desperate type are prowling amid the ruins, waylaying victims wherever a shadow offers cover. Yet the better elements of the citizenry seem incapable of any combined effort or plan of action." This indicates a worse state of affairs than existed several weeks immediately following the earthquake. The authorities then suppressed all the saloons, and kept down the sale of liquor for weeks. Order was maintained as long as the saloons were closed. As soon as they were opened disorder began. But it now appears that though crimes are committed, little effort is made to bring the perpetrators to justice, owing largely to the demoralization of the police force. "Crimes are multiplying. The record of murders, hold-ups, robberies and assaults for San Francisco since Aug. 1 is eighty-five, and not more than three arrests have been made in which there is a fair prospect of conviction." When will the people learn that whisky is the worst enemy of society—the most prolific source of all kinds of crimes?

We called attention last week to the excitement in Japan over the exclusion of Japanese children in San Francisco from the public schools for white children, and intimated that the matter would die out without creating trouble. But the matter has not died out. The Japanese government has taken up the question with our authorities at Washington, and in doing so the ambassador assumed an attitude unusual for him—and unusual for a diplomat who seeks to settle difficulties in an amicable spirit. Our authorities are troubled. The California authorities, in excluding the children, acted in accordance with the State law, and as the State is sovereign, regulating its own school affairs, the Federal government will violate State statutes if it undertakes to set aside the action of the school authorities. If it is undertaken, the action will be under Article VI, of the Constitution, which, among other things, says: "All treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges of every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding." In the treaty with Japan it is stipulated that "Japanese citizens shall enjoy all the rights, privileges, etc., of the country," or words to that effect. The treaty and constitution together it seems would force the school authorities of San Francisco to rescind their action. Just now the Japanese are in no mood to bear what they deem an insult. And, certainly, while the United States are in no dread of the little men, it would be a shame to go to war with them over so small a thing. And yet Japan could do us immense damage. She could, inside of a month, take entire charge of the Philippines. But that, as the Daily Picayune says, "apart from the indignity and the outrage, many persons would consider a good riddance."

SOME THINGS THAT OUGHT TO BE DONE BEFORE CONFERENCE.

There should be no stronger fraternity on the face of the earth than the fraternity of Methodist preachers. No fraternity has a greater mission—the preaching of the gospel of peace and good will to men, the wide world over. If there is such a thing as "holding things in common," the itinerant Methodist preachers certainly do it. What affects one vitally affects the whole body. What affects the body affects every member composing the body. If one be guilty of a mistake, a negligence, a sin, the brethren share with him in the consequences. We practically live in the same homes, serve the same people, meet the same difficulties, receive the same hospitalities: because we serve in turn. We can, in part, make it easy for each other, or we can make it hard.

I would suggest some things we might do that would be a great help to our successors:

Many of our parsonages are very poor, at best, but they are our homes, and every preacher should bring himself to a keen appreciation of this fact. They are our homes, and will be largely what we make them. The very fact that there is a probability of us moving to another parsonage in no way releases us from the moral obligation to keep in beautiful order the one we are in. Let us not say: "Oh, well, I am going to move soon, and it is of no use to fix it up." A stitch in time saves nine, and what we might do easily will cost him who follows us considerable time and money. If we are intensely interested in the preservation and beautifying of our parsonage homes, so will our people be. The home is theirs as well as ours. Shall we not see to it, then, that our homes are in first-class condition by Conference? Let's repair the fences and clean away the rubbish from the yards. Some of the window panes have been broken out for years, perhaps. We may put in new ones. The hearthstones need to be replaced, because they are worn out. The locks are broken on the doors; the gardens have gone to waste; the stables and out-houses are in a dilapidated condition. Brethren, we ought to see that every needed work is done.

As a rule, our church registers are poorly kept. They need to be revised often. Our preachers have almost forgotten how to hold a church conference. The church roll has not been called for years. Consequently the members of the church do not know "who's who." I know of three church conferences which were held recently, with the following results: The membership of one was divided by two; the membership of the other was reduced at least twenty-five per cent; and the loss was stamped with "Dead," "Lost sight of," "In New York for years." Shall we not all have a church conference in November, and revise the church rolls to the extent that we will have at least a living, "get-at-able" membership? Our church records and registers ought to be carefully and faithfully kept. All of the business of the church, stewards' meetings, church conferences, etc., should go on record.

Our Discipline requires that every preacher "leave his successor a particular account of his charge, including an account of the subscribers for our periodicals." It sometimes happens that this is sadly neglected. A preacher goes to a new charge. He finds no handbook, no guide, nothing but a register, and that in poor shape. He finds his members the best he can, and in this awkward way he get all his information. Much time is lost, and he in no way profits by the experience of his predecessor. Every available information and help should be left to the new preacher.

Another thing, and perhaps the most important of all—by every word and action, we should give a friendly introduction to the man who follows us. Thus the good work we may have begun will be continued through him.

MODERN EVANGELISM.

"Do the work of an evangelist."

In the great commission, "Go teach all nations," evidently it must be implied that an essential duty of the ministry is to "do the work of an evangelist" as was St. Paul's command to Timothy, who was a "minister of Jesus Christ," and for some time stationed in the difficult pastorate at Ephesus.

The present is much a period of the "specialist," but who shall say that the minister himself should not be also a specialist in this, the most vital work implied in His divinely given commission?

Great characters and skilled workmen are produced—not entirely by inheritance and by instruction—but vastly more by active effort in the way of personal duty, and of opportunity. Sundry gifts do exist even among the men called of God to the office and work of the ministry.

One excells in doctrine and in argumentation. Another is eloquent or skilled in the important work of building and collecting.

Or again, the man takes delightfully to the pastoral department, but the commission—"Go teach"—carries with it the idea of calling people everywhere unto repentance and of inducting them into the Church of Christ, as well as to discharge other and important duties.

The cares of the pastorate are onerous and multiform, so much so that numerous temptations exist, even in legitimate and apparently binding form, to draw the minister apart from the chiefest service to which he is appointed.

But none the less is it true that, on occasions, all interests must be subservient to the one great purpose of seeking the unsaved, and of bringing the wandering back to the fold.

Who knows a work which grades beyond? It is second only to the first and most binding of all obligations.

It is to be an agent of the divine Father in saving and caring for His own. Such efforts are near to the heart of God and must enlist the solicitude of the intelligent universe, and justified in fact the bestowment of the "unspeakable gift." Hence the words: "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever."

No wonder the people come to the place of worship when the man of God bows himself and invests his all to succeed, if possible, in leading the people to Christ, and "one sinner saved," said a Methodist Bishop, "does more to warm the membership and to enlist them for Christian effort than a whole week of simply preaching to the church."

Such as this too, as every one knows, opens the way to finer churches, larger contributions for missions and to better equipments for extending the victories of the kingdom. And a greater than the Bishop has said, "Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth."

Any minister called of God and right in his life can do this work to a greater or less extent, if he will not compromise his commission, but recognize the source of his "sufficiency" and proceed to discharge his duty in best possible form.

"Buried talents" and "lost opportunities" must awaken regrets and create distresses through all the eternal beyond, and in Rev. iii. 11, it is said, "Hold fast that which thou hast that no man take thy crown."

Against the traveling evangelist or revival specialist few can afford to disclaim: "If an open door presents let him enter and do his best." If one will not—somebody must.

Help, too, is often needed, and two together was frequently the apostolic method, but what shall be said of the minister who declines his duty and depends entirely upon the specialist to discharge the service to which he himself has been called and assigned?

To decline in instances is to assume more than is declined. And also said the Savior: "From him that hath not shall be taken away, even that which he hath."

To decline our duty too, and to place all meekly into the hands of the specialist, creates conditions many times which make it extremely difficult for the regular ministry to succeed in this class of effort.

Submission to appointment on the part of the evangelist in instances would aid greatly, but he is not subject to assignment, but ordinarily "a law unto himself." The regular minister must assume the duties of the pastorate and render best possible service, even though the people may have been educated to expect little at his hands.

In a Methodist district which had been "worked" by the specialist, assisted, of course, by the presiding elder and pastors, large "gains" were reported. Said the elder upon the Conference floor, "I have witnessed 600 conversions myself in my district."

A great impression was made and fortunate was considered that district.

Nothing was mentioned of the gentleman evangelist who led the forces, nor was it reported that the elder himself had assumed the minor role of mere satelite and good second to the movement, rather than to make full proof of his ministry among the churches of his territory.

The next year, as the minutes show, a considerable "falling off" was reported, and the same also later—the evangelist had gone, and with him also had departed the influence of the ministry for this class of work.

Finally, a presiding elder of devotion to personal duty was appointed and several churches also were supplied with pastors of similar habits in ministerial service—men who did not hesitate to open meetings single handed, even against a modest protest. Very soon—even during the winter—conversions were reported. God had honored the minister and his congregation in the work to which they had been assigned.

All night in prayer was an experience of some of those pastors—unknown to any but God. Of course, God came to town, and when he came the revival was already at hand. All people do not shout, but tears of gratitude come to many, no doubt, at times, when it is known that God is "no respecter of persons," but that he comes in benedictions when sincerely sought.

It is to the honor of the Methodist ministry that they do conduct revivals and that from the first they have thus emulated apostolic methods and followed in the footsteps of such as have most eminently accomplished the purposes of the Christian ministry.

And upon the toilsome pastor the latter day evangelist must largely depend for an open door to opportunities such as an angel would covet.

MRS. ELIZABETH WATKINS.

AN APPRECIATION.

The Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., of Jackson, Miss., writes me as follows:

"You have doubtless learned of the death of my dear mother. She gradually grew weaker with the passing of the days until at about 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, Sept. 29, when she fell asleep. For several weeks she had taken but little interest in what went on about her and slept a great deal. For several days she talked but little, speaking only when some simple want prompted utterances or when she was spoken to; but always speaking rationally up to the last day, when she ceased to speak, but still indicated that she was in possession of her faculties by once lifting her hands to Lula's cheek. I think she did not realize she was passing away, for she said nothing to indicate this, unless it be that just twenty-four hours before her departure she charged Will Watkins not to forget a certain commission that she had given him two weeks before. Lula asked her the day before her death if she loved Jesus, and she said: 'O yes!'

* * * * * * * *

"She was born at No. 4 Harrington Street, Liverpool, England, July 4, 1818; came to America when 10 years old with an uncle, a Captain Barnett, a ship captain—her father (first) and (then) her mother having died. She was educated in a Roman Catholic convent in Boston, Mass., and in 1839 was married to Captain Charles Johnson, who lived only a short while after their marriage, leaving my mother with one daughter, Hattie Olivia, whose name was changed, after my mother's marriage to my father by act of the legislature from Johnson to Watkins."

On Dec. 18, 1842, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson married William Hamilton Watkins, a native of Jefferson County, Miss., and then a member of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and pastor of one of the churches in New Orleans. The ceremony was performed in the church by the Rev. W. M. Curtis. Ten were the fruit of this marriage; three died in infancy, and seven lived to be grown, but five of them and her eldest daughter, Harriet Olivia, preceded her to the grave, and, we trust, to the house of many mansions. Only two survive—the faithful and unselfish daughter, Oliver, and the affectionate and devoted son, Alexander F., in whose wife she had a daughter in kindness and in loving service, and from whose home, after five years of living, loving blessedness, she went home to God. Numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren "rise up and call her blessed."

When I first met her I do not remember and cannot recollect, any more than when I first met my own mother; but when I was a lad, and especially after the death of my own mother, it was my habit to visit the Watkins' Natchez suburban home nearly every Sunday afternoon, and take tea and either ride or walk with them to Church. How kind the good Dr. Watkins and his good wife were will always be a very precious, grateful memory. There in that home life I learned to know and love them both, and they gave me a warm place in their hearts.

Mrs. Watkins was of fine literary taste, and a great reader, with a retentive memory. She read good books, and encouraged her children to read them. She was a good reader, read with intelligent emphasis, and so entertained her children, and when she grew old had them to read to her the standard and old books, which were to her old friends, and the best of modern books. Her taste was discriminating. Scott, Longfellow, Tennyson, Keats, and Oliver Wendell Holmes were her favorites among the poets, and with their writings she was familiar. She kept informed of current events and lived in the present. She was a woman of gracious, elegant manners, a sincere friend, a wise counsellor. She was cheerful and hopeful, and carried sunshine with her. I never heard her speak ill of anyone. She was a woman of great energy, a fine housekeeper, and used her needle with rare skill. She was generous and benevolent, a friend to the poor. She was devoted to the Church and to its ministry, feeling a daughter's affection for such men as Dr. Winans and Dr. Drake; a sisterly interest in men like Brother Godfrey, Dr. C. G. Andrews and Brother James L. Forsyth, and a motherly love for such men as Langford, Norsworthy, and, most of all, yourself." * * *

"She loved God and trusted him, desiring to depart, and be with him, and wondering why he did not call her home."

She was a faithful wife, "an helpmeet" for her husband, an appreciative listener to his sermons, and a wise critic. She was indeed a helper to him. "She was a good mother," writes her son. "She was a good friend," is what all must say who knew her well. In her going, I have a sense of personal loss, of personal grief. She loved me and honored me as "one of her boys." And when I was leaving her son's home in Jackson, Miss., to take charge of our church in Cordell, Okla., she gave me her benediction and a mother's good-by kiss, feeling, I am sure, that she would never meet me again in this world. And I felt that way, too. But we will meet in our Father's house.

She had completed her 88th year July 4, 1906. Of her sons, three were doctors of medicine and very successful in practice; one was a farmer, and one is a Methodist preacher; and of her grandchildren, the farmer's children, one is a lawyer, two are doctors of medicine, one is a Methodist preacher, and one, a young woman, is a missionary to China; and others are doing well in other walks of life.

It needed no last words to assure us that it was and is well with her soul. The long, useful life, the brightness at eventide, the peace that flowed as a river, the quietness of a blessed assurance, were fittingly crowned by a quiet departure, without a pain, without a struggle, just falling

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
Whence none ever wake to weep."

The eyes of the body closed on earth, the spirit awoke in heaven. What a welcome was hers there! She went to the grave "in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." She was ready to go, and the place prepared was ready for her coming. And earth is poorer, and heaven is richer, since she went home. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

T. L. MELLEN.

MRS. K. A. JONES.

Mrs. Lucinda McCormick Jones was born in Jasper county, Mississippi, April 19, 1842. At the age of 11 years she gave her heart to God and united with the M. E. Church, South. Happily married to Rev. K. A. Jones, December 29, 1857. Mother of ten children, five boys and five girls. Three of the girls preceded her to the better world. Five manly sons and two noble daughters remain to bless the world with their lives. After an illness of some months, which she patiently bore, quietly she fell asleep and passed into her reward, from the parsonage home at Strongs Station, Mississippi, October 10, 1906.

In the written history of Methodism there are mentioned a few illustrious women who have wrought in the advancement of Methodism. But there are many illustrious ones whose names have never, and perhaps never will, appear in written history.

The noble women have been to Methodism what the mothers and wives were to the Southern Confederacy. Sister Jones was not one of the least of these. Forty-nine years an itinerant preacher's wife, beginning at a time when it meant more even than now. If it means loneliness, hardship and patience, it meant much more then. Well did she fill this responsible and difficult place.

Remaining at home often for weeks at a time, bearing the heavy burden of caring for the domestic affairs, training and directing the household without the assistance of the husband and father, yet not a word of murmuring ever came from her; always cheerful, happy and bright, ready to endure any hardship that her husband be not hindered in his work. No man ever had a better wife; no children ever had a more loving, patient and painstaking mother, teaching all the while by precept and example. One of the sons said: "If we do not all go to heaven it will not be any fault of mother's." Surely "they will rise up in heaven and call her blessed."

She had many friends wherever she lived and they loved her and all spoke well of her. First in all church enterprises, often president of the woman's missionary societies, one-tenth of her income was the Lord's. Many a weary itinerant has been fed at her table and sheltered under her roof. It was never counted a hardship to prepare for them a meal or furnish them a room, mattered not what the conditions were. Many a boy-preacher has been cheered on his way by her wise and motherly counsel. For some time she knew that the end was drawing near. Yet she had no fear, talked about it with calmness, arranged for it as though she was going off to be gone for a while. So when the end came she was ready. She closed her eyes here and opened them in the paradise of God, went from the parsonage home so long brightened by her to dwell in the Father's house above. She was truly a great woman. The world is much poorer now that she has gone. May God bless dear Brother Jones in his grief and loneliness, and comfort and care for the sons and the daughters.

J. H. MITCHELL.

ALL A MISTAKE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: In the issue of the ADVOCATE dated November 1st, and under the caption, "Something New in Southern Methodism," you refer to and comment at length upon a clipping sent you from a local paper anent a certain church in our bounds proposing to set aside the time-honored usage and spirit of Methodism, and peremptorily dismiss a pastor and proceed in sheer congregational style to call another at a salary of $3,000. I wish, in my place, and in the name of truth and justice, to exonerate the church referred to and the "divine" whose name was unwarrantedly and maliciously used in connection with a plot. In fact, there is no basis of truth in the story. Both the church and the divine referred to are perfectly and entirely free from such a collusion.

It is but just to the church and the minister whose name has been thus wantonly used without his knowledge to enter an emphatic denial of the whole story. It is also but just to the fair name and integrity of Methodism abroad to clear her erminie of false and slanderous imputations at home. That article in the local paper was born in the imagination of the most imaginary corner of the village editor's sensational-loving protuberance.

That wonderful piece of information was clearly a piece of latter-day newspaper innocence. It slipped into the paper in the absence and without the knowledge of the editor, who, when he returned and found a sensation in town, was very sorry, and apologized and explained that it should not have been there.

I have not yet seen a man or heard of a man, either on the official board or in the body of the church in question, who ever saw, heard, dreamed or had the hardihood to imagine such an intrigue even as the remotest protoplastic possibility. There is not the least semblance of truth in it. The whole thing is the creation of a munchausen brain, with predominant hyperbolic tendencies.

We are still Methodists—people and preacher—so far as I have the facts. P. E.

THE HONOR ROLL TO DATE.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: A report from Treasurer Linfield, dated Oct. 23, shows that the following pastoral charges have paid one or both of their missionary assessments in full, and are, therefore, deserving of hearty commendation:

Brookhaven District—Foreign: Columbia; La Branch St., McComb. Domestic: Columbia; La Branch St., McComb; Magnolia.

Forest District—Foreign: Eucutta. Domestic: Fifth Avenue, Laurel; Newton; Eucutta.

Jackson District — Foreign: Benton; Brandon. Domestic: Mount Olive.

Meridian District—Foreign: Leakesville. Domestic: Leakesville; South Side.

Natchez District—Foreign: Fayette. Domestic: Pearl St., Natchez.

Vicksburg District — Domestic: Washington St.; Vicksburg.

Seashore District — Foreign: Bay St. Louis; Brooklyn; Coalville; Long Beach; Pearlington; Poplarville; Purvis; Sumrall; Twenty-eighth St., Gulfport; Vancleave. Domestic: Bay St. Louis; Brooklyn; Coalville; Long Beach; Pearlington; Pascagoula; Purvis; Sumrall; Twenty-eighth St., Gulfport; Vancleave; Lumberton; Moss Point; New Augusta; Oak Street, Biloxi; Ocean Springs; Wolf River.

A goodly number of pastoral charges have paid their missionary assessments in part, but as the time is short, there is need of diligent effort in order that there may not be a deficit. The reports from other Conferences indicate that a marked and gratifying advance in the interest of missions is being made all along the line, and let us see to it that our Conference does not fall behind in the great forward movement. Let us make a strong pull, and a pull all together, and success is assured. No other class of men on earth can be counted on more surely for the faithful, persistent and enthusiastic discharge of duty than Methodist preachers.

"The King's business requires haste."

Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: I deem it necessary to write this open letter to you and the delegates-elect, that you may fully appreciate the situation in Corinth.

Our hotels and boarding-houses are full to overflowing, it being nothing unusual for more than a dozen men to spend the night "in chairs," being unable to procure even a cot. Many homes that would, under normal conditions, care for from four to six delegates, are already crowded to the last limit. An unusual number of homes, other than Methodist, have been notified by friends that they are coming to see them Dec. 4-10. This is a "manufacturing town," besides railroad and electric line building now going on has filled the town with families that are boarding, and young men by the score, who occupy rooms that are rented till Jan. 1, '07, often for a longer period. There are from 500 to 1,000 "boarders" in Corinth to-day. The demand for rooms is unprecedented. It has been no easy matter to procure homes for the delegates; yet it has been done, and we propose to care for the Conference well. More than this, we probably cannot do. I should be glad to care for every preacher's wife in the Conference, but find it impossible to do so. Have found homes for a limited number, and shall notify them in due time. We want you; we look forward to your coming with pleasure; we shall serve you gladly, but if any man other than a regular delegate, or any preacher's wife comes who has not been previously notified that a place for them has been secured, it may prove embarrassing to them and to us.

Will the presiding elders who have not done so please send names of lay delegates-elect and supplies in their districts? Cordially,

JAMES H. FELTS.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I desire the attention of the preachers in charge in the North Mississippi Conference, while I say: Please give us full statistics on the Epworth League this year. If you have had a league to exist at any time during the year, please report it at Conference. The statistics should show, not what you have at the time Conference meets, but what you have done during the year.

THE PATTERN WE WEAVE.

The divine homesickness, which is the universal ailment, is beyond the prescriptions of the experts of the body and the mind.

It attacks the soul, and only the soul can come to its relief. Therefore it is wise to ask the highest Lord for a remedy equal to the disease.

The answer comes from the heart in agony in a simple word, so simple that we may easily miss its whole burden of meaning, for it is a word only, "love."

"We are all of us like the weavers of the Gobelins, who, following out the pattern of a well-known artist, endeavor to match the threads of divers colors on the wrong side of the work, and do not see the result of their labors. It is only when the texture is complete that they can admire at their ease those lovely flowers and figures, those splendid pictures, worthy of the palaces of kings. So it is with us. We work, we suffer, and we see neither the end nor the fruit. But God sees it, and when he releases us from our task, he will disclose to our wondering gaze what he, the great artist, everywhere present and invisible, has woven out of those toils that now seem so sterile, and he will then deign to hang up, in his palace of gold, the flimsy web that we have spun."—From "A Reasonable View of Life."

THE WORKER THAT COUNTS.

I saw upon the face of a watch three workers. There was a very thin one, so thin that I could barely see it, and it seemed to be moving in a little circle of its own, and to have nothing to do with the other workers. One of the other workers was long and genteel and graceful. The third worker was short and slow. I looked at them for a while, and I said: "There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone who looks at this watch who the worker is: the worker is evidently that little one that moves in a circle of its own. I can see it move; it moves lightly, blithely, tripingly; I can see it. The long one I can hardly see move at all until I have been watching it for a considerable time; and as for the short one, I think I may safely declare that it does not move at all."

See how a stranger to the mechanism of a watch can talk: how ignorant he is of what the workers are doing! You may take off the little thin worker and do very little damage; you may even take off the long and graceful worker, and though you will suffer a considerable injury, yet you can do without its service at all. But if you take off that little, short, slow worker, you could never tell the time of day.—Joseph Parker.

ASPIRING BOSTON NEWSBOYS.

Boston has an association of newsboys which has begun to establish a fund for educating at Harvard one or more among them, and has raised already two thousand dollars toward the necessary amount. This lively association has already been addressed by President Elliot more than once, and its latest step shows how full of high ambition these boys are. There could be, we gratefully believe, no more sterling proof of opportunity and of character in America than these self-supporting youths now give. In what other nation would a boy born in poverty, earning each day his food and bed, set out cheerfully to pass the examinations of a great seat of learning, and, once in, to master to the full its manifold weapons for adding to the conquests of his life? Criticize it how we will, and should, we may well glow always for our land of the free. Now, as ever, since the pioneer's axe fought its battle with the wilderness, is it the home of Opportunity and of her daughter, Hope. Elsewhere through the country, no doubt, this effort of the Boston lads will lend an impulse to other boys, cheerful and brave, ready themselves to scale the heights of the most beetling fortresses that tower above their tiny forms.—Collier's.

"HONEST INJUN."

Many curious instances of the manner in which the honesty of the Indians manifests itself are cited in the North Country. One of the tales which is most often told is of a native who, desiring food and tobacco and blankets, broke into the "store" of a remote trading post which had been locked and abandoned for a few weeks while the white man in charge transacted business elsewhere. The Indian supplied his needs, but he left pelts in payment for what he took and, months later, he came back to ascertain if he had left enough.

One Indian found a post closed when he went to it to dispose of his skins. Being unwilling to wait he forcibly entered and left his pack, but nothing with it to indicate his identity. Then he retired, fastening the door as best he could, and not until a year later did he return. When he walked into the post and told his story the price of the skins was handed over without question. The accounts of the white man had been carefully kept, and he was certain that no claim but a just one would be made.

An unusual degree of confidence is reposed in the half-breeds, who are lieutenants of the white traders. In Edmonton I saw a trader give one of his half-breed employes $1,250 to be taken to a distant post and there distributed as wages to others. The two shook hands and parted, not to meet for a year, and the white man said he was sure not a cent of the money would fail to reach its rightful destination. In the town of Edmonton itself honesty seems to vie with hospitality for the credit of being the most prominent trait of the citizens. Scores of thousands of dollars' worth of furs are stored there in warehouses which are seldom or never locked or guarded. Only the most valuable pelts are put under lock and key, and then the purpose is more to protect from accidental damage than from possible theft.—World To-day.

A LOST ART.

The making of a handsome buttonhole seems to be almost a lost art in these days of embroidery, lace work and all manner of dainty needlework, and it is not unusual to hear an experienced housewife exclaim laughingly, "O, my buttonholes look like pigs' eyes!" But it is an art worth preserving, and the following directions, given by one who takes great pride in her work, will insure a very creditable buttonhole. First, she says, "I always have good tools, good needles and suitable thread, while for particular work I use only a new needle. Then I am old-fashioned enough to use a bit of white wax for my thread, and if my good is liable to fray I rub both sides with the wax before cutting. I never overcast my buttonhole, but having cut it I begin on the inner end, holding the material tight between the thumb and finger. Putting the needle part way through, I throw my thread nearest the needle around it from right to left, drawing up tightly. This gives a heavy corded edge. Proceeding, I round the other end neatly, and when back at the inner end I make two stiches loosely accross the end, buttonholing on these threads a plain loop stitch from left to right, fastening thread well on wrong side. For a tailored buttonhole in heavy goods, I finish both ends with the heavy band. The secret of the substantial and even appearance of my buttonhole is in the way I throw the thread, and my care to have my stitches perfectly even and as short as possible.—Mary Crocker Dickey.

Methodism still furnishes a large number of recruits to other churches. It would be fair to say that two-thirds of our preachers, in reporting revivals, especially from the country charges, inform us that other churches shared in the fruits of the work. Sometimes nearly half the converts go to swell the membership of some other denomination. Whether revivals in other churches ever help the Methodists, we are unable to say. We never see any mention made of such a thing in any of their denominational papers.

Never give way to despondency—look up, and trust in God. "The very cloud that shades the life may be the means of irrigating it" and making it happy and fruitful.

Mr. Thomas B. Morton, the eldest son of the late Rev. Dr. David Morton, the organizer and for sixteen years the efficient Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, has been elected as Treasurer of the Board, succeeding the late Mr. John Querbacker. Mr. Morton is an official member of the Fourth Avenue Church in Louisville, and a successful business man in this city.

A letter in a recent issue of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate states that at the last session of the South Georgia Conference "a general building committee was appointed whose business would be to study and devise plans for building churches after such patterns as would best conserve the interests of the kingdom." The chairman of this committee is Rev. C. M. Ledbetter, and from the letter above quoted we note with pleasure that this committee means business We shall watch carefully the progress it makes, as this is a step in the right direction. The importance of a correct location and a suitable building erected thereon cannot be overestimated, and the mistakes of the past enforce the necessity for the employment of the highest wisdom in our church enterprises along these lines.

Rev. W. H. H. Joyce, Blacksburg, Va., is making an heroic effort to build a church at Blacksburg, in the Baltimore Conference. In this city is located one of the great State Normal Schools, and there is a school community of a thousand, in addition to the population of the city, which numbers a like amount. In this school, which cost $14,000, there are 700 boys. Brother Joyce is striving to interest the Baltimore, Virginia and Holston Conferences in his enterprise, and it is proposed to call the church, when erected, the "Whisner Memorial." This on account of the fact that the late Dr. P. H. Whisner was pastor at Blacksburg when the State decided to erect the Normal, and he was largely instrumental in its being located in that city. One of the inducements which led to its location was the fact that through Dr. Whisner's agency our Methodist educational interests, which had already been established there, were turned over to the State, thereby bringing to pass the project he had in view. There could be no better monument than this memorial church will be to the memory of one who served the Board of Church Extension so unselfishly and zealously for eight years as its Corresponding Secretary.

THE RESTATEMENT.

FIRST PAPER.

Let us try to get a clear and concise view of the whole matter. Let us see, first, What is proposed? Second, Is the thing proposed wrong? Third, Is it wise?

1. What is Proposed—A revision? By no means. Any sort of mending or changing our creed or our "standards of doctrine," or the setting aside or abrogation of any of our articles of religion or other of our standards of doctrines? Let it be distinctly understood that nothing of the like was ordered or proposed by the last General Conference.

This is what was done: "By a total majority of forty-four, twenty-seven clerical and seventeen lay" members, the following paper was adopted:

"While reaffirming our absolute faith in our Twenty-five Articles of Religion, we do not believe that in their present form they meet the existing needs of the church as a statement of the doctrinal system of Evangelical Methodist Arminianism. Believing that the different branches of world-wide Methodism that are represented in the Ecumenical Methodist Conference can and should unite in the preparation of such a statement of our common faith as is needed, and believing that this General Conference should take such steps as may be necessary to secure in the early future the co-operation of other representative Methodist churches in the preparation of a new statement of our faith, we therefore offer the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the College of Bishops be requested to appoint a commission of five members, one of whom shall be a Bishop, to invite other branches of Methodism to unite with us in the preparation of such a statement of our faith, and such an expression of our doctrinal system as is called for in our day; and this commission shall represent our church in the preparation of the same.

"We recommend the passage of the resolution herein proposed with the understanding that the preparation of this new statement of doctrine shall be undertaken by the commission only when such co-operation on the part of other representative branches of Methodism shall have been secured as shall give to the statement prepared an ecumenical character and make it an expression of the faith of worldwide Methodism. This commission shall report back to this General Conference four years hence the result of their labors. We further recommend that the publishing agents be authorized to meet whatever expenses may be incurred in the discharge of their duties."

This, and only this, is what was done by the General Conference relative to a restatement of Methodist doctrine. That the committee reporting this paper was composed of Drs. Tillett, Lambuth and Carter has nothing at all to do with the questions involved. Neither does any utterance on the General Conference floor or elsewhere by Dr. Tillett or Bishops Tigert, Candler, Hendrix or Wilson. No supreme court ever interpreted an act of the legislature in the light of the speeches made in the legislature for and against its passage. No one speech, no dozen of them, can be certainly said to express the views or purposes of the body that passed it.

2. Is the thing wrong? By direction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1900 and of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1902, commissions were appointed by the Bishops of the two churches to prepare new catechisms for use in both communions. Is there anything wrong in this? Has anybody ever suggested that there is in the action above recited anything unconstitutional or opposed to the restrictive rules or in any way subversive of Methodist doctrine or the integrity of Methodism? I have never heard of any such suggestion. These catechisms have been prepared, and copies are before me. They are beyond all question—especially The Standard Catechism—"a new statement of our faith," a restatement of Methodist doctrine.

These catechisms are the authoritative restatement of Methodist doctrine in both the great branches of American Methodism. What is wrong about it?

The Restrictive Rules were adopted by the General Conference of 1808. After that—fifteen years after that—Watson's Institutes, a restatement of Methodist doctrines, appeared and found official acceptance in our church. Later Ralston's Elements of Divinity, and still later Summers's Systematic Theology, both restatements of Methodist doctrine, were gladly accepted throughout Southern Methodism. A layman aptly and wisely suggests that "our faith" is restated weekly in thousands of pulpits throughout Southern Methodism. Is there anything wrong in all this? Are any of these restatements attacks in any sense upon "our present existing and established standards of doctrine," or in any sense violations of our first restrictive rule?

3. Is it wise to order a statement, or restatement—or another statement—of our faith? If the statements and restatements which we now have are altogether adequate, no restatement or other statement is necessary; and yet what harm could come if they were made? But are they altogether adequate?

THE ILLUMINATION OF MRS. HUNTER.

Mrs. Jabez Hunter was a notable housekeeper. So far back as domestic tradition ran she had come of a line of notable housekeepers—women who waged unremitting war not on dirt alone, but upon all that nondescript variety of material which they were accustomed to comprehend under the generic term of "litter."

Her carpets were guiltless of a suspicion of dust, her floors scrubbed to the last degree of whiteness, and her furniture ranged at exactly the symmetrical angles with her spotless walls. Her brass and silver emulated the brightness of the rising sun and even kettles and pans, transformed to mirrors, reflected the keen-eyed countenance of their mistress.

But Mrs. Hunter's energies were by no means exhausted upon inanimate objects. Each Hunter baby by turn had taken its first independent journey into the world with its snowy cambrics protected by a blue calico "creeper," which was replaced on the child's arrival at school age by a checked gingham apron of proportions ample to envelop its small person and to protect its clothes from soil. In vain five-year-old Tom had protested against the objectionable over-garment.

"The boys call me 'sissy,' muvver!" he declared with tears, but Mrs. Hunter's only answer was, "My little boy must learn not to be ashamed of anything that mother thinks best for him to wear."

One had only to scan the row of slippers ranged along the wall of the rear entry, from the number nines of Mr. Hunter himself to the small red morocco of the youngest child, to understand that the sacredness of the Hunter interior, like that of a Hindu temple, demanded the removal of ordinary footwear upon entrance.

Mrs. Hunter was by no means unloving. She would have been ready at any moment, had the emergency arisen, to give her life cheerfully for her husband or children. None the less there was no room in her scheme of living for the small indulgences which might disturb the rigidity of her domestic code. To tolerate anything which might in any manner "make dirt" was to her a moral impossibility.

If her children's innocent desires or secretly cherished tastes conflicted with the housewifely regime, so much the worse for them, since the system admitted of no compromise.

It would be difficult to do justice to Mrs. Hunter's feelings when, after an unaccountably restless night, she found herself one morning unable to rise from her bed. Could it be possible that she was going to be ill? And if so, what would become of the housekeeping? As well might a watch be expected to keep time with its mainspring broken.

She had been accustomed to apply to all "hired help" the single adjective "shiftless." Was it to the hands of such as these that her spotless kitchen and closets, the preparation of the family meals, the care of the children's wardrobe, the supervision of washing and cleaning days, were to be intrusted? She groaned aloud, vainly struggling with the pain and faintness which attended every effort to move. As the day advanced her suffering increased, and by the time the doctor arrived she was in a burning fever.

This proved the beginning of a long and dangerous illness, when through many days of weakness and delirium those who watched at her bedside alternated between hope and despair.

At last the crisis passed, and, with slow and feeble flow, the tides of life turned once more shoreward. For a time after recovering consciousness she was too weak for any concerted thought. All the cords of interest and authority which she had been used to gather in so strong a grasp had slipped unnoticed from her nerveless hands and she felt no impulse to take them up again.

One night she awoke from a more than usually refreshing sleep with a new sense of clearness in her brain. She made no movement and the two neighbor-women who were sharing the care of her supposed her still unconscious. The sound of their low whispering came to her ear with singular distinctness.

"If Jane Hunter hadn't taken a turn for the better, there'd have been a different deal in this house, I can tell you. Of course they'd a' missed her terribly at first. 'Twould have taken a good while to get used to having things move along easier like. Jane's been a good woman—none better, and mighty capable, dear knows! But she's held altogether too tight a rein. To be sure her children have gone on well enough so far, but I wouldn't want to bank on 'em for the next five or ten years. When home is too spick and span for anybody to have a good time in, young folks are bound to go somewhere else for it."

"You're right there, Mary. I made up my mind a good while ago that I'd let my folks do while I'm alive some of the things they'd be certain to do after I was dead!"

For a moment Mrs. Hunter's heart almost stopped beating. Could it be possible that her death would have been in the nature of an unconscious relief to those whom she loved better than her own soul? She throbbed with almost passionate indignation. But slowly the excitement subsided and with pitiless persistency her memory began to retrace long forgotten incidents.

Once more she seemed to be climbing the stairs to the room of Jack, her elder boy. She saw herself pausing in the doorway in surprised displeasure at sight of a great oak branch trained against the wall and holding a number of birds' nests of various sorts and sizes. A few fallen twigs and straws lay upon the spotless matting underneath.

"Jack!"

She saw the apprehensive look on the boy's face as he glanced up from his book of natural history.

"What do you mean by filling the house with litter?"

"Oh, mother! I'm making a collection. See, here's a hang-bird's nest—I've looked for an empty one ever so long. And this—"

"Jack, if you want a collection of nests you can keep it in the barn loft. The house is no place for it."

"But, mother—"

"Don't argue, Jack dear. I simply can't have such messing. Take them out directly."

How plainly she saw the hurt expression of the boy's eyes as he silently obeyed her.

Another picture: this time it was Tom standing in the kitchen doorway with a beautiful collie puppy in his arms.

"Can't I have him, mother? Henry Jarvis will give him to me if you are willing. See, what a little beauty he is!"

The young face was flushed with eagerness—the two pairs of eyes, the boy's and the dog's, seemed to plead in unison.

"I'm sorry, Tom, but you should have remembered what mother has told you before. I can't have a dog tracking up the floors and scratching on all the door-panels. You will have to take him back."

"Oh, mother, please!"

"Tom, I am surprised. Don't you know that when mother has said no you are forbidden to tease?"

The boy turned away with a half sob. His arm tightened around the silken body of the little creature, whose small red tongue licked his hand as if in silent sympathy.

"Mother." This time it was Susie's voice she heard. "Dick and Jessie are coming over after supper, and their cousin Mary Gray." She flushed and hesitated.

"Yes, daughter. What is it?"

"Mother, could we have a fire in the parlor? Jessie's mother always lets her."

"Susie, I have told you often enough that a clean, pleasant kitchen is good enough for children to visit in. I can't have you racing over the parlor carpet."

"But, mother," Mr. Hunter gently protested, "don't you think they might just this once? I'll buy another carpet when that one's gone."

"Jabez, I wonder that you can counsel wastefulness."

Oh, fool and blind that she had been! It was such little, easy things as these that they would have been doing—if she had died.

It was hard to wait for the morning. At last it came, and with the first gray streaks of the dawn Mrs. Hunter heard the careful steps of her husband at the door and his whispered question.

"How is she?"

"Better—better!" she answered for herself in a voice clear though faint. "Oh, Jabez, come here! Tell me that you—you and the children—would have cared if I had never got better."

"Jane—dear—" faltered her husband, horror-stricken. She saw the terror in his face.

"No, no! Don't be frightened! I know what I'm saying. I'm not feverish, but—I've seen things! Jabez, listen! I want the parlor opened—every day, mind! And Tom is to have a dog, and Jack shall bring all out-of-doors into his room if he likes! Oh, this shall be a different place, and I another sort of mother, if God lets me get well!"

Mr. Hunter laid his big hand on his wife's forehead with awkward tenderness. Her own pale fingers closed about it and the eyes of the father and mother met in a new understanding and compact, which was to transform a house to a home, and shape to loving ends the lives of those who dewelt within it.—Mary A. P. Stansberry, in Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1906.

Sensible men never get further from the solution of the troubles of liquor drinking than when they talk of decreasing its consumption by charging dealers a high price for selling it.

If disorderly conduct produced through the illicit sale of liquor in the dark and in small quantities can be cured by selling it in the open and every hour of the day, how would it do to knock the head out of the whiskey barrel and give the men and boys and negroes free access to the medicine?

There is no such thing as growing into grace. We never knew but one preacher who thought so and preached it, and he would not have done it had he not been a man of little sense and less education. We never knew but one man who undertook the work, and he confessed that he made a failure.

It is stated in certain quarters that the demoralization of labor occasioned by "blind tigers" can be remedied by repealing the prohibitory law and substituting "high license." That is to say: Take the blind off the tiger and turn him loose in the streets. The thing to do is to kill the tiger.

Dr. Lovett of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate asks: "Can it be true, as we have been gravely told by an editor of a religious paper recently, that the Christian Church has gotten its conception of immortality from Aristotle, and not from the Bible?" Dear, Doctor, are you surprised at the statement?

All the talk of educating the negroes and making good citizens of them will amount to nothing so long as the temptation to indulge their passion for liquor is ever before them. And that temptation can never be removed until white men are forced to abandon the sale. An educated negro is no better than the most ignorant of his race, unless his education is sanctified by religion. Everybody might see this if only he would look around to see how many villains there are among educated white people. Education no more restrains a bad negro than it does a bad white man.

MARKING A RELIGIOUS EPOCH.

At a recent Monday morning meeting of Boston Congregational ministers the subject of an address by one Dr. George A. Gordon was, "What We Have Left of Religion Without Miracles." According to the essayist miracles are in no sense essential to the Christian religion, and we have left all that is worth having in religion, though miracles be left out. He does not deny that miracles have occurred—he simply holds "that they have not been proved." If the account of the address which came under our observation represented the position of the speaker, it is impossible for us to see how he can hold to the truth of Christianity, and doubt the essential facts on which Christianity is built.

Dr. Gordon doubts the "immaculate conception of Christ" because it is not proved to his satisfaction. What proof does he demand? He tells us that "only two of the evanglists mention it, and that St. Paul seems never to have heard of it." Suppose only two did mention it? These two affirm it distinctly and without reserve. Did they tell the truth? Matthew assures us that Jesus was conceived of the Holy Ghost, and that it was done in fulfillment of the word of the Lord as declared by the prophet. No piece of history could be recorded more concisely, or with clearer evidence of truth on its surface than St. Luke relates the angel's interview with Mary at the time he made known to her the purpose of God. Now, all this is literal history, or it is not. If it is history, it is true. If it is not, then nothing set forth in the New Testament can be relied on.

It is true that St. Paul does not specifically allude to the virgin birth of Christ, nor in so many words set it forth as an article of faith, but all his writings are based on the divinity of our Lord, and certain expressions occur which he could not have consistently used had he never heard of the incarnation. What did he mean when he said, "God was manifest in the flesh?" What did he mean when he said: "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh?"

Now, because two evangelists fail to mention the matter, and Paul seems never to have heard of it, the essayist concludes that the early Christians seemed to have held the alleged miracle as non-essential. But what about the teachings involved in the statements of the two evangelists who do mention it? They cannot be set aside by a wave of the hand, simply because two other evangelists were not directed to give the details of our Lord's birth.

Dr. Gordon doubts the literal resurrection of our Lord. "He maintains that the important part of the teaching of Paul regarding it is that Christ continued to exist after his crucifixion." That is an important thing, for "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." But the form in which Christ continued to exist after the crucifixion is also an important thing. Dr. Gordon admits the fact of crucifixion. "He must also admit the fact of his burial. If so, how does he account for the disposition of his body? It was not found in the grave "early in the morning of the first day of the week." If he did not rise from the dead, as the history asserts, then, either the disciples or other persons conveyed his body to an unknown and to this day undiscovered place.

Our Lord appeared to the disciples after his death—he walked with them and talked with them. It was Luke, not Paul, who said "he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of the disciples forty days." Was he with them only in spirit? If so, the transfiguration was vastly different from what it was when he manifested forth his glory on the mount. Our Lord sets at rest such supposition. Three days after his crucifixion he came into the midst of "the eleven, and them that were with them," and they were "terrified," supposing they had seen a spirit. And Jesus quieted them saying, "Behold my hands, my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see: for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." The body was just as it appeared to be—real humanity. Christ had risen from the dead.

But Dr. Gordon says, "that, since the ministry of Christ was so very long ago, it is quite probable that these stories of miracles have grown up around his life, with no foundation of fact to rest upon, just as fabulous stories grow around the lives of human heroes:" a plain contradiction of St. Peter, who declares that he had not followed cunningly devised fables when he made known the power and coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, but was an eye-witness of his majesty.

We find it difficult to restrain expressions of contempt for one who acknowledges the truth of history in one particular, and denies it in another, for no other reason apparently than because it conflicts with human experience or some scientific hypothesis. If Matthew told the truth about the crucifixion, on what ground can his veracity be called in question when, in the same connection, he gives the details of the resurrection?

To the young men who were present, it is said, Dr. Gordon's address "came as if it were the lifting of a burden." It disclosed to them "a way of getting out of a position which they felt was difficult to defend." St. Paul long since showed the way of meeting objection to the superhuman in religion. Instead of inventing an argument to quiet a disbeliever, or to show him how to get around a difficulty, he boldly said: "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

Christianity might have lived had our Lord never healed the sick, or raised the dead, or cast out devils, but without God manifest in the flesh, and a risen Christ, there never could have been any Christianity.

We are told that Dr. Gordon's address is regarded by some as "marking a religious epoch." That is to say, the truth has at last dawned upon the world.

THE GREED FOR GAIN.

The greed for gain is almost universal in commercial life, and as that life largely controls throughout the country it may be justly said that all classes are more or less affected. In every direction we see a mad rush for money. The men of every town, both individually and through systematic organization, are reaching out after the local trade, while the cities, more pretentious, and with larger capital, compete with each other in the hope of securing and controlling the wholesale business. Great fortunes are being piled up, and millionaires are counted by the hundreds.

All this is right in itself. There is no sin in trade,—no sin in being rich, or in making efforts to get rich. But the facilities and modern methods through which so many have accumulated vast fortunes in a comparatively short time have indicated to men of speculative mind and lax morals the possibilities of trade, and, inspired by the hope of speedily making themselves rich, they fall easy prey to temptation, and either plunge on their own capital, or use the trust funds of others. In this way many come to grief, for speculation and outright gambling are not always successful. How many make fortunes and are never detected in the improper use of money belonging to other people there is no means of knowing.

To-day's short methods of getting rich are the outgrowth of the greed for gain—a greed not always prompted by the love of money for its own sake, but for the sake of that to which money lifts them—place and power. That gained, the ambition of many is satisfied. With them money more than talks, it controls, and they are both the servant and the master of their means. Others, caring little for place and power, are allured by the prospect of commanding the luxuries of life. To live in fine houses with many servants, to clothe themselves in purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day, are the things desired. In all such cases money is the ruin of the soul. Everything in life is subordinated to lust, and to those who have thus fallen St. James says: "Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton, ye have nourished your hearts as in the day of slaughter."

Another class seeks gain for the love of money, pure and simple. They care nothing for rich men's advantages, nor for life's luxuries and pleasures. To accumulate and hoard until the number of dollars is past reckoning, is the ruling passion. They will be rich at all hazards. Putting their money to no good use—living in squalor themselves while gloating over their hidden coffers—the gold and silver cankers; and James says, "their rust shall be a witness against them, and shall eat their flesh as it were fire." They allow the wretched thirst for gold to damn their souls forever.

Others, with the best intention, and with humble reliance on divine Providence, follow their daily avocation, and by diligence and economy accumulate and lay by. They honor God with their substance, and in turn God blesses them with increase. But all are not able to stand prosperity. Like one of old, they "wax fat and kick against God." As riches increase they set their hearts on them, and before they are aware of it they not only love money, but are in the clutches of covetousness, an enemy of both God and man. All who give way to the love of money "err from the faith and pierce themselves through with many sorrows."

When it is understood that it requires no great amount of money to corrupt the soul, or turn it away from God, we see the importance of the frequent cautions on the subject. Should the whole country become affected by the insatiable greed for gain as are the great commercial centers, it will happen with us as it did in Israel in the days of Malachi. God will be neglected and robbed, for the tithes will be withheld, and men will say: "Who is the Almighty that we should serve Him, or what profit shall we have if we pray unto him?" We have no assurance of safety except in the abounding grace of God, and the constant use of worldly means in glorifying him and doing good to our fellow-men.

PERSONALS.

The address of Rev. Jno. C. Sligh, pastor of Louisiana Ave. Church, is 3638 Constance St.; phone No. 1836, uptown.

Rev. W. R. Williams says: "Everything goes well with us at Ashland." And we take it for granted that Ashland is well pleased with Brother Williams.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, of Glenmora, La., is closing his year's work in fine spirit. The work has prospered under his care, and he is hopeful and happy.

Rev. S. A. Brown, of Byhalia, Miss., desires us to say that Bishop Hendrix will preach in the new church on Nov. 22d, instead of 23d, as previously announced. A cordial invitation to attend is hereby acknowledged.

We regret to learn of the serious illness of our friend and brother, E. P. Mackie, a faithful and efficient official member of the First Church. He is suffering with pneumonia, and on Sunday evening last was reported to be in a critical condition. We trust his valuable life may be spared.

At Carrollton Avenue Church, corner of Carrollton Avenue and Elm Street, at 3:30 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 11, Rev. S. A. Smith, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, will deliver an address. All interested in the temperance cause are cordially invited to attend.

We thank Rev. J. H. Felts, who will look after the entertainment of the North Mississippi Conference, at Corinth, for a kind note, giving us the name and address of the family with whom we are to abide during the session. All persons interested will please read Brother Felts' notice in another column.

Rev. W. G. Harbin, of Booneville, is "closing up a splendid year." Everything is overpaid, and on Sunday, Oct. 28, he raised $75 for our Orphans' Home. Every branch of church work is in good condition. About seventy members have been added to the church, most of them on profession of faith. Good for Brother Harbin and Booneville!

A good brother, in sending a subscription to the ADVOCATE, is pleased to accompany it with these kind and appreciative words: "Please send the dear old ADVOCATE into another home. Wherever it goes, its weekly visits are hailed with appreciation, for it brings food for the soul, and sound doctrine for the 'people called Methodists.' There is no heresy or higher criticism admitted to its worthy pages, or articles of skepticism which should have no place in our Church organs."

Through a note from Rev. R. H. Wynn, of Ruston, La., we learn of the death of Sister Carter, wife of Dr. C. W. Carter, of Arcadia, La. She had been sick last March, and passed away on Tuesday, Oct. 30. The end was peaceful and triumphant. Her husband and all her children were with her at the last. Brother Wynn conducted the funeral exercises, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Arcadia. We extend to the bereaved family our sympathy, and pray that they may be abundantly sustained by the promises and hopes of the gospel. We hope to have a suitable memoir in due time.

THE ILLNESS OF BISHOP GALLOWAY.

Many thousands of people were thrown into great anxiety last week by the announcement of the critical illness of Bishop Galloway at his home in Jackson, Miss. The Bishop has not been in his usual robust health for some time, but there was no occasion for alarm. This last illness came upon him suddenly, and his physician and family feared the worst. He has rallied however, and at this writing is doing well. Let the whole Church unite in prayer in his behalf.

GOOD PRAYER MEETINGS.

Probably the best indicators of the spiritual condition of a church are its prayer meetings and its contribution boxes. The first one denotes the condition of the reservoir which supplies the spiritual force, and the second indicates the outflow of Christian benevolence and of Christian activities. The church that has not the heart to give a fair percentage of its income is not likely to labor very effectively for the Master.

There are several elements essential to a good prayer meeting. It is no more to be hastily extemporized than a strong, nutritious sermon; it requires careful preparation. The leader of the meeting ought to select some topic that should be the trunk-thought of the meeting. A passage of Scripture, or some vital doctrine, or something bearing on experimental religion or Christian work, should be chosen and announced on the previous Sabbath. Such a topic gives both unity and profit to the remarks and the prayers. It helps to prevent the aimless wanderings in prayer and the wearisome repetition of stereotyped talk by some good people whose ideas have been worn threadbare. The more thoroughly the leader prepares himself, the better. He is then likely to be brief and sententious; for the man who has nothing to say is the man who takes the longest time to say it. Above all, let the leader seek the baptism of the Holy Spirit before he enters the desk. His prayer then will be an inspiration and a blessing. I never could see why any leader should occupy more than fifteen minutes—or twenty at the outside—in getting the meeting well under way. Then let him turn everything over to the people and leave it there. It is their service, and they are responsible for its success or failure.

If the leader should prepare for the service, why should not the attendants do the same? They know what the topic is, and should give it forethought and have something to say. When it is said, then stop. In a large meeting a five-minute rule ought to be observed, and the most pithy remarks need not occupy more than two minutes. A long speech followed by a long prayer by the same person is usually an imposition on the meeting. The prayers given us in Scripture are uniformly brief and to the point, and there is a rebuke for verbosity in what the Master said about "much speaking."

Every devotional meeting of a church is essentially a family gathering, and there should be the utmost freedom for every one of the family, male or female, to take part. If any devout mother in Israel has a request to make, or a good word to say, or a fervent prayer in her heart, let her have free utterance. The leader who would silence her would have silenced Anna for prophesying and Priscilla for teaching and faithful Persis for "laboring in the Lord." There is never likely to be any excess of female voices in church prayer meetings; but I honestly think that our meetings lose more in spiritual power by the silence of godly women than they ever would by the indiscreet utterances of forwardness or garrulity. Our lady missionaries who return from abroad make most edifying addresses in our social meetings.

While the topic of the evening may in most cases command the most attention, yet that should not put an embargo on anyone who has any fitting word to say, or request to offer, or experience to relate. Above all things freedom from cut-and-dried routine and formality. Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. No timid soul should be discouraged, and no fervid soul should be chilled in the free, warm and devout intercourse of Christ's disciples with each other and with their Master.

Prayer meetings are too often diverted from their great, holy purpose by those who have some "axe to grind" or pet object to present. During my long pastorate I was constantly urged to permit some good brother to present his "cause" at the weekly meeting. Sometimes I gladly consented where the person and the object had a right to be heard and the people would be profited. But I often had to say to importunate applicants, "Please remember that hundreds of God's people have just one hour in the week for their united spiritual devotion, and every moment is precious. You must not seek to rob them for your own benefit."

After all, the main feature of the best prayer meetings is the presence and the power of the blessed Spirit. Then every voice in prayer, in sacred song, in exhortation or address, becomes but a vehicle for that Spirit to speak through. Such prayer meetings do not depend on numbers to give them attraction. In such meetings souls are quickened, the sad are comforted, the weak are strengthened, and the impenitent converted. In such meetings revivals begin, or are carried forward. They are the joy of every faithful pastor, and the spiritual "electric power house" (if I may use this familiar term) which propels the beneficent activities of the church. What hinders every church from having a good prayer meeting?—Dr. Cuyler, in The Presbyterian.

"Increase Your Yields" of Grain.

As 20 bushels of wheat takes from the soil approximately 14 pounds of phosphoric acid, 35 pounds of nitrogen and 18 pounds of potash—the necessity of using fertilizers is very plain. Green and stable manure can be sometimes profitably used on wheat, but then they are usually poorly balanced, and on some soils, those very rich in nitrogen, for example, would be positively injurious.

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers,

on the contrary, can be, and are, adapted in composition and quantity of ingredients to any soil or crop. Those most used, perhaps, contain 8 or 10 per cent. phosphoric acid, 2 or 3 per cent. nitrogen and 2 to 4 per cent. potash. Particularly on some clay soils, these furnish a well-balanced ration for the wheat. On some clay and most sandy lands, however, fully twice this percentage of potash should be used, while many soils need nitrogen. Buy only the high-grade VIRGINIA-CAROLINA FERTILIZERS, and you cannot make a mistake if your seed selection and cultivation are proper. They will increase your yields per acre."

THE RESTATEMENT.

First—Are "our present existing and established standards of doctrine," in their unexplained form, "without note or comment," altogether adequate?

What do we mean by "standards of doctrine?" What do they include? I shall not discuss this much-discussed and never-settled question. For sake of argument, I shall grant the widest possible inclusion: (1) The Twenty-five Articles, (2) Mr. Wesley's First Fifty-two Sermons, and (3) Wesley's Notes on the New Testament.

What shall we say of the Twenty-five Articles? Let it he distinctly understood that this writer does most positively and unequivocally and unreservedly accept as true the Twenty-five Articles as they are understood by Methodists everywhere. But do these Articles adequately express to people who are not Methodists the real faith of us Methodists? Let us look into two of them. Article 1 says that God is "without body or parts." By this we understand and fully believe that "God is a spirit." But if an infidel should ask: "How do you know absolutely that a spirit has neither body or parts, and that it is absolutely true of God as a spirit?" we could only say: "O, these words were never intended to tell what a spirit is—the Bible does not—nobody knows—these words mean only that 'God is a spirit,' and we all believe that.

These words were evidently put in the Article to guard against an anthropomorphism into which some of the early Christian fathers fell. Dr. Summers indicates that the danger of anthropomorphism is so slight that it hardly needs to be guarded against, reminding us that the only Christians who believe it are the Mormons. Vol. I. pp. 79-80. I heartily agree with Dr. Summers, and I only mean to suggest that if our Article 1 had simply said in Scriptural phrase "God is a spirit," it would have more truly expressed Methodist belief than to say he is "without body or parts." His spirituality is not literally stated in the article, these words being the only suggestion of it. The infidel would retort: "Where is your church's authoritative statement for such an interpretation?" Article 11 says that Jesus died to "reconcile the Father to us." The Calvinist will say: "That is our belief—God, a great sovereign, was made absolutely angry with us by our sin, and Jesus by his death has simply put this angry Sovereign in a good humor with us." We Methodists would be compelled to reply: "We believe the statement of the article, but we do not understand it just that way; we understand that phrase to mean merely that Jesus, by his death, did expiate our guilt, and that we cannot accept the theory of the atonement which teaches that he saves us by merely setting an example for us." Then the Calvinist would ask us: "Where is your church's authoritative statement of your Arminian interpretation of this Calvinistic article?"

Are they clear and easily understood? Written in the English of four centuries ago, and in the theological terminology of an era long past, they are of necessity obscure, and need extensive commentaries to make them plain. Read them before any ordinary audience, and ask for explanations, if you would be convinced.

Are they full enough? What do they tell of justification? Very little; and nothing at all of its nature. What of regeneration? Nothing at all. What of the witness of the Spirit? Not a word. What of sanctification? Not a syllable. These specifically Methodist doctrines, i. e., doctrines stressed by Methodists, are passed over, some in perfect silence, and others with confessedly inadequate presentations.

These Twenty-five Articles—at least twenty-four of them—were prepared by Mr. Wesley in 1784, by reducing the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England, cutting out such words, phrases, sentences and articles as he felt that he ought not to ask Methodists to endorse, and making some changes to suit Methodist belief. The Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England "were prepared chiefly by Cranmer and Ridley, on the basis of the Angsburg Confession" in 1553. (Summers' Systematic Theology, Vol. 1, p. 39.) The Angsburg Confession had been prepared in 1530, by Melancthon. The modes of thought and expression, and the very language of our Twenty-five Articles, is therefore nearly four hundred years old, more than half a century older than the language of our Authorized Version of the Bible. We accept as wise a revised version of the Bible; why should we object to a restatement of the teachings contained in our Twenty-five Articles?

Observe: There is no proposition, no suggestion, no purpose of the General Conference, or of anybody else, to set aside, or even revise, or in any way change the Twenty-five Articles; but we ask an authoritative statement of Methodist interpretation of them, and such a statement of other Methodist doctrines not alluded to in these articles. It may be asked: Why not change them? I answer: For the same reason that Mr. Wesley refused to change their language, though he cut out so much of the original document.

Some are afraid that an authoritative statement of Methodist interpretation of the articles will mean a creed more binding than the genius of Methodism contemplates. This fear is voiced by an article in the October number of our Review, written by Dr. Denny. There is no reason to suppose that any interpretative statement, or restatement of any sort would or could become binding in any sense or degree other than the Twenty-five Articles themselves are now binding upon us. I rejoice in the boasted intellectual freedom of Methodism, and would not see it abridged. But why should we not be as free with the new statement and the old as we have been with the old alone? It seems, therefore that those who oppose the restatement are widely divided: one party afraid of too much liberty of thought, and the other afraid of too little. Both fears are equally groundless. Methodist teaching is in no danger. Agitation will only reveal more clearly and strongly the truth.

A NOTRE DAME LADY'S APPEAL.

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbagos, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box 556, Notre Dame, Ind.

Do you know what a "Lard stomach" is?

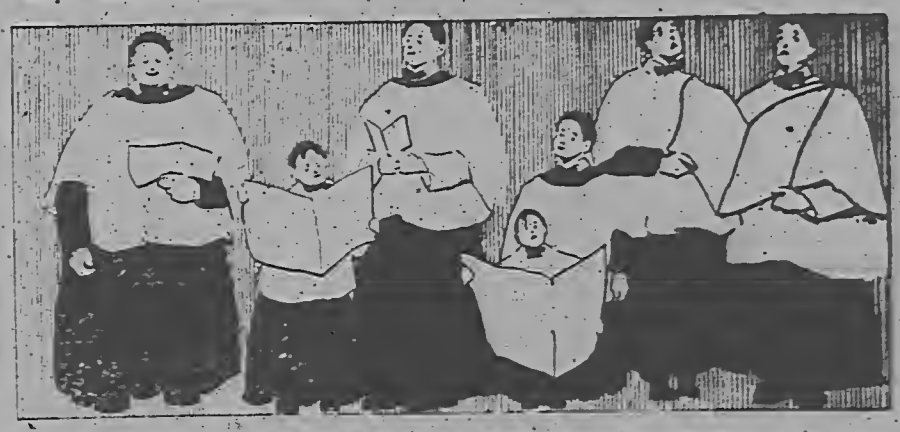
Indigestion promptly follows the use of lard as lard is made from hog-fat, and is greasy and indigestible. Some future day, when people are wiser and healthier, lard, for edible purposes, will be scarcely used; but, until then, we suppose people will continue to suffer from "lard stomachs."

The most perfect shortening in the world is Cottolene. It is a pure vegetable product, containing only pure, refined cotton seed oil and choice selected beef suet. It will make your food palatable, digestible, nourishing and healthful, which is more than any one can truthfully say of lard.

Cottolene is a clean product. Only the most modern and hygienic methods are employed in its manufacture. Its purity is your surety. The quality of Cottolene is always uniform and dependable.

Every good grocer sells Cottolene; and those who use it themselves, recommend it. It comes only in sealed, white pails, with a red label and band. In the center of the label is our trade mark—a steer's head in a cotton plant wreath. Do not accept a substitute. Cottolene is the original and only improvement upon lard as a shortening. It has no satisfactory substitute—except on paper.

Use one-third less. Cottolene, being richer than lard or cooking butter, one-third less is required. It is, therefore, economical.



COTTOLENE was granted a GRAND PRIZE (highest possible award) over all other cooking fats at the recent Louisiana Purchase Exposition; and food cooked with COTTOLENE another GRAND PRIZE.

"Home Helps" a book of 300 Choice recipes, edited by Mrs. Rorer, is yours for a 2 cent stamp, if you address The N. K. Fairbank Company, Chicago.

A NEW FEATURE—The patent air-tight top on this pail is for the purpose of keeping COTTOLENE clean, fresh and wholesome; it also prevents it from absorbing all disagreeable odors of the grocery, such as fish, oil, etc.

H. G. DAVIS, P. E.

PONCHATOULA, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We closed our meeting at this place last night of two weeks' duration with good results. We began with our Fourth Quarterly Conference, 13th ult. Rev. R. W. Tucker preached two strong sermons. Rev. J. L. Morrell, of Hawkinsville, Ga., was with me, preaching twice a day the balance of the meeting.

Many of the church members have been lifted to a higher spiritual life, several backsliders reclaimed, and twenty-two added to the church, eighteen of whom were grown people. Five came to us from the Baptist Church. Our church has been greatly strengthened on all lines as a result of this meeting, for which we give God all the glory. We have received to date one hundred and two members. Yours in Christ, F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.

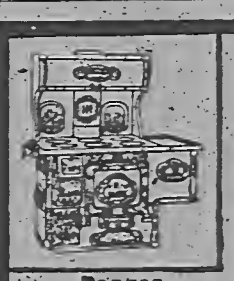
LESSON FOR NOV. 18, 1896.

JESUS BEFORE CAIAPHAS.
Matt. xxvi. 57-68.

Golden Text: "He is despised and rejected of men."—Isa. liii. 3.

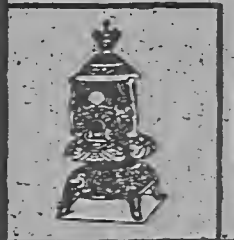
At last, the plans of the enemies of the Lord were executed. With the assistance of Judas Iscariot, they had come with a band of soldiers and a number of servants of the high priest and laid hold on Jesus and made him a prisoner. His friends, his disciples whom he had named apostles, had sought safety in flight. Surrounded by his guard, he was taken back to the city, where the scribes and the elders were already assembled, awaiting his arrival. Jesus knew what to expect, for on entering the house of Caiaphas he must bid farewell to justice and mercy at the door. Every student of the Scriptures well knows the character of the men composing the court before which Jesus was taken. When John the Baptist began his ministry and all Jerusalem and Judea went out to hear him, and seeing some of the scribes and Pharisees among the multitude, John said: "O ye generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" Also the Master, in the first part of the great Sermon on the Mount, said to those that came to hear him: "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and the Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." So the court, composed of such men, was not in conformity to usage at all. Caiaphas began by questioning the Lord with the view of getting an indictment from his own lips. He asked Jesus about his disciples and his doctrine. Jesus told him, or rather reminded him, of the publicity of his teaching; that he did or said nothing in secret, and that any of the great number that heard could tell him of his doctrine, meaning that it was all so simple and plain that "the wayfaring man, though a fool, should not err therein." Caiaphas was the whole court; the entire Sanhedrin was under his control, and as he had said that it was best that one man should die than that the whole nation perish, it showed that he was impelled by political motives, rather than religious. Yet the Sanhedrin was supposed to be a religious court. Behind this outward show of zeal, there was a deep feeling of jealousy and hatred toward Jesus, which was evidently caused by their having been shown their hypocrisy. It is the nature of man to be angry when told of his faults.

Caiaphas was the judge, jury and prosecuting attorney; and the verdict had been found beforehand. It was their work now to procure witnesses whose testimony would fit the case, as the result had been predetermined. In their casting about for witnesses they found one that testified that Jesus had said that he would destroy the temple and build it again in three days, which was false. Jesus had, on one occasion, in speaking to his disciples of his being dead and rising again, said: "Destroy this temple, and it shall be raised again on the third day." Jesus made no reply, "as a sheep before his shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."



Caiaphas, eager to hasten the so-called trial, and using the authority vested in the office of high priest, then put the Lord on his most solemn oath. Said the priest: "I adjure thee, by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God." According to law and usage, Jesus was compelled to reply, and he did, saying that he was the Christ, and that hereafter he would be the Judge, and the deeds done in the body would be the witnesses, and he would see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. On hearing these words, the high priest rent his clothes, and said that any further testimony was unnecessary—Jesus had spoken blasphemy. He called on the other members of the Sanhedrin for their opinion, and they said he was worthy of death. Then the Lord of Glory was subjected to the most shameful indignity—they struck him and even spat in his face. We cannot realize that our Lord, whom we love and worship, had to pass through such a trial. This must have been the time spoken of by the prophet when he said: "There was none to pity." They had passed the sentence, but they had not the power to execute it; so our next study will be of his trial, a political one, before the Roman procurator.

Where were they who had followed Jesus and had been taught by him—the twelve whom he called apostles—where were they? Fled—scattered—each seeking his own safety. Peter did not run far. A safe distance away, he stopped and turned, and as they led Jesus toward the city, Peter followed, never shortening the distance until the priest's house was reached. From one account we learn that one of the disciples, supposed to have been John, also turned and followed the guard that took the Lord a prisoner, and that as he was acquainted in the house of the high priest, he went in unchallenged, and afterward came out and took Peter in with him. It would have been better for Peter had he remained away. Peter denied three times that he knew the Lord. Many professing Christians have denied the Lord under less distressing circumstances than surrounded Peter. Peter was emotional. After he had denied three times, the Lord turned and looked at Peter, and that one look from his Lord and Master was enough; repentance began at once. He went out of the palace and wept bitterly. Away from the Lord, and with his great grief and sorrow! All this from Peter—yet there were still in him those qualities which compose the "rock" on which the church of Jesus Christ is built: "Repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ."



We often wonder in what direction those disciples that were not mentioned took their flight. James had become separated from his brother. Silent and gentle Andrew must have made his way home. Matthew was accustomed to mingle with men in everyday life and keep his inward thoughts unspoken, preserving a calm exterior, however much there was commotion within.

The deepest sorrow passes, the storm of distress and keen disappointment is in time calmed by gathering up the best of what is left; so we are told that they were all gathered together again, after the crucifixion, and how naturally they should be drawn to that upper room that was replete with so many sweet and tender recollections of the dear one that was gone, as they thought, never to return. All came together, but Judas. Poor Judas, he was repentant, too—but, alas! it was too late, and it was repentance unto death, not unto life.

From Peter let us learn the truth as Jesus gave it—that if we confess him before men he will confess us before the Father and all the holy angels. From Judas let us learn that religion and avarice cannot occupy the same place in our hearts—"Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

NOTE FROM BROTHER CUNNINGHAM.

Dear Dr. Boswell: The mails have brought me many letters of sympathy. God bless the brethren for their words of fraternal love. Each letter deserves a special reply, but this would prove too much for my shattered nerves.

How are the faithful fallen! Cunningham, Jones, Weir—the weeping, yet rejoicing trio! Ours is a common sorrow. We old men know our loss, and can enter into full sympathy with each other.

J. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Tupelo, Miss.

REVIVAL AT BATON ROUGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Our revival closed last Sunday (Oct. 28) night, after running a period of three weeks. It was a success in every particular. I hardly know how to estimate the results, since man is not a competent judge of God's work. Many promised to lead a better life. Scores of family altars were erected, and about twenty-two souls were added to the church. The preaching was done by Revs. R. O. Wier, E. K. Means, Henry Harper, J. L. Sutton and the pastor.

Fraternally yours,

A. I. TOWNSLEY.

THE WAGES OF LABOR FOR GOD.

The desire of payment for what we do for God is not always selfish and worthy of rebuke. Of course that which God has done for us freely and in love should receive acknowledgment and return in the same spirit. Yet God does not withhold recompense which in a sense may be termed wages. It is proper to desire His rewards as indications that He is pleased with us, and the payments which He makes us in one or another way are such. He would not give them if it were not right for us to accept them and use them. So it is a mistake to insist that we may not look for recognition in this form of our Christian service.

But if we allow ourselves to feel that we can earn the divine favor in such a sense that we have a right to feel cheated if we do not receive it, we have taken a position toward God wholly indefensible and full of mischievous tendencies. As our salvation is His free gift, so our devoted service to Him must be our free gift, even when He condescends to reward it.

The wages which He pays take various forms. Some are external blessings, the comforts and possessions which He supplies and which make life not only tolerable but enjoyable. Others are the gifts of the Spirit to our hearts, the permanent consciousness of His companionship, His overruling protection and guidance, the assurance of a blessed future, the opportunities of service and the privilege of imparting to others as much as possible of the knowledge of His character and love which we have made parts of our own experience. Compared with these spiritual wages, external gifts, precious though they are, are trifling.

Is there not here a suggestion in regard to common life? Is not the laborer in the field, the shop, or at the desk enriched if he remember that blind if he fail to bear the same truth in mind? It is the payment of mutual confidence and trust, of sympathy and co-operation, of fellowship and interest between man and man, which is essential to the truest welfare of humanity. It is well that the service should be rendered and that money or other recompense should be paid therefor, but he who comes closest the worth of service is more than its form? Is not he who pays wages to his employers or his workmen never forgets that the ideal labor is based upon good will, and that the ideal attitude of the employer of others is that of consideration, courtesy and Christian justice, alike in principle and in details.

We believe that slowly and imperfectly, with many setbacks and often apparently with entire abandonment, yet steadily and surely this ideal condition of things is coming to pass among men. To look back over the centuries is to behold a troubled, confused and often disappointing history of the mutual relations of those connected with the world's work. But it also is to be convinced, unless one be dull of vision, that the ideal by degrees is being recognized, and that more vigorous efforts than ever before are being made today to attain it.—The Congregationalist.

Catarrh is Very Dangerous

Now is the time to cure Catarrh Read my Special Trial Offer.

Ninety per cent of humanity are unconsciously breeding and nursing germs of diseases in their systems, like neglected gardens growing weeds instead of flowers. Your system is like a garden. It is the natural hot bed for breeding millions of germs of disease. Did you ever see a garden where all the weeds were destroyed one year but that they also made their appearance again next year? If you could destroy the seed of every weed in that garden this year the air if nothing else, will carry more seeds in it next year.

Air is the agency that carries the germs of disease into the head and air passages and it must be the agency to remove them. Let the weeds grow in your garden and they will choke and ruin all that is good. Let the germs of disease continne to multiply in the air passages of your head, throat, and lungs unmolested and you are doing far worse. You are destroying the system of a noble human being worth more to you than all the gardens in the world. You must keep on weeding.

I am making a common sense offer to the readers of this paper. Carefully read it, ponder over it, then act quickly, confidently, and be assured that you will be fairly and honestly dealt with.

CATARRH SUFFERERS

Should realize the fact that Catarrh is a very dangerous ailment. It is the beginning of nearly all diseases of the head, throat and larynx, and is the forerunner of Consumption.

First a slight cold, acute in form, being neglected becomes worse, finally chronic, and leads to still worse conditions. How important it is that every person consider this matter seriously for themselves.

Southern people are greatly affected with colds, more so than Northern people. This is due to the milder climate in which people go more thinly clad in proportion to Northern people. Various causes lead to this condition. I am offering the little vest pocket doctor that you should have and carry with you and thus be ready for all emergencies.

I offer you the opportunity to try it for five days free. What more could you ask? I am willing to give you the benefit of the doubt. I do not want your money unless you are pleased with the treatment. The only way you can find out whether it will suit you or not, is to send for it. Try it. If it does not suit you return it. It is all simple and easy. See my special trial offer.

Symptoms of Catarrh of the Head and Throat.

Have you any of the following symptoms? If so, you have Catarrh in some form, and should immediately send for a Medicator on trial free.

MR. J. [illegible] was born near Pascagoula, Jackson County, Miss., Dec. 18, 1835, and died at his home in Copiah County, Miss., May 3, 1906. He was married to Miss Mary Sellers, daughter of Rev. D. B. Sellers, in Clark County, Miss., Jan. 15, 1854. He was happily converted, and in 1857 joined the church. He enlisted in the Confederate service in 1862; was wounded at Iuka, Miss., and was never able after that to do any more active service. He [illegible] to his Christian duties—leading prayer meetings, and superintending Sunday-schools, and doing whatever his hands found to do for his Master. He was the father of ten children, five of whom survive him, who, with their aged mother, mourn their loss. Death came to him unexpected, but his lamp was found trimmed and burning. He had often been heard to say he was ready to go at any time, and so he was. He the drapery of his couch around him and lay down to pleasant dreams. His seat in the church is vacant, and we feel sad to remember that never again will we see him here face to face. To the members of his family let us say—prepare to meet him in the bright beyond, and when the mists have cleared away you will know why the Father saw best to take him.

C. M. MARTIN, P. C.

Mr. L. C. SUGG was born near Amory, Miss., in 1866. He moved to Buena Vista in 1891, where he has lived since. After an illness of four months, during which he displayed remarkable fortitude and Christian resignation, he was called to his eternal reward Oct. [illegible]. He was faithful in his duty to his home, his country and his God. A kind and indulgent father, pleasant and entertaining in his home, which was noted for its hospitality, he was public spirited, loyal and patriotic. He enlisted when a mere youth in the Confederate army and made a faithful soldier. He has been a steward of our church here for many years, and was faithful in the discharge of the duties of that office. His pastor always felt that he could call on Brother Sugg for any service or favor. He was an officer and an upright member of the Masonic Fraternity, and was buried with the honors pertaining to that order. His loss will long be keenly felt. He leaves four children, two sons and two daughters. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors."

RECOGNIZING OPPORTUNITY.

Multitudes of men and women are waiting for an opportunity to do some great thing when the opportunity of life is at hand. The difference between a successful and an unsuccessful man is largely in the ability to recognize opportunity. Others had as good an opportunity to lead the great spiritual reformation in Great Britain as John Wesley, and some may have had the ability. But he saw the opportunity and they were blind.

The door was open for others to discover the new world, but Columbus had eyes to see what could be done. Professor Morse was not the only man capable [illegible] electric telegraph, but he was [illegible] man who saw the opportunity. When he pleaded for the privilege of stretching wire from Baltimore to Washington his scheme was [illegible] visionary and impracticable by [illegible] sent first educated men.

One man thinks that if he had great wealth, or if he were a senator or governor, he would do some great thing for his generation. He sees not while that he can do. The [illegible] of the Young Men's Christian Association had no great wealth, position or genius, but he saw the opportunity and heard the voice of God. Dwight L. Moody [illegible] earning more money for [illegible] when he began to work for his fellow men. But using the talent he had it grew [illegible] stronger, until the little one became a giant.

Said one sometimes I would
That I might wield some power for good
That I some wonderful [illegible] could Speak the thoughts and words of fire
That I could harvest ages mix
With pen on sacred walls [illegible]
The chimes of heaven the hour
That should from sin mine thoughts redeem
And O that some rare gems were mine
Whereby to carve the face divine

Another took the same words
We use each day—
The words wherewith we curse or bless.
We curse or pray.
And [illegible] with them sang a song that through
The [illegible] wrath rings
And slumbering spirits that hear wake
To noble things.

How strange it seems that we do not see the open door which stands before us until it was too late. As many doors are open today as the men of the past found in their day. They are close at hand. We do not cross the sea to find them. It is not necessary to go far. They are here. The inventions have not all been made. Truth has not all been developed and published. Rich gems have not all been [illegible]. The world is full of chances to do things. The field is great. The fields are white already to the harvest. "Lift up your eyes," said the Savior to his followers, "and look on the fields." The man who does what his hand finds to do is the man who grows. His talent is small at first. He sees but a few chances. He sees little in the work before him. But as he does the work his faculties expand, his views enlarge, his knowledge increases, his field widens, and before he is aware of it he is doing great things. At the outset he sees through a glass darkly, but after a few years the fogs disappear and the sun shines clearly. The day of thy visitation is at hand. Open thine eyes, behold, act.—Selected.

What Dr. Williams Says About Consumption.

Dr. Williams, the well-known consumption specialist and Medical Director of the New Orleans Depuratorium Lung Cure, says: "Nothing but a direct application of healing vaporized medicines, antiseptics and germicides to the very seat of the disease, and these medicines can he applied only by inhaling them in a vaporized state. The lungs constitute an air cavity and can be reached medicinally only by medicated air. I will positively assert that bronchial or catarrhal consumption can he cured by these healing oily vapors that reach the seat of the disease, laden as they are with the Williams germ-killing 'Osoline.'

After many years of careful observation and examining the sputum of eleven hundred cases, I am convinced that fully three-fifths of all the deaths charged to consumption are really catarrhal bronchitis associated with dyspepsia, which is brought on from severe dosing of the stomach. My treatment goes directly to the lungs and consequently does not disarrange the stomach or impair the digestion. The treatment can he taken at home if desired."

Dr. Williams' invention of the wonderful Depurator Inhalation has made his name known all over the land. By means of this great invention the germ-destroying Williams' "Osoline" and healing antiseptic oils are combined and vaporized so that the curative vapors may he easily breathed into the lungs and air pipes, spreading these healing oils over the sore spots and inflamed tissues of patients suffering from consumption and asthma. By this means the germs are killed, the sore spots are healed and the diseased coatings of the lungs and air tubes are loosened and thrown off. The cause of the disease heing removed, the patient steadily improves until a complete cure is effected.

The New Orleans office of the Williams Lung cure, 1331 St. Charles avenue, cor. Thalla, is under the immediate supervision of Dr. Williams, who visits it frequently to consult with his specialist physicians in charge of the New Orleans Depuratorium and Electro-Therapeutic Institute. Call and receive free examination, advice and free trial treatment, or write for pamphlet describing the Williams Home Treatment.

The biggest ship ever constructed is the Dreadnought of the English Navy, but it will not hold that rank more than a couple of years. "Our own navy," says the Daily Picayune, "has lately been busily engaged in preparing to submit plans for the largest and heaviest battleship yet attempted by any naval power. It is understood that two separate designs have been prepared by the Construction Bureau of the navy and two designs have also been submitted by outside shipbuilders. The details of all these plans are being kept strictly secret, as that is the latest fad in naval affairs, but the impression prevails that the plans of the proposed battleship to be presented for the approval of Congress will call for a displacement of at least 20,000 tons, and will be designed to carry twelve 12-inch guns or two more such guns than the British Dreadnought carries." This monster vessel is to cost about six millions of dollars—enough money to build comfortable homes for thirty thousand people.

Important changes in President Roosevelt's Cabinet will soon take place. Attorney General Moody and Secretary Shaw of the Treasury will retire. Two new men will enter the Cabinet, and there will be shifting of some of the old ones. The two new ones will be Mr. George Von L. Meyer, Ambassador to Russia, who will be Postmaster General, and Mr. Oscar S. Straus, of New York, who will take the portfolio of Commerce and Labor. Mr. Straus is an orthodox Jew, and the first Jew ever called to a Cabinet position in the United States, but not the first in other English speaking Protestant nations. Mr. D. Israeli was Prime Minister of England, and Mr. Juduh P. Benjamin of New Orleans held a position in the Cabinet of President Davis of the late Southern Confederacy. Mr. Straus in all respects is a first-class man—a merchant and philanthropist, and a member of the permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague. He was at one time Minister to Turkey, and "succeeded admirably in adjusting the differences of Christian missionaries with the Porte." Though his vocation is that of a merchant, his profession is that of a lawyer.

While many good women are systematically engaged in efforts to secure the right of unlimited suffrage to women, other good women have associated themselves together for the purpose of opposing the movement. Mrs. Caroline F. Corbin of Illinois is one of the number. She is president of the Illinois association, and does not hesitate to speak her mind. In a letter recently addressed to the Chairman of the Committee on Municipal Suffrage of the Chicago Charter Convention, she used the following language: "Any economic scheme which puts woman on a utilitarian equality with man and makes her his competitor in the market places of the world to the destruction of her value as a homemaker, which deprives her of that virtue which alone fits her for the duties of motherhood by abrogating marriages and encouraging promiscuous relations between the sexes, must expect to be judged according to its merit by the world at large." Mrs. Corbin holds that woman suffrage bears some relation to "revolutionary socialism," which she declares "is the most active and strenuous foe of Christian civilization."

A new process of making quartz glass has been discovered. Of its virtue an article in the Technical World Magazine says: "Ordinary glass melts at 700 degrees; quartz glass will stand 2,000 degrees. In a quartz-glass vessel, gold, copper, or silver may be melted, or even distilled—that is to say, vaporized—without injuring the receptacle. If a window of the material were put into a fireproof steel safe, and the latter were exposed to the fiercest flames, the safe would suffer greater damage than the window. Common glass breaks with heat because it expands; but quartz glass expands almost not at all; and hence cold water will not break it if poured over it when it is white hot. What a material for the lamp chimneys of the future, to be sure! Another point of interest about quartz glass is that it transmits freely the ultraviolet rays of light, while ordinary glass is almost entirely opaque. Thus it is very superior to the latter as material for lenses of photographic cameras, giving sharper images; and by its aid astronomers should be able to extend much further than hitherto their observations on the spectra of distant stars. But for its expensiveness—for it is likely to continue to be extremely dear—it would doubtless soon replace common glass wherever heat resistance was wanted."

The National Child Labor Committee has issued the following bulletin: "The child labor evil is fast reaching a degree of importance when national legislation, or at least national recognition, will become imperative. Laws designed to regulate or restrict the evil have been passed by almost every state legislature, but the indifference or ignorance of officials supposed to enforce the laws renders such legislation practically inoperative. The trouble has come from a lack of public interest. The people as a mass have not understood or appreciated the real danger to the nation and to the individual bound to result from the working of mere children for gain. The subject has more in it than sentiment; it almost reaches the dignity of a grave national peril. For several years an organization known as the National Child Labor Committee has been doing excellent work influencing legislation, and this committee, of which former President Grover Cleveland and Cardinal Gibbons are members, has to its credit the passing of many laws. The National Committee has just announced that the Anti-Child Slavery League, organized last May, is now amalgamated with it and this union of forces is bound to result in more efficient work for the cause of childhood. The principal function of the league was to give wide-spread publicity to the reform movement, and this particular function will continue to be carried out. The third annual meeting of the committee and allied forces will be held in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, December 13-16."

A paragraph on the race problem in Collier's Weekly of November 3 is worthy of reproduction, and might be pondered with profit by all the people, North and South: "Fire-eaters will never solve the most depressing problem which Americans face to-day. Prophesies of wars of extermination are shallow folly, which result only in other imbecilities, in long lines of sequence, such as the resolution of the Massachusetts Republicans, who tried to make up for empty verbiage in their own affairs by warning distinctness about something which they would better let alone. Their impertinence stirs up the South; the harsher Southern expressions stir up everybody. Meantime, a large number of self-controlled and high-minded Southerners are making a settled effort to cure the evil by the principles of Christianity, while their inferior compatriots rely upon barbaric hate. Senator Tillman, violent as he is, and often injudicious, declares that lynching has proved that as a preventive it is a failure. It is more. It is an impediment to the working out of fundamental improvement. The Southern patriot to-day is the man who helps the South to raise the whole standard of order, for when that is raised, and not before, crime will decrease. The progress of industry will do much, as industry requires regularity. In industrial progress, in regulating liquor and cocaine, in improvement in the courts and police, in improved and fitting education for both races, and in a pride turned toward the triumph of law rather than toward the expression of hate, lies hope for the future. We find all through the South condemnation of the Atlanta News and the element which it represents. The Columbia State points out how wise it would be to make use of trustworthy negro detectives. The Memphis Commercial-Appeal shows how necessary it is to retain the confidence which the innocent negro has in his white neighbors. No part of the world has greater courage, and we believe the South ultimately will triumph."

IS MAN IMMORTAL?

That article in the issue of THE ADVOCATE of Oct. 25, in which the Nashville Christian Advocate of Sept. 7 is quoted, touches upon a matter of such vital interest to every thoughtful Christian that I have thought it might not be unprofitable to the readers of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE to enter with me upon a short word study.

In the article aforementioned from the Nashville Advocate of Sept. 7 is the following: "Are the lost, the finally impenitent as truly immortal as the saved in heaven? Is consciousness of the pains of hell as surely eternal as enjoyment of the bliss of paradise? We do not know. That man is essentially and necessarily immortal is commonly thought to be the teachings of the Bible, but our own opinion is that the Bible is silent on that point."

Is the Bible silent on this point? Let us turn to Math. xxv., 46. No one will dispute, I suppose, that Christ is here in this verse speaking of the end of the world and of heaven and hell. Elsewhere in this and the preceding chapter we may disagree as to the exact bearing of Christ's reference, but in this verse we must all concede, I suppose, that he has in mind the last judgment. He says: "Those shall go away into punishment aeonion, but these into life aeonion."

Let us note now two things: First, the word itself, aeonion; second, that it is the identical word, in form and structure, in both places; that is, with "punishment" and with "life."

Passing over now for a time the word itself and centering our attentions upon the second of the two things just noted, we are forced to conclude, since the identical word, in form and structure, is used with both "punishment" and "life" that whatever is predicated of "life" is also predicated of "punishment," and that if life after death is eternal so also must punishment after death be eternal; or conversely, if punishment after death is not everlasting so also is life after death not everlasting. In other words, upon the authority of the Eternal Son himself "everlasting life" and "everlasting punishment" must both stand or fall together. There is no escape from this conclusion; for if language means anything at all this conclusion is inevitable. Life and punishment both abide or they both pass away, so that if the Bible is silent with respect to the eternal nature of the "pains of hell," it is also silent with respect to the eternal nature of the joys of the "saved in heaven."

And now we ask ourselves again, is the Bible really silent or is there definite light on this tremendously vital point? We will go back now and take up the first thing noted above—the word itself. "Aeonion"—what does it really mean? If we can discover that, the problem is solved. If we cannot, we must likewise declare: "We do not know."

The word, "aeonion," is an adjective from the noun "aeon," and, of course, means adjectively what "aeon" means substantively. Now it cannot be denied for a moment that "aeon" means "age" or "period of time" and that "aeonion" would therefore mean "for an age" or "for a period of time." With this meaning of the word, "aeonion life" and "aeonion punishment" would mean "life for an age or period of time" and "punishment for an age or time." And if people will have it so the expressions may be so translated, but in translating them thus be careful to note again that if punishment is for an age only so also is life for an age only. They are the same as above noted.

We now come to consider whether "aeon" has only the meaning above given, viz., "age or period of time." Many people aver that it has no other meaning. And that no example can be found in Greek where "aeon" indisputably means more than "age" or "period of time." If, however, such an example could be found where "aeon" means "eternity," they readily agree that the whole status of the case would be changed for then "aeonion" would mean "eternal" and "aeonion punishment" and "aeonion life" would be "eternal punishment" and "eternal life."

Now such a passage with "aeon" meaning "eternity" can be found in classic Greek and not only found, but can be substantiated in a really marvellous way by a second passage taken from another author wholly independent from the first. The two Greek writers to whom I refer are the orator, Isocrates, and the philosopher, Plato—both universally recognized as excellent Atticists. Let us hear them on this matter. Isocrates in his Panegyricus says, when speaking of those who have been initiated into the Eleusinian Mysteries, that they (the initiated) have "sweeter hopes not only concerning the outcome of life (itself) but also concerning all eternity." The word used for "eternity" is "aeon." Here we see that "aeon" clearly means something everlasting.

For fear, however, that some one may not be convinced that I have correctly translated "aeon" in the above passage from Isocrates, let us turn to the Phaedo of Plato. Socrates is discoursing with Cebes and Simmias on the immortality (note the word) of the soul. He says: "Is it not therefore reasonable that the immaterial, the godlike, the immortal, the sentiment (part of man) should go away (at death) to some (state) like itself, and, having come to that place, freed from all the baser elements of the body, should indeed be, as those initiated (into the Eleusinian Mysteries) say, forever with God?" In this passage we have immortality clearly stated and Plato, by referring directly to the dogmas held by those who have been initiated into the Mysteries, confirms us in our translation of "aeon," in the passage from Isocrates, by the word "eternity." In fact, the passage from Plato in a really wonderful way verifies the translation of the passage from the other author.

In the light, therefore, of the classic use of "aeon" (and it is to the classic writers that all linguistic problems must be referred for solution) need we Christians, for whom Christ died, hesitate with confidence to believe in eternal punishment since, as I have shown, it is only by believing in that that we have a right to believe in eternal life? And what would life be, what would we be, without a firm, unshakable belief in the latter?

"THE REUNION OF EPISCOPAL METHODISM."

In the Nashville Advocate of Sept. 28th there appeared an article on "The Reunion of Episcopal Methodism of the United States" from the pen of Dr. W. F. Lloyd. And from its contents I am led to the conclusion that there are religious enthusiasts among Southern Methodists, as well as among the members of the M. E. Church. Now, I do not use the term "religious enthusiast" with any thought of irony or disrespect. For Dr. Lloyd displays a noble spirit in his article. He puts himself on record as being willing to do anything that will result in the unification of the forces of Christianity. Therefore, I commend the spirit of his article. However, I cannot accept his argument as to why the two bodies of white Methodists of the United States should be reunited. I fail to acquiesce with the Doctor for the very simple reason that he has viewed this question from the mountain top of ideal Christianity, rather than from the vale of actual Christianity. Now, if Methodists, both North and South, were in fact and experience the Christian characters that God would have us be, then the two bodies of Methodism would be united in spirit and brotherly love, and organic union would be inevitable. But, unfortunately, neither we nor they have as yet attained unto that high stature of manhood in Christ Jesus. Therefore, necessity and duty demands of us that we consider and act upon this question from the viewpoint of practical judgment, rather than from the viewpoint of ideal Christianity that as yet exists in the minds of men only. And when this question is looked at from the viewpoint of practical judgment it is found that depraved human nature always has two great obstacles to prevent the union of the two Methodist bodies in spirit, though that fact may some day be accomplished in name. These two obstables are sectionalism and the negro question.

Now, Dr. Lloyd says that this idea of sectionalism "is a bugaboo, that is unworthy of us and them." Pray tell me, Doctor, how you know that the fear on our part of the South that they of the North will allow the spirit of sectionalism to control them in their elections is only a "bugaboo"? As Patrick Henry said in that great speech in which he appealed to his comrades to strike for liberty, so say I on this occasion; "I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience." And judging from the past, what are we to expect from the Methodist, North, should organic union be accomplished? For answer to that question I cite you to the political situation of the United States and remind you of the fact tha since 1865, when the reunion of the States was accomplished, even until to-day the spirit of sectionalism has so controlled our brothers of the North that the South has been not only ignored politcally, but likewise she has been legislated against. But, some may say, there are others North besides they of the M. E. Church and it is they who have thus ignored and legislated against the South. Were that argument admitted, though it is not, still I would ask that this be explained: Why is it that a Northern woman, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, wrote in behalf of the poor, ignorant negro, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," when on the other hand no one of our brothers or sisters of the North came to the aid of the poor Southerner, either by word or deed, during the reconstruction days when we were at the mercy of the unprincipled carpet-bagger, and the scalawag? Echo answers, Why. No, Dr. Lloyd, I refuse to close my eyes to facts and say with you that the fear of sectionalism is but a "bugaboo." In hearing our brethren of the North discuss this question my mind involuntarily recalls part of Rudyard Kipling's poem written after Nicholas II first proposed an international peace conference: "Beware of Adam's Add the bear, that walks like a man."

Then there is the negro problem. Dr. Lloyd says the occasion that brought about disunion is gone. The slavery question is gone, but the negro is still with us. And he is here to stay for quite a long time. Not satisfied with freeing the negro, the men of the North have been constantly meddling with the negro, and as from 1865 until now, they of the North seem bent upon thrusting upon us of the South social equality between the white man and the negro. What would happen if reunion between the white Episcopal Methodisms of the United States were accomplished? It doesn't take a prophet nor the son of a prophet to discern that a change of preachers between the North and South would follow, and with the change there would come an attempt to settle the negro question in accordance with the ideas and desires of the North. And with that effort there would be a falling off from the Methodist Episcopal Church of such great magnitude that it might end in the destruction of Methodisms as a denomination in the South. If we be wise men we can learn a lesson from the result of reunion between the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church, North, and that lesson is, let reunion alone.

What we do want, and what the M. E. Church ought to be magnanimous, charitable and Christly enough to grant, is federation. There ought by all means to be a distinct understanding between the two great bodies of Episcopal Methodism that neither will invade the territory of the other. But our brethren of the North, either through ignorance or discourtesy, disregard the rules of federation and maintain missionary territory in sections of the South where Southern Methodism has ample facilities to do all work that the doctrines of Methodism can accomplish. With the fact before me that the M. E. Church just will not have federation, and yet is continuously clamoring for organic union, I am reminded of an old sly fox that has invaded the territory of chickens, and, seeing that all are safely lodged in trees, begins to beg and persuade them to come down and associate with him, assuring them that there will be no danger at all, but that he desires union. All fowls are wise enough to remain in safety, despite the earnest plea of the fox. Shall we display less wisdom than the fowl?

THE WAGES OF HOME MISSION WORKERS.

In a very strong editorial some weeks since the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate called attention to the fact that, while the cost of living had increased from thirty to fifty per cent within the past two decades, the salaries of ministers had increased only five or ten per cent.

In some places there had been no increase at all. It was wise and timely to call attention to this fact, so often overlooked in arranging for the salaries of preachers to-day.

Along the same line, and just as wise, and far more productive of practical results, was the action of the lay members of the Louisville Conference at its last session. They passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, In recent years the expense of living has been largely increased, alike in city and country, and no corresponding increase as a rule has been made in the salaries allowed our preachers; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Boards of Stewards, through the Conference, be and are hereby respectfully urged to recognize the claim on this account of our presiding elders and preachers-in-charge for a commensurable increase in salary allowance."

In the Southwest Missouri Conference, the laymen took similar action, making, however, their action an appeal rather than a set of resolutions.

It is indeed gratifying to one who has given his life to a work that forbids his looking after his own affairs very closely, to know that consecrated laymen are large-visioned enough to attend faithfully to his interests. The pastor so situated can give himself to his work undisturbed by the harassing horror of financial adjustments when two and one must make four, or five, or even six.

This tendency on the part of laymen to recognize the greatest difficulty in the ministry of to-day, the rising expenses and the stationary salary, set me to thinking of that class of works that need most such teaching, and the men who serve those works who most need such consideration. I refer to the works where salaries are supplemented by our Boards of Missions, and which are styled, incorectly perhaps, "Missions."

In the North Mississippi Conference there are 31 charges receiving aid from the Board of Missions; in the Mississippi Conference there are 38 charges and 7 districts receiving aid from the Board of Missions: in the Louisiana Conference there are 24 charges receiving aid from the Board of Missions. (These statistics are taken from the annual report of the Board for 1905.)

In the North Mississippi Conference there are nine charges which, in the minutes, are described as "Missions." I have not the statistics of the Louisiana Conference. The Mississippi Conference prints in its minutes the names of all charges where salaries are supplemental by the Board, and gives the amounts paid to each, so that figures for that Conference are exact. It has 46 charges receiving aid.

Referring to the minutes of the Mississippi Conference, we find that at least thirteen charges, exclusive of the Indian Mission, assess for their pastors less than $400. In the North Mississippi Conference 21 charges assess for their pastors less than $400.

It is almost impossible to think of a man giving himself to such a work as the ministry should be, and supporting himself and a family on less than $600 a year. There are many large families living on incomes of from $150 up on our large circuits, that it would require $1000 or more a year adequately to support.

It is almost useless to expect any very general uplifting of the country until we can send to the country men who, by breeding, education and talent, backed up by consecration and untiring energy, are capable of uplifting the country. We have many such men who are willing to make any sacrifice for the church, and yet the church could get no real service from them on a seven appointment mission, where the salary was $150 to $400 a year, and the missionary appropriation $100 to $300, bringing the support up to $500 or $600 a year. I say it would be useless, and it would. How could such a man elevate a community, when he saw his own family going down because of the lack of education inflicted upon his children by the slimness of his salary? When he was forced to spend half his sleepless nights in agonized worry about how to secure bread and meat and shoes and clothes for the wife and little ones dependent upon him?

In a circuit that might be developed with a good man, paid a rational salary, the church wastes money starving a man, and so oppressing him with financial burdens that he is unable to give a free mind to his work. And it wastes more than money—it wastes a man, and it wastes the opportunities that the circuit holds.

A recent book on "The Problem of the Country Church" maintains that the problem of the country church is social rather than religious. It takes the positon that the average country community is religious. What it needs is to be taught to live up to the religion it knows. Men who have gotten in ruts, who pile fertilizers around plants often to their destruction rather than for their good because they do not and will not know the elemental chemistry that would enable them to use fertilizers, whose wives dip snuff and dress in fashions of the dead ages, whose sons grow up to be clod hoppers, and whose daughters have nothing before them except to slave for one of the clod hoppers in a weather-beaten cabin not even relieved by the cheerful cheapness of whitewash — what can they do with doctrinal instruction? I know and every man knows that the average share hand from the country knows more doctrine than the well-dressed president of the Board of Stewards of many a city station. What the countryman needs right now is not more doctrine, but the teaching that will enable him to apply the doctrine he has.

The teaching along these lines has not been supplied. Consequently in many inland places doctrine has gone to seed in Campbellism, Second Blessing fanaticism, Mormonism, Hardshellism, Martinism and other isms of the ilk.

Why has not the teaching been supplied? Because the church has been able to do no more than keep the country appointments manned. She has not been able to think about, much less attempt to supply, the great help that would set the doctrinal leaven at work in the social lump.

The born leaders leave the country and go to town to run the banks, the wholesale houses, the department stores, and the railroads, or to the Senate to "bust the trusts."

If the country has the leadership that will bring it abreast of the age the church must supply it. If the church does not the Lord will find it.

It is useless to blame the circuit preacher. The book referred to above blames the country preacher. It isn't his fault. It is the rare man who appears once in a century who has the iniative to study by the pine fires and apply himself to get understanding when his family has to begin the winter by donning last winter's shoes.

Among the great needs of our mission works is strong men to man them backed by salaries that will set them free to give mind and time to their work.

If we had the money we could get the men.

Where can we get the money?

When the church is paying its tenth we can ask that question.

There is a Presbyterian Church near my own church, which, in addition to its regular contributions to missions, raises $1000 a year for missions within the bounds of the presbytery to which it belongs.

There are twenty-five stations in the North Mississippi Conference that pay $1000 or more to their pastors. Each of these could easily pay $100 to district missions. That would mean an annual income of $2500 for missions within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference.

What could we do with it? We could man each mission with the kind of man the mission needs. We could have siimlar requirements for home mission services that exist for foreign mission service. Could we transfer the working force of North Mississippi in the foreign field to the home field, and support them so that they would be free from secular care and financial miseries, do you suppose that our home mission fields would remain as they are and have remained through the past half century?

Such a plan is entirely feasible. If each presiding elder was expected to raise from his district for missions in his district his pro rata of $2500 we should secure for our Conference Home Mission work $2000 the first year.

It needs to be said again that our present methods waste money, men and missions, when we compare results with what can be accomplished by men and methods adapted to the needs of the fields. One hundred and fifty dollars added to the $175 raised for the pastor of Lone Hill Circuit will keep a man there. Put a young man there, a well-educated, capable man with a future before him, and keep him there wthout money to buy books, attend institutes, take papers, or secure association for his hungry mind, and in a short time you will turn out a crushed man, disheartened and unbelieving in all except that his dream of the future was nothing but a dream. Put an older man there, who has struggled upward from the depths, and he becomes rebellious and discontented in his soul, however he may appear. And so the years go by, until at last we find the man who is glad to go around Lone Hill Circuit on the risk of $275 a year.

WALTER G. HARBIN.

WHY DISCRIMINATE?

It is rather strange that some of us are zealous for the cause of missions and at the same time discriminate against one of its organic parts—church extension. If we were building railroads and proceeded on the same principles we would favor the purchase of many engines, but would want no cars or depots. The successful farmer must build barns and granaries to store his crops, and the successful church must take care of her converts by housing them.

Just at this time the need is generally recognized. At our last Annual Conference Bishop Ward, who was then Assistant Missionary Secretary, advised those who expected to make special contributions to missions, not to send out more missionaries, but use the money in building chapels. The Board of Missions offered a resolution, and the Conference adopted it, calling special attention to this need.

Approximately, two of every five churches of Southern Methodism have received help from this Board, the total of which aggregates two million dollars. In our own Conference the per cent is still greater; one of every two have been aided by the Board. This is a very brief summary of what the Board has done in the past; but notice some of the present needs. Two thousand and eight hundred congregations in our church are without houses of worship. Think of it. One hundred and forty thousand members with no spiritual homes! In our own Conference there are fifty-eight congregations, approximately two thousand and nine hundred members, out of doors. Is it wise to spend our time and money in pushing forward and neglect those, both at home and abroad, that are already converted?

The North Mississippi Conference falls below the average in her contribution to this fund. Last year the general average of receipts was 82 per cent of the assessments, but our Conference paid only 76 per cent. Our near neighbor, the North Alabama Conference, paid, on the same basis of assessment, 113 per cent, or 37 per cent more than we paid.

Twenty-two pastoral charges of this Conference discriminated against this cause in the division of their Conference collections last year. This is counting only those that paid a greater per cent on three other items. This, in part, explains why the North Mississippi Conference falls behind her neighbors. Just who is responsible for this discrimination we are not able to say, but presume that it is the pastors. In most cases the division is left to them. We submit that this cause is second to none in importance, and earnestly ask that it gets its pro rata part of the Conference collections.

In our humble way of thinking there are but two reasons why we should not be interested in church extension; either we do not understand it or else we are anti-missionary.

Very respectfully,

V. C. CURTIS,

Secretary Board, North Mississippi Conference.

CONSOLIDATION EFFECTED.

Bishop Ward has consolidated the Dryades and Felicity Street Churches. This action was taken in accordance with the wishes of the official members of the two churches. A copy of the Bishop's order has been furnished us for publication, as follows:

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 2, 1906.

To the Rev. T. J. Warlick, Presiding Elder of the New Orleans District of the Louisiana Conference:

My Dear Brother—The congregations of the former Dryades Street Church and the former Felicity Street Church are hereby united and will hereafter constitute one charge. You will please see that the provisions of the Discipline, paragraph 204, are fully complied with.

I also authorize the organization of the Douglass Park Mission in the city of New Orleans, and the Quarterly Conference of the Felicity Street Church will elect a Board of Trustees for that Mission. Your brother,

SETH WARD,

Bishop in Charge of the Louisiana Conference.

A RESPONSE TO MANY BRETHREN AND FRIENDS.

From many brethren and friends letters of sympathy and love have come to me on account of the death of my loving and faithful wife. I will not undertake to answer all of these letters personally, but adopt this method, through the ADVOCATE, of assuring each one of these dear brethren and friends of my heartfelt and warmest thanks for their tender words and messages of brotherly love. The dear companion, so unexpectedly called away, was to me a helpmeet indeed; strong, gentle, cheerful and hopeful amid all the experiences of our itinerant life.

Pray for us, dear brethren and friends—for me and for our sorely-bereaved children and kindred, that we may have sustaining and comforting grace, and be submissive and resigned to the will of our Heavenly Father. Your brother in deepest sorrow,

T. C. WIER.

REV. SAM P. JONES.

When David mourned for Abner, the son of Ner, and refused to eat bread because of his grief, he said to his servants, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?" That a great man has recently fallen in the ranks of God's distinguished servants is a verdict which finds response in the hearts of the lofty and the low—while men and women and little children repeat with love and veneration the name of Sam P. Jones. If it be true that history is but the lengthened shadows of the world's great men, it is equally true that the shadow of this fallen hero will be projected through the coming years, and will afford rest and refreshment to many weary souls, for his memory will linger like a benediction when most of his contemporaries shall have been forgotten.

Since the eighteenth century, when George Whitefield gathered immense audiences and preached with seraphic zeal, and charmed the multitudes with the vehemence and earnestness of his oratory, there has not risen a greater evangelist or a more popular public speaker than Sam Jones. Original, unique, simple, profound, tender as a mother, brave as a plumed knight, he shines in the firmament with a lustre all his own. Apes and imitators he has had in great abundance, but, like a star that dwells apart, he remains solitary and unapproachable.

Sam Jones was a genius. With a marvelous intuition, he threaded every channel of the heart of man. He knew human nature. He was familiar with all the phases of thought and passion and emotion; and, with a master's hand, he swept all the keys of that wonderful organ called the human heart. His unique and unfamiliar methods frequently provoked critcism, and even bitterness; and men of the cloth were often shocked by his slang expressions, and his telling anecdotes, and his undignified demeanor. But the common, as well as the uncommon, people heard him gladly. Multitudes who never attended any place of worship were drawn by the spell and fascination of this remarkable man, and, in many instances, fools who came to mock remained to pray. Thousands from the different walks of life were converted through his ministry, among them many of the most abandoned sinners—men and women hardened in crime, whose feet had almost slipped into perdition.

Sam Jones was a master of assemblies. No other man of this generation could draw together and hold such immense crowds of people for solid weeks, and command their undivided attention to the end. Mayors, governors, congressmen, millionaires, milkmen and hod-carriers were, by his magic wand, alternately convulsed with laughter and suffused with tears. His stern denunciations terrified the wicked and almost drove them to despair; his pathetic speech and impassioned eloquence subdued every heart; his tender sympathy brought tears to eyes unused to weeping.

He was an outstanding illustration of the profound remark that all success in this world is a crime, and must be expiated. The voices of detraction and obloquy followed this man wherever he went. Wicked men impugned his motives and aspersed his character. His enemies asserted that he preached for gold and not for love of souls. His whole public life contradicts such an indictment. Like the good Bishop in Victor Hugo's master-piece, when Sam Jones' purse was full he went among the poor. Nothing afforded him greater pleasure than an opportunity to relieve the temporal wants of the destitute and the unfortunate; and his timely aid has often caused the widow's heart to sing for joy.

A braver soul than our lamented brother never walked this earth. He feared God, but was not intimidated by men. He denounced sin in the strongest terms, whether he spoke to respectable self-centered sinners or to the dregs of society, and did not fear the face of any man.

In all his ministrations he was prompted by an ardent, pasionate love for lost men. His sympathy knew no bounds. The forlorn and abandoned drunkard never sunk so low in dissipation and crime that he did not find in Sam Jones a helper and friend. The gambler, the thief, the bum, the social outcast, flocked to hear him preach a gospel which flings the inspiration of hope to every sinner in the world. His scathing denunciations frequently enraged corrupt men in official circles; and fashionable, worldly-minded women were indignant, as their sensitive, cultivated ears tingled under his sarcastic speech; but under all his harsh words and his thundering anathemas men saw a great, loving, sympathetic heart which was yearning for their recovery from sin and its awful consequences.

For a quarter of a century the name of Sam Jones has been a household word; he has moved like a colossal figure across the continent, preaching and lecturing to vast multitudes of listening, admiring men and women, and kindling a new hope in many a heart. He rests from his labors and his works will follow him. When we shall stand at last in the light of the judgment throne, we shall see a numerous company brought to God through the instrumentality of this great preacher, who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the lamb.

ABERDEEN AND MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

In THE ADVOCATE of Sept. 6th there appeared "A Plea for Millsaps College." It was good. But for some statements that were far from true, it would have been better. It is claimed by "A Fatherless Country Girl."

The writer says: "Dr. Murrah went to Hattiesburg and came back with $30 for Millsaps College. Later, the Baptists gave Dr. Lowery $4000 for Clinton." Again: "Dr. Murrah preached at Aberdeen—he came away with $20. Dr. Lowery, without even going there, was sent $400."

I don't know about the facts as regards Hattiesburg. When I read the article, however, I wrote Dr. Murrah, asking that he give me the exact results of his visit here. In reply he said: "I have not the vaguest idea of the identity of the enthusiastic correspondent, nor can I fancy the source of her misinformation. I came home from my delightful visit and reported $300 for Aberdeen. Major Millsaps has a record of the amounts that have formerly been contributed by the good friends of the college there, and will be glad to furnish you with the list, etc."

Our people certainly do not boast of what they have done for Millsaps College—this year, or in years past. It is a source of embarrassment that they have not done more, but we do want it understood that some of us have confidence in the college, and that all of us have too great respect for Dr. Murrah, a former pastor, to allow the above statements to go uncorrected.

I find that the Baptists wrote Dr. Lowery they would give him $100, if he would come to Aberdeen. As yet he hasn't been here.

The young lady is just $580 wrong in the only statements about which we are in position to know the facts. Aberdeen people are wondering if that proportion of error maintains throughout the article, and are hoping it does with reference to Hattiesburg. The light of truth often spoils what has been thought a good sermon.

TO THE READERS OF THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Dear Readers: We, the people of Escatawpa, Miss., suffered a great deal in the storm of September 27th, that swept the gulf coat country. The majority of the houses were damaged, some a good deal, others not so much. But our M. E. Church, South, (Zion Church) was completely demolished, and we are now, through the kindness of the Lutheran congregation, holding our services in the Lutheran Church. We are going to try to rebuild our church, but are unable to build without assistance. Now, I want to ask every reader of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to please help us build a new church by contributing a dime, or more if you are able. We will be very grateful for any contribution. Please send to me at the address below.

THE RESTATEMENT.

SECOND PAPER.

2. What shall we say of Wesley's sermons, even "the first fifty-two"? First of all, they are great—no sensible man ever denied this—they are very great; but are they perfectly accurate as a statement of Methodist doctrine? The question is pertinent and legitimate: what is the answer? Let us honestly inquire: Sermon xiii., On sin in believers, and sermon xlv., on The new birth, are at variance with each other. This cannot be denied intelligently. Compare sermon xlv., 11:5, with sermon xiii. throughout. In the sermon on the New Birth, iv., 2, he concedes the baptismal regeneration of infants. "I do not now speak with regard to infants: it is certain our church supposes that all who are baptized in their infancy, are at the same time born again: and it is allowed that the whole office for the baptism of infants proceeds upon this supposition. Nor is it an objection of any weight against this, that we cannot comprehend how this work can be wrought in infants." In Vol. vi. of Works, p. 16, he declares in keeping with this: "If infants are guilty of original sin, then they are proper subjects of baptism: seeing in the ordinary way, they cannot be saved, unless this be washed away by baptism. * * * * Infants need to be washed from original sin."

No Methodist preacher in America believes the dogma, or will for one moment concede it.

Are they clear and easily understood? If so, why does our church issue an annotated edition of them prepared by Dr. W. P. Harrison? The annotations are put in to explain them, because they need explaning.

These are facts. Mr. Wesley, great as he was, did not claim to be infallible, and it would be worse than folly to claim it for him. No man of all the ages, since the Christ went home, was really greater; but the greatest man may make a mistake now and then. Why shudder at the suggestion that Mr. Wesley did? We want to aim at perfection—we want doctrinal statements better than Wesley gave us—why should we not strive to obtain them? Every true son of Wesley will thus strive; and we but honor our father and founder in doing so: for we thus express the true Wesleyan spirit.

3. What shall we say of Wesley's notes? This first of all: that in the thought of the Wesleyan Church of England the notes were so inadequate that Joseph Benson was directed by the Conference to prepare a commentary, which he prepared, and which became the current and popular commentary in both British and American Methodism. This further: Until our Bishops put the book into our course of study, but few Southern Methodist preachers knew anything of it. I had been preaching for years before I ever saw a copy; and I am not alone in this. This last, of all: Very few of our laymen can be induced to read the book; and practically none of our preachers depend upon it for New Testament exposition, and this means that we all consider it utterly inadequate.

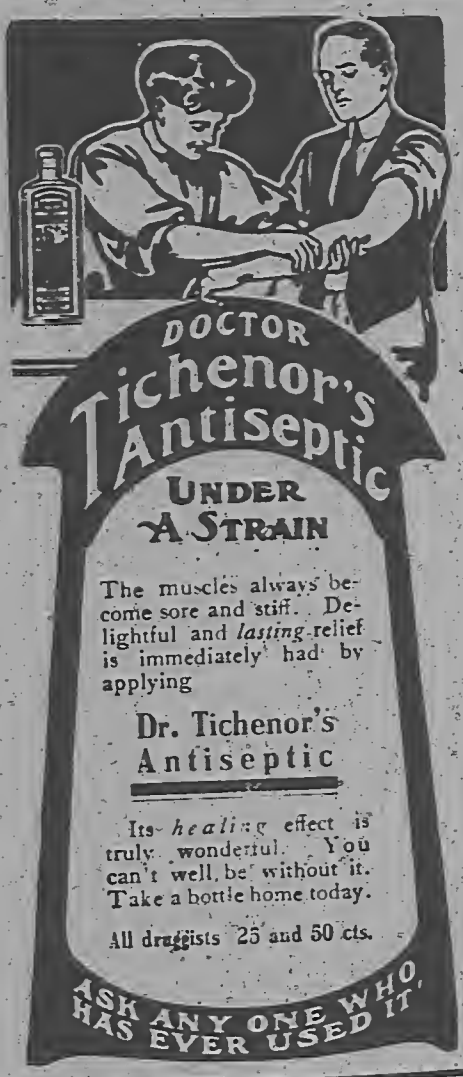
Second.—Are any of the restatements which from time to time since 1808 have come forward, proved themselves adequate? Let us inquire specifically.

(1) Are Watson's Institutes adequate? Are they accurate? The question has been answered negatively in almost every examination room where undergraduate preachers and their examiners wrestle with the intricacies and inaccuracies of the institutes. This answers that other question about their clearness, and that one about their fullness. Who but Methodist preachers ever reads the ponderous work?

(2) What about Ralston's book? It has long since been officially superannuated under the official verdict of inadequate.

(3) Of Dr. Summers' valuable and ponderous commentary on the Twenty-five Articles, which has been named Summers' Systematic Theology, I need hardly speak; for I do not suppose that any one ever intelligently thought of it as an adequate and popular restatement of our faith.

(4) If the Standard Catchechism, written by our own Bishop Tigert, and accepted by the joint commission of the two chief Methodist Churches of America, should be found by the commission to be adequate, and should be accepted as such by world-wide Methodism, we shall all gladly acquiesce. As yet, outside of these two churches it is only a candidate.



Every statement of doctrine is essentially an explanation of that doctrine. It appears that we have not a statement of Methodist doctrines, not an explanation of our belief that does not itself need, explaining. May we not get an explanation that does not need explaining? Is it not wise at least to try? Why should we not try? If we fail to get an adequate statement, it will only be a repetition of our history. All other attempts have failed.

There are Methodists in great numbers, real Methodists, true to her polity and her creed, who really love her doctrines and her evangelical spirit, and yet who demand a fuller, truer, clearer, altogether more adequate statement of those doctrines; and hence restatements will be attempted until an adequate one is reached. This is inevitable. Shall the church encourage or frown on these efforts?

Now, if any brother thinks that I have set down here anything that is inaccurate or illogical, let him come forward and show what it is.

In love and honesty I have spoken. Answer me in love and honesty, if you are minded to reply; and only the sweetest brotherliness will continue.

CLEAN DIRT.

A pair of dimpled, grimy paws
Our lad brings home when through with play,
But mother never scolds because
Clean dirt is quickly washed away.

Our barefoot lad brings dusty feet,
For he has journeyed far to-day,
But mother bathes them pink and sweet;
Clean dirt's not hard to wash away.

God keep the little feet from soil
Of evil paths in life, and may
The hands be stained alone by toil;
Clean dirt, like that, will wash away.

MANLINESS OF A LITTLE MAN.

I once boarded a car which was crowded. A little man—perhaps he was twelve years old—offered me his seat, with a charming bow and smile. He soon found a seat, but popped up when another woman entered, pulled off his cap, which was fringed with rags, and with such a jolly, wide smile made room for the newcomer. Five times in as many minutes that smile broke over the face of the young traveler as he gave his seat again and again, and soon every one in the car was smiling in sympathy. No one thought whether his clothes were whole or ragged, but some one said: "I wish my boys enjoyed being gentlemanly as much as he does;" and a fine-looking man remarked quite loudly to his neighbor: "That's the sort of manliness that made our President." The boy heard this remark, and looked around to see who was manly.—Selected.

CLAIRE'S BEST MARK.

High school was beginning again, and two fluffy heads were close together. Senior Claire was helping Freshman Lottie plan her programme for the year.

"I know one thing I don't want," declared the younger girl, "and that's French with Mademoiselle De Garmo."

"That's where you're mistaken," was the prompt reply. "If you can get into her class, don't miss it."

"But Maud says she marks you way down! Own up now, what was the best mark she ever gave you?"

"Zero," said Claire, after a moment's thought.

"Nonsense! I meant truly. You never got a zero in your life."

"It isn't known. I never told before. 'Twas in my freshman year—final exam, too."

"But you passed?"

"Oh, yes; on my year's work. 'Twas like this. I was in high feather as soon as I saw the questions, and began scribbling down the answers in a hurry, but, when I was about half through I noticed that most of the class were nibbling their pencils and looking worried. Just then I saw Mame Norton smiling at me, and before I thought my lips had formed a word! Almost before it was out mademoiselle said:

"'What did you say then, Miss Beardsley?'

"My face was like fire—I was so startled—but I looked her in the eye and answered:

"'One word—easy.'

"She kept perfectly still for a minute. Then she told the class very quietly that she was sure I had not meant to be dishonorable, but that she must consider my case before she acted.

"Well, I settled down to work again, not much worried. I was sure mademoiselle liked me too well to flunk me for a little thing like that, and I was certain I was getting all the answers right. Two days went by and I thought I'd heard the last of it. Then she took me alone, and told me she had been obliged to give me zero on my exam."

"Claire!"

"Yes; she said I knew the rule, and I had broken it. She believed I had said just what I told her—nothing more; but other pupils, with less sense of honor, might communicate during examination and give the same explanation when it wasn't true. She would have no right to punish them if she let me off.

"'I lay awake last night,' she said, 'thinking about you, Claire. I decided I must help you to learn that not even those who love us can save us from the consequences of a broken law,' and then two big tears rolled down her cheeks.

"You can't think how it made me feel to see her cry. I could have hugged her right while she was giving me zero! Then I thought about how mother was going to feel, and my heart went down. But mademoiselle said:

"'That is another thing this zero must teach you. We can't suffer the consequences of our lawbreaking alone. Those we love have to suffer with us.'

"How many times do you suppose I've thought of that in the last two years? I wouldn't give up that zero for the highest mark in school. And you will get into her class if you can, young lady! She'll teach you more than French!"—Youth's Companion.

A SCENE FROM LIFE.

Harrington might as well have lived inside the Chinese wall—or outside as for that matter—as far as social intercourse with his neighbors was concerned. They avoided him, and he left them alone. They never went to him, but to transact necessary business. He was never seen inside one of their houses.

He was a cold, selfish man of the world. There was sarcasm in his voice and a sneer upon his lips. He was called a skeptic. Most of his neighbors belonged to the church. He was hard and grasping in his dealings. Perhaps some of his neighbors were likewise niggardly, but being stingy doesn't make a man like another stingy man.

"The most overbearing man I ever seen," said one neighbor.

"He'd skin a flea for its hide," said number two.

"A feller might freeze on his doorstep and he'd never open the door," added number three.

For twenty years he had lived among them growing richer all the time. Farm after farm had been added to his estate, until his acres stretched away for two miles in every direction from his large house.

Perhaps it was part envy, perhaps part fear, for his tongue was sharp and his eye was keen, but whatever the cause, he was cordially disliked by all his neighbors. They called him "Old Skinflint" or "Pinchbeck," and shunned him whenever possible.

"He won't even go to a funeral," said one. "He wouldn't let you have a piece of ice if your child was dying with the fever," said another. "He never was seen in church," remarked the deacon.

"He oughter be rode out of the country on a rail," put in the horse jockey—"or rotten egged," added the local politician.

And this was the public opinion of Harrington. If he cared none ever knew, for he certainly made no effort to win the good opinion of his neighbors.

A new pastor came to the country church; one very much in earnest about saving souls. As he went about in his quiet, unobtrusive way doing good, he never lost opportunity of persuading some to turn from his way.

One evening as he stood talking with some of the brethren about the work, he remarked: "I am going over and talk with Mr. Harrington tomorrow." "No! No! it will never do," they protested in one voice. "He's sure to insult you," said the deacon. "He'll kick you out of the house," remarked another, "if you say anything about religion." "It will do no good. He's a hardened infidel," added another brother.

"I wouldn't go, Brother Simpson," persuaded one of the leading men of the church: "it will be wasted time, and you'll have your feelings hurt." "I'd just as soon try to convert Satan, himself," put in another, impatiently.

"I thank you all, brethren, for your advice," said the pastor: "but, nevertheless, I'm going."

He went. Harrington was sitting on the south porch reading as the minister came up. The pastor introduced himself and offered his hand. The other shook hands with him and offered a chair.

"As I told you, I am a minister," began the pastor at once, "and my work, you know, is trying to save souls. I came to talk with you about yours, if you have no objection." Harington looked at him strangely for a moment. There was simplicity and candor in his face as well as words. There was no arrogance visible here—only brotherly love.

"Very well, sir, I have no objection," Harrington said frankly.

For hours they talked as man to man on the highest of all themes, the welfare of a man's soul. At last they went in, and bowed together while the minister prayed. When they arose, Harrington held out his hand; the minister put his arm about his shoulders. The tears were running down both faces, as Harrington said, in a broken voice: "For twenty years, I've longed to talk with somebody about religion and my soul, but they all shunned me and I was too foolishly proud to go to them. You can hardly know how I have longed for human fellowship and sympathy, but my selfishness has kept me and my fellowman apart. I never knew how it was until now—but the message you have brought makes it clear—I must love my neighbor as myself—and I will."—Rev. Wm. H. Hamby in Western Christian Advocate.

Young preachers desiring to learn something concerning the popular courses for Christian workers offered by the Correspondence School will receive the necessary papers by addressing Rev. J. L. Cunninggim, Nashville, Tenn.

The scholarly communication of Prof. Swartz in this issue will be read with much interest. It discusses a matter that is just now giving Dr. Winton of the Christian Advocate (Nashville) no little trouble. It treats of immortality.

The second son of Rev. Sam Jones, familiarly called Bob by his friends, has, since his father's death, thrown himself into the work. He has exercised in public for some time past, but not until Sunday, Nov. 4, did he take a text and preach a sermon. May he be faithful, and become a worthy son of his honored father!

As a country we are verging near to anarchy when a judge in actual authority and congressman-elect carries a pistol and deliberately shoots and kills a fellow-man. Who is safe and where can helpless men and women go with any assurance of finding protection? The killing of a citizen at Baton Rouge last week by a district judge, two days after his election to Congress, should open the eyes of every man in Louisiana to the dangers that confront the people.

The government of France recently enacted a law enforcing a rest day—one day in seven. And news comes now that the Empress Dowager of China has recommended Sunday observance among her people. Alas, while some nations heretofore backward are now making progress in many sections of our own country, the "Continental Sunday" is being introduced and encouraged. The flood-gates of ruin are fast opening.

The Times-Democrat is our authority for saying that in New Orleans there is one saloon or liquor bar for every twenty-six men in the city. Can any city beat that? When it is considered that one-half of the twenty-six do not drink, or, if they do, touch it lightly, it must be that the other half, with their wives and children or their female friends, drink to excess, else sales are exceedingly small. We do not wonder that the corner groceries stand out against high license.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SOUND DOCTRINE.

"The bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it, and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it," was a proverbial expression used by Isaiah to indicate to the rebellious people that they would "find all their sources of confidence fail them," that there would "be hopeless perplexity in their affairs." So shall all men be confounded who trust in their own arm of flesh, or construct a creed for themselves which is not according to Christ.

Nothing is more clearly set forth in the gospel than the fact that final salvation depends on maintaining sound doctrine, which only can inspire correct and holy living. It is for this reason that so much is said in the Scriptures about "the faith," and so much importance attached to personal piety. But it is not infrequently the case these days that orthodoxy is discounted, and stress laid on personal service. This is something new in the world. The heretic to-day stands quite as much show as does the man who adheres to the "old paths"—indeed, he brings himself into prominence, not to say popularity, and is often the hero of the hour. If arraigned for his erroneous teachings he becomes at once a martyr, a sufferer for conscience sake.

What has effected this change of attitude towards men who deny the essentials of the gospel? Is it a matter of serious import? The change we think is largely due to the false notion that a man is on a safe moral basis if he is honest in his convictions, and does not lead a vicious life. When the doctrine, "It makes no difference what a man believes if he is sincere," was first propounded, it startled the old theologians. To-day it creates no stir, notwithstanding it grants the right of every man to construct the foundation and superstructure of his religion, taking no account of the teachings of the gospel. Hence we seldom hear expressions of surprise at any sort of creed. Of course it is a matter of no moment to such that far-fetched and dangerous doctrines prevail. But to those who hold that Christ is the author of salvation, and head over all things to his Church, the change of attitude is serious. They see the evil that is sure to follow.

It cannot be true that any kind of religious belief is safe. Some men's religion may prove their ruin. A look at the subject from several Scriptural standpoints may help us to see this. The Scirptures insist on soundness in doctrine. That the early Christians might not be misled, the sacred writers were careful to point out the features necessary to be believed and acted on. One such we have in John's statement concerning the incarnation: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. * * * * And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth." This statement fixes forever in the Church the relation of Christ, both to the Father and to the world; and taken in connection with the first verse of the first chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, makes Christ, not only the author of our holy religion, but the revealer, and mouth-piece of the Father. Without such a revelation we could have no rational conception of the atonement. Consider also Paul's statement of the principles of the gospel: "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." Such are the points of Christian doctrine which we are to heed. And let it be noted that these doctrines are fixed and unchangeable.

A man's creed largely shapes his life. It is easy to see that one who has no religious convictions has no religious life. It is just as easy to see that one whose opinions are lax, or, as the world says, liberal, leads a careless life. Tell us what a man believes and as a rule we can tell how he lives. Tell us what a man's notions are in regard to the Sabbath, and it is unnecessary to tell us how he spends the day. Tell us what his notions are in regard to personal Christian duty and example and it is unnecessary to tell us whether he is a regular church goer, or whether he indulges in sinful amusements, or does anything else that cannot be done "in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Such notions of doctrine and duty as lead people into the Church as into a social club, or to the assumption of vows that do not bind to holy living, are not born of the spirit, and cannot profit the soul in this life, or give assurance of life to come. They lead to a religion of ruin. Those who make a profession of it are "dead while they live."

The early Christians thought it necessary to believe all the articles of the Christian faith, to separate themselves from the world, and to walk circumspectly before men, "not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time because the days were evil." God has not changed, and it requires as much religion to save to-day as it did in the days of old. To live otherwise than God directs and then ask and expect to be saved is presumption pure and simple. Jesus cut the matter short when he said: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity."

PREACHING HOLINESS.

A good brother local preacher writes us that he never hears sermons from "the pastors" on the subject of "holiness or sanctification, as a second blessing;" and that they do not like to hear local preachers talk on the subject in their pulpits.

Certainly if the pastors of the churches do not preach holiness they are at fault, and if they decline to let local preachers discuss it in their pulpits, it must be because of the manner in which they preach it, and not because they object to the subject itself. Unfortunately, on account of the difference of opinion among us as to the process by which sanctification is reached, divisions, sometimes very hurtful, have occurred.

In the early years of our ministry the church was never troubled on the subject and it was often the theme of discourse. A presiding elder under whom we once served seldom preached anything else. He was zealous and insistent, and not infrequently he was tiresome. But he was never offensive in his manner, nor did he create divisions in the church. It remained for "holiness evangelists" of later days to do this. They do it by insisting on a theory of holiness, and not by preaching holiness itself. In our day such expressions as "sanctification subsequent to regeneration," and "the second blessing as a distinct work of grace" are common among us—terms which would not create antagonisms if they were not often accompanied by specialists with declarations to the effect that the theory which they advance is infallibly correct.

The most intelligent specialist we ever heard, in his sermon, stated the doctrine about this way: "Sanctification is a second work of grace subsequent to regeneration—a work distinct in character and nature, a work by which we get rid of original sin. On the part of the justified soul it must be believed and accepted, it must be experienced and professed, otherwise there can be no salvation." Many people accepted this man's views of the subject, and of course put all who did not pronounce their "shibboleth" outside the pale of salvation. Antagonisms and divisions were the natural results.

We confess to entire sympathy with brethren who preach holiness or Christian perfection, as propounded and explained by Mr. Wesley in his "Plain Account." But we have no sympathy at all with the man who tells us that we "are not of Christ and on the way to hell" simply because we do not believe in his process of reaching perfection.

The purpose of Methodism, our fathers believed, was to "spread Scriptural holiness over these lands"—not by men who, like O'Kelley, "preached sanctification like an angel and fought Asbury like a devil," but by men imbued with the Holy Ghost who preached according to the spirit of the Master. And we venture to say there is not a pastor or local preacher in all the land that will fail of a hearing, not to say of a welcome, if he will preach holiness after the manner of St. Paul or John Wesley. But if after the manner of some specialists, following them in their tirades against the church and her constituted authorities, they will not receive a welcome to all our pulpits.

PERSONALS.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, of the Silver Creek Circuit, Mississippi Conference, at the close of a business letter adds: "The work is moving along nicely."

Rev. W. C. Calceran, preacher-in-charge of the Columbus Circuit, has favored us with a fine list of subscribers, including three renewals, for which he has our thanks.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Holly Springs, now closing his fourth year in that healthy town, says: "I will make a good report at Conference." The brethren would be greatly surprised if he did not.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham is winding up his fourth year at Aberdeen "in good form." Among his last official acts will be an effort to increase the circulation of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We hope he may succeed.

Several preachers have promptly replied to the Publisher's request to send the names of the post offices in their respective charges, for which he returns thanks. He hopes all of the brethren will heed his request. It would be helpful all around.

Rev. M. M. Black writes: "The Sunday School missionary rally held at Purvis, Miss., Sunday night, Nov. 11th, was a great success in every way. The church was packed with eager listeners, and the collection amounted to $13.84."

"Our church at Greenville has been blessed of late with a good revival. Dr. Jno. P. McFerrin did the preaching, Brother Countiss says, "in a masterly manner." The church was greatly revived, and three persons received into membership on profession of faith."

Dispatches from Jackson, Miss., indicate that Bishop Galloway still continues to improve. He is able to be up and enjoy the company of his family, but his physicians think it advisable to deny the presence of visitors. He needs quiet, and a long rest.

Rev. J. W. Tinnin is working with the Epworth Mission in the city. The contract for a chapel has been let. The house will be used temporarily for service, and after a while be converted into a parsonage. Boards of trustees and stewards have been appointed and organized.

Rev. P. D. Hardin, of the Mississippi Conference, has been transferred to the New Mexico Conference and stationed at Roswell, which, in point of membership, is next to the largest charge in the Conference. We regret very much the going of Brother Hardin. He is one of our very best men.

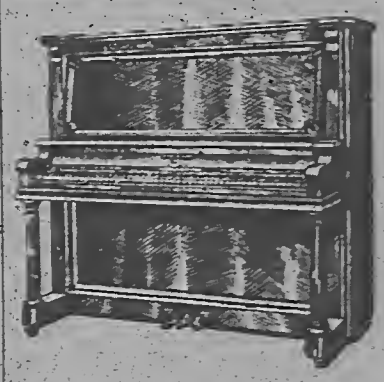
Dr. John T. Sawyer has called a meeting of the Legal Conference of the Louisiana Conference, to be held in the office of THE ADVOCATE at 11 a. m., of Wednesday, Nov. 21. He has also called a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College, to meet in Jackson, La., at 2 p. m. of Thursday, Nov. 22. He hopes for a full attendance at each meeting.

Rev. T. J. Warlick, presiding elder of the New Orleans District has placed Rev. J. W. Tinnin in charge at Garyville, a flourishing lumber town, where a church with a good membership has been organized. A six-room, two-story parsonage has been provided, and also a beautiful church built by the lumber company. With the help of the Mission Board, the church will give a pastor a good support.

Rev. and Mrs. John H. Mitchell, of the North Mississippi Conference, will celebrate their "silver wedding" Friday evening, the 23d of November, at their home in Aberdeen, Miss. We appreciate the kind invitation to be present on the happy occasion, but there is another wedding in the case about that time, in which the editor will have an important part. We wish Brother and Sister Mitchell much happiness, and that they may live to celebrate the golden anniversary.

The Trustees of the Carnegie Teachers' Pension Fund have done the handsome thing in awarding a pension of $1,150 per year to Dr. J. H. Carlisle, of South Carolina. This is a fitting recognition of the worth of a great and good man, who has given his long life to the cause of education, fifty years of which he spent in Wofford College. Dr. Carlisle retired from active work several years ago, but he is still interested in his beloved school.

A sad note from our brother, Rev. Robt. Selby of Hattiesburg brings intelligence of the death of his youngest born, John Irwin, two years and seven months of age, who passed away on Sunday afternoon last. The little one was sick eleven days. The hearts of father and mother are crushed, but they are resigned to the will of God, and thank him that the dear boy, snatched from their arms, is safe in the keeping of the Saviour. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of many friends.



Rev. C. C. Miller, of Centenary College, who recently received severe knife-wounds at the hands of one of the professors the result of an altercation the merits of which we have not learned, has so far recovered as to be able to get about. He has resigned the Presidency of the institution and moved off the campus. President Miller and the Professor are both under bond, and will answer at the next session of the court at Clinton, unless the matter can be satisfactorily adjusted before the term begins.

An event of uncommon interest to Mississippi Methodists will be the marriage of Rev. William Marvin Langley, of the North Mississippi Conference, to Miss Mary Ellen Koon. The marriage will take place at the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, Miss., the 29th of November. Brother Langley is the son of Rev. A. W. Langley, who has long been an honored and useful member of the Conference, and Miss Mary Ellen is the daughter of Rev. O. M. Koon, of the same Conference, who died about fifteen years ago. The young preacher is to be congratulated. We thank Rev. and Mrs. O. A. Oats, managers of the Orphanage, for an invitation to the wedding.

We have just received a respectful request to publish information concerning an important enterprise of the church. We would gladly do so, but the copy—taken, we suppose, on a manifolding machine—is so bad that we cannot afford to put it in a printer's hands. The printer's time is his money.

BAKER, LA.

Dr. Boswell: I am winding up my fourth year on one of the best circuits in the Louisiana Conference, and I am pleased to say that I never served a more loyal and devoted people during my past ministry, nor do I ever expect to find anywhere a people more true. They live to a high moral standard, and such sinfulness as balls and card parties are not known among my congregations.

During the entire four years they have been very devoted to their pastor, and their sympathy with him in his sore bereavement was tender and most beautifully expressed. The pastor who comes to Baker Charge next year will fall among God's people, and will be welcomed by warm hearts who will support him, and love him, and pray for him, and shoulder the burdens with him.

In the four years my people have advanced spiritually and made material progress. The parsonage has been enlarged and papered, a cistern added, and new fences built. The church here has been lighted, carpeted, seated, a new organ placed, and a chancel rail added. There has been improvement in Black Water church In the way of better lights and a carpet. A new church has just been built at Bethel which will shelter the large congregations that assemble there to hear the gospel.

We have held four meetings this year. At Durford I was assisted by Rev. A. W. Turner, who, by his evangelical sermons, attracted and edified large congregations. Turner is able help in a meeting, and would make us a good Conference evangelist, for which he has special gifts. I think the time has come when the Bishop ought to appoint at least two good men to this work. What think ye, brethren? The visible results of this meeting were ten additions by profession.

At Baker I was assisted by Brother E. K. Means, of Baton Rouge, First Church; results, eighteen accessions, —twelve to our communion and six to the Presbyterian. This was a gracious revival, and the entire membership was blessed and edified. Brother Means is one of our strongest preachers. This is the second meeting he has held for us here at Baker, and these good people would be glad to have him again next year. I was assisted at Bethel by Brother Wier, who preached some most excellent sermons, but the weather was so inclement we could do but little and had to close before the appointed time. Brother Wier is good help.

Brother Townsley helped me last week at Blackwater. We tried it in the month of July, but owing to inclemency of weather had to quit. We had here a good meeting with ten accessions in the two attempts. Brother Townsley is full of religion and zeal and a brilliant preacher—a young man of talent, with a bright future before him. My people want him next year; but he lacks one essential qualification in order to supply this charge: he is not married; but, very probably he is "groannig so to be," and if this be so, indeed these good people could take him and "perfect that which is lacking in his faith," as there is plenty of material here to supply the lack.

In regard to finances, I will state that we have grown every year, and I expect to report everything in full at Conference.

Now, Doctor, I hope you will not be so crowded for space as to necessitate the placing of this letter in the obituary column. It may be a little lengthy, but you must indulge me this one time in four years. Fraternally. J. W. LEE.

FROM MONTGOMERY, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Our fourth and last quarterly conference for the Montgomery charge was held at Montgomery the 3rd and 4th of November. Dr. John T. Sawyer, presiding elder, presided with his usual good-natured dignity and firmness. This quarterly conference was the best ever held on this work for the two years I have served. While the collections were not in full, (but we think they will be by 1st of December) however, the whole proceeding of the Conference was filled with unity of action and godly love of spirit. Dr. Sawyer won for himself a Christian reputation with our people, both as a presiding elder and minister of the gospel. He preached four as spiritual sermons as it has ever been our good fortune to hear. Each service seemed to be thrilled and filled with the Holy Ghost. The preaching greatly edified the church, and did the town and people good. Dr. Sawyer has so completely won our people to himself by his Christly administration that our people would rejoice to have him returned to the Alexandria District as presiding elder in 1907.

May God's choicest blessing be on each charge in the Louisiana Conference, and may every report show advancement along all lines for our Lord and Master. God bless Bishop Ward in his broad field of labor, God bless each presiding elder in the Louisiana Conference, God bless each pastor and local preacher in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference; God bless every board of stewards in the State, and every official board connected with the M. E. Church, South, and last, and best of all, God help every one of us to preform each and every duty that God and the church has given us to do.

And in conclusion, Dr. Boswell, may God bless you in the future as he has done in the past; that the dear old Christian Advocate may grow, spread and spread until it shall find a welcome in every Methodist home in Louisiana, and when your life-work is ended on earth you will hear the Master say come up higher and join the heavenly host. Yours in Christ,

W. J. ELLIOTT, P. C.

NATCHITOCHES, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell: The Conference year is nearing its end, and perhaps a report will not be out of order.

During the year the church has been made more attractive and comfortable. Velvet carpet has been laid in the aisles, vestibule, altar; opera chairs have been placed for the use of the choir, and leather pulpit chairs have been provided for the minister. The parsonage has been newly papered, and the inside woodwork painted and hardoiled. Both church and parsonage present a neat appearance (thanks to the Ladies' Aid Society, which has raised most of the money and deserves the credit).

Church attendance has been encouraging and shows a gradual increase. We have gained about twenty-five in membership, and others will come in later. The Sunday school is well manned with officers and teachers, all of the teachers being members of the faculty in the State Normal School, or graduates of that institution.

The attendance has increased about 50 per cent, and the prospects are bright for a still larger school.

Our town is becoming quite an educational centre, as the Normal enrolls about 1000 students yearly, of whom many are from Methodist families; hence this is a strategic point for our church. A large number of these attend our Sunday school and church, and both pastor and people give them a hearty welcome and a church home, and pray that we may be of service to them.

The prospects are that our financial report will be in full. Yours fraternally, M. C. HOLT.

BOLTON CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We are visiting from house to house, and doing all the good we can in the name of our blessed Lord. It does us good to meet one, ever and anon, who gladly testifies that he has been saved through our agency. How such testimonies enrich one's life! We are bending every energy towards readiness for Conference. We are hoping, laboring and praying for a full and creditable report. At each appointment we have enlisted some of our female members to collect our Conference assessments. This we thought best to do in order to give all our time to the most important business. One feels so free and untrammeled to be relieved of the embarrassment of losing time by serving tables. We hope the day is at hand when the church will see to it rigidly that her ministers shall be free from this great embarrassment. We found our people on Bolton charge willing and ready to come to our relief when appealed to. God bless them for it. He will bless them for it, if they will respond to other conditions required. Brother W. B. Hogg is a great helper. We predict a great future for him.

APPEAL FOR THANK OFFERINGS.

Within the last twelve months the erection of our handsome new building and removal of the Home from Water Valley to Jackson have entailed upon the institution unusual expense. This fact, together with the increased number of inmates in the Home, has made our need more urgent than before, and emphasizes the call for larger liberality upon the part of our people.

The erection of modern fire escapes, the following up of new schoolrooms, and providing increased facilities for our work, has caused an indebtedness of about $2,000 that demands immediate payment, while the complete furnishing of the new building will necessitate enlarged giving by our friends.

May we not expect a contribution within the next thirty days from every congregation, every Sunday school, and every Epworth League within the bounds of the two Conferences?

We trust that your Thanksgiving contribution to the Home will give evidence of your growing love for this great benevolent institution of Methodism in Mississippi.

To the many friends of the institution, whose individual contributions have shown their intense interest in our work, we confidently appeal in the name of the needs of the Home.

Promptly forward your reports and the amounts contributed to

REV. Q. A. OATS,
Manager, Jackson, Miss.

Easy way to get Epworth Church Organ

How is your church music getting along?

Are your people complaining that the music is dragging a little?

Is the chorister getting discouraged?

Does the organist complain that the service makes her tired and nervous?

Is the preacher worried and embarrassed by frequent balks in the music?

Well, it may be that the church organ is the cause of it all.

The organ may be too old—too small—too weak—or pumps hard.

If you are having any such church organ trouble, you ought to try an Epworth.

Your church folks would be delighted to see how a nice, new, easy-playing, sweet-toned Epworth organ would brighten up the music—and set everybody to singing.

Epworth stops are so easy to understand—keys are so responsive—and the pedals pump so light, that even an ordinary organist can do wonders with an Epworth organ.

Then the tone of the Epworth is so powerful—so rich—and so sweet, that when the people hear it—they feel just like joining in the music.

The Epworth helps the preacher too,—for you know when the music has vim and sparkle and power, he finds it so much easier to preach.

Prof. E. O. Excell, the famous Sunday School song book man, says the Epworth is just about the best organ he can find to make the people want to sing—and he ought to know about organs for he has tried them all.

Now, we are so sure that the Epworth would wonderfully improve your church music—that we are willing to send you one at our own expense on a month's trial.

If, after trial, you find the Epworth to be the sweetest toned, easiest playing, most satisfactory organ you ever saw—and want to keep it—your church may buy it at the factory price and on any reasonable terms of payment.

And we will give your choir, music committee, Sunday School, Ladies' Aid, or Epworth League plenty of time to pay for the organ.

And we will send a little book showing six easy ways of raising the organ money.

We have helped thousands of churches to improve their music, and we can help yours, too.

Our free organ book shows many different styles of the sweet-voiced Epworth church and parlor organs ranging from $40.00 up to $125.00.

This free book will also tell you which style is most suitable for your own church.

Now, no matter whether you are on the music committee or not, if you want to know more about this good chance for your church to get a fine Epworth organ at the factory price and on easy terms, just send us the following conpon or write the same in a letter or on a postal card.

A stamp and a few minutes of your time may help your church more than you think.

LESSON FOR NOV. 25.

FOR THE WORLD'S TEMPERANCE.
(Isaiah v, 11-23.)

Golden Text: "I keep under my body and bring it into subjection."—1st Cor. ix, 27.

Piety and intemperance have been arrayed against each other so far back that the mind of man runneth not to the contrary. Our lesson text is from the writings of the grand old prophet Isaiah, and they come to us in all the power of earnestness with which they should have been received by those to whom they were directed. The prophet was speaking of all the great blessings God had bestowed on his people, Israel, using a vineyard for illustration. All that was necessary to make the vineyard fruitful and profitable had been done, and as a result grapes were expected in abundance, but when the season came, behold, the vineyard had brought forth wild grapes! Now, the prophet must tell them what they should expect after they had so wickedly and carelessly neglected to follow the words of the Lord, that had so wonderfully preserved them from the exodus on up to the present time. They must expect woe! Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning not to greet the growing light with praise to him who said, "Let there be light," but that they may follow strong drink, and they that continue until night and become inflamed with wine.

To successfully pursue a purpose, the mind must be free from contrary impressions. They had been well taught that God had demanded a love of the whole mind; then how could they do this when they had turned away to feasts, enlivened by music produced with instruments first made for the praise in the temple service? Instead of a sedate and reverent mind, they were in an inflamed, passionate condition — a condition to which an appeal from reason was, "Therefore are my people gone into captivity ineffectual." They were then, as now, taken captive by an appetite that at first seems innocent and harmless, but imperceptibly grows until there is no escape. While we direct the warning of the prophet to the individual, yet so great is the prevalence of this great evil that the nations of the world are classified, and it is a question as to which is the largest contributor to a practice that is at once low and debasing. It is a fact, and a pleasing one, that the public sentiment in our country is decidedly averse to indulgence in intoxicating drink.

A man not of sober habits cannot hold a position of trust and responsibility. Large corporations watch their employes in this respect as much as they do in honesty and truthfulness. This is done as a safeguard for business interets. The followers of Christ should be still more active in the interest of our Master.

After the prophet had described the depths to which the drinkers of wine would sink, he reminds them that God would be exalted, and would exalt all who preserve their minds in a fit state to receive instruction unto righteousness.

The figure used in the lesson text of drawing iniquity with cords of vanity, as does the moderate drinker with his occasional glasses, then, as it were, sin with a cart rope, shows the increase of the evil until, seeking to justify themselves, they become lost to all that is holy, good and true. They go so far as to rail against all that is good and find fault with the kind-hearted ones who would help them to save themselves. It is the same old story, the same to-day as it was when Isaiah was moved to so cry against it.

Where, then, is the remedy? Surely there must be one. We are not to sit idly by while the devil is using his most effectual weapon to destroy those for whom Christ died. The sooner we realize that intemperance is distinctly the devil's work, the better will we know what the remedy is and use it. First, we must look to ourselves—are we in condition for the fight? It is necessary to be filled with the Spirit; then "be not drunken with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." It need not be our intention to especially contend against this evil, for when one is saved for Jesus this, with all other sins, will be washed away.

Paul laid much stress on the effect of example, telling us that he would not act in any way that a brother be offended, even if there were no harm at all in the act. In all work for Jesus we must be "wise as serpents and harmless as doves." Let not our great aversion to evil make us despise the evil-doer. The world is right now complaining that the Church is working at long-range. Be fully equipped with the meekness and gentleness of Christ, then go forth right among the wicked ones and begin. You will not be among them long before they will know who you are and who is your Master. They will watch you closely, day in and day out, to see if your life is the background for the truth you wish to impress on them.

No man in this day and time need tell the world that he is a follower of Christ, for "if a man love God, the same is known of him."

As a closing truth, let it be told as a veritable fact that a man can live a blameless life and for years be known as having wonderful influence for good, and the means of many leading new lives, but let that man be seen taking one drink, or heard engaged in any unchaste conversation, or guilty of the least dishonest act in business, and that man's usefulness for Christ is destroyed. He must go back to the starting point and begin building again the work that takes years to be fruitful for the Master. Let us, then, watch, and "keep under our bodies and bring them into subjection, lest that by any means, when we have preached to others, we ourselves should be castaways."

JONESBORO (LA.) CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Boswell: I preached a sermon last Sunday evening at Hodge, on the subject of Baptism, discussing the following points. (1.) The baptism of John was not the Christian baptism: (2.) Why was Jesus baptised?

I said there were three theories. Only one of the three was correct. (a) It is said by some that Jesus was baptized for an example. I showed if he had been baptized for an example, he would have been the first baptized. (b) It is claimed by some to represent his death and burial and ressurrection. I then gave them the following in answer to that, found in Matthew xii:39-40. The Scribes and Pharisees desired a sign. "But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign he given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonah was three days in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." I showed beyond any douht that this was the only sign to the death and burial and resurrection of Jesus, Christ being the judge himself. (c) The third and Scriptural theory is simply this: He was baptized to induct him into his priestly office. I proved this beyond a shadow of a douht. Then I discussed the mode of water baptism, in the usual theological way, answering every passage that the immersionists cling to, and then gave them a thus saith the Lord in favor of affusion, the Scriptural mode.

I believe the sermon did much good. Our Baptist brethren had preached on the subject a short time before, and ignored our mode of baptism.

I received three good members at Hodge last Sunday, and the Sunday before two by profession and baptism, the other by profession. There are more to follow. The Jonesboro Circuit is moving up some. The Conference is near at hand, and may we, the ministers in this Conference, go up with better reports this year than ever before. Pray for me.

S. D. HOWARD.

REPORT FROM ADAMS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have been made to rejoice as we read of many gracious revivals our brethren have been having on their works, and of how the Lord has prospered them in their labors.

The Lord has also been with us, and blessed us greatly. Our first meeting was held at Johnston Station, with Brother J. W. Campbell, of Edwards, to assist us. God used him mightily in presenting the truth in a way that it revived the whole town. Both Baptists and Methodists were greatly benefited, and we had three accessions by profession and baptism.

Our next meeting was at Adams, where we were assisted by Brothers W. H. Lewis and N. B. Harmon. We also had the pleasure of having with us Brother English, of Ohio, an evangelist of the M. E. Church, who preached for us a few times. These, with the local brethren, the united prayers of the Christians, and the mercies and help of the good Lord, brought us great times of refreshing. The Holy Spirit was manifested in great power, and the church was wonderfully revived. As a result we have received three by vows and baptism, and the church in every department is doing better work.

Our last meeting was at Ebenezer, where we had the ministerial assistance of Brother J. E. Grey. The Lord was with us throughout, and gave his Holy Spirit in great power. It was one of the best revivals I have been in in years. Difficulties were settled, neighbors made friends, and there was general rejoicing. Here we received four by vows and baptism.

Looking through the pastor's eyes, we see great signs of improvement all over the work. God has been good to us and blessed our labors. We expect to make a full report on collections at Conference, and rejoice with the brethren over the good work God has done through our efforts this year. Yours fraternally,

H. P. LEWIS, Jr.

FROM MEADVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Since our last note to the Advocate we have been made glad by good protracted meetings and progress in the circuit. We held our first meeting at Oak Grove, beginning the fifth Sunday in July, Brother G. A. Guice helping; result, ten accessions, and much general good accomplished. This is Brother Guice's old home, and he is held in love and much esteem by all.

At Cool Springs we were assisted by Brother I. L. Peebles. He did some splendid preaching, winning the friendship and love of all who heard him. Here we had seven accessions.

Our meeting at Nebo, assisted by Brother P. H. House, was said by all to be the best one, probably, in the last ten years. Seven accessions, and a deeper consecration of the membership was the result.

At Meadville the first two days the pastor was alone; after that Brother V. D. Skipper came to his help. His preaching was greatly enjoyed by all, and especially by those who heard him when he was the pastor here nineteen years ago.

Meadville is now an incorporated village, taking on new life, but best of all, her people are alive to the needs of the people in things spiritual—there having been a Baptist and Presbyterian church organized here this summer. We are hopeful and pressing the Lord's work. Cordially,

W. W. PERRY.

Mrs. ANN E. WALTERS was born Dec. 8, 1837, and fell on sleep at her home in Pelahatchie, Miss., Aug. 25, 1906. She was a native of South Carolina, but came to Mississippi when 8 years of age with her parents, who settled in Rankin County, where she continued to reside until the day of her death. Sister Walters joined the M. E. Church, South, at Shiloh during the camp meeting, which was held in the fall of '57, since which time she lived a consistent Christian life. Her marriage, June 7, 1858, to Chas. J. Walters formed a happy event in her life. She was a worthy member of the Church, a true wife, a good mother, and kind-hearted to everybody. Her neighbors and friends spoke well of her. She leaves a fond husband and three children to mourn their loss. May the abundant grace of God sustain them in their sad bereavement.

MARTHA ANN, daughter of Reuben Marshall and Rachel Eastman Marshall, was born in Warren County, Miss., in 1827. The family removed to Carroll County and settled near Black Hawk in 1836. There Martha Ann grew up to womanhood, surrounded by the best influences of that time, and trained in a home of marked piety. Under the ministry of Rev. Ira Byrd and Rev. Stephen Johnson and other giants of that day, a fervent type of piety prevailed, and she gave her heart to God, living a faithful Christian life for nearly four-score years. In 1844 she was married to Samuel W. Bryan, and they established a Christian home near Carrollton, Miss. Six sons and three daughters were born to them, all of whom are living to-day, and demonstrate the efficiency of the training received in that pious home. At the time of her death Mrs. Bryan was the oldest member in years and in length of membership of the Carrollton Methodist Church. That church never had a more consistent and more faithful member than was she. As daughter, wife, mother, friend, neighbor, Mrs. Bryan exhibited in marked degree the virtues of our holy religion. In days of affluence she dispensed a generous and delightful hospitality, keeping open house to all worthy guests. Suffering, with her friends, reverses brought on by the war, her quiet dignity and serene cheerfulness never deserted her. Two sublimely beautiful things, among many, may be said of her: she was never known to complain, nor to speak unkindly of any one. "The law of kindness was in her mouth." Such, in brief, were the outlines of a long life consecrated to God in the service of mankind. The details were filled out in daily deeds of devotion to her family, and in generous kindness to all as opportunity offered or could be found. Having served her family and generation by the will of God, she "fell on sleep" on October 15, 1906, and passed to her certain and great reward. "So he giveth his beloved sleep," and "afterward receiveth them to glory."

J. R. BINGHAM.

Little WILLIE IRENE, daughter of J. W. and Mary Waltman, was born Nov. 16, 1902, and went home to Jesus Aug. 9, 1906, aged 3 years, 9 months and 7 days. She was taken sick on the 10th of July. The night she was taken sick she told her mamma she was going home, and wanted her to go part of the way with her. She talked from Tuesday night until Sunday of going away; she told the family all good-bye; told her mamma to give her sister's children her playthings, and then went off in a stupor and lay in that condition from the 15th of July until the 9th of August, never rousing any more. Just before she went into the stupor she said: "Mamma, you wont be ready to go with me." Her mamma said: "Yes, darling, mamma will be ready." Then she said: "No, mamma, the trains come; get me my clothes quick," and she raised up in the bed, dressed herself, and lay down again, closed her eyes and mouth, and never spoke again. Truly, "God works in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." Not quite four years she blessed and brightened her earthly home. Yes, dear mamma and papa, we know you miss sweet little Willie, her sweet voice, and the patter of her little feet around your home, and the bright, blue eyes that so often smiled lovingly into yours, but God's ways are not our ways. "He knoweth best," and often plucks the sweetest bud to bloom in that "city beyond." Look up, dear brother and sister, and trust in him who hath said: "Suffer the children to come unto me, and forbid them not." He only loaned little Willie to you for awhile, and now since he has taken her to himself, and she is safe in the arms of the Savior, those little hands that bade papa, mamma and sisters good-bye, are beckoning you to follow her to her home "not made with hands." "She is not dead, but sleepeth," and bye and bye we will all be gathered home. We will bow with sorrowful hearts and say: "Thy will be done." Willie was laid to rest in the cemetery at Wesson, Miss., in the presence of a large number of friends and loved ones. May God grant this dire affliction may draw them nearer unto him, and some glad day we may all be reunited in a home eternal in the heavens. Good-bye, little Willie, until we meet beyond this vale of tears.

Her aunt,
MRS. J. F. WALTMAN.

COURTLAND CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Boswell: As Conference is drawing nigh I am very busy trying to get ready, and I think I will be able to make a fairly good report from Courtland Circuit, regardless of the rain and wind that we have had.

The people on our work seem to have been ready for a revival during the past summer, and as a general thing they were not disappointed. I have received twenty-four into the church on profession of faith, and five by certificate. Several professed in my meetings that went to other churches.

WINNFIELD STATION.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Just one month from to-day our Conference meets at Shreveport. I am rounding up my work, and hope to report all claims paid in full. I am grateful to-day that I serve a kind and generous people. A few weeks ago, when storms were prevailing in different sections, one struck the parsonage in Winnfield. It came without warning, and took us by surprise. When the clouds had lifted and the noise ceased, we began an investigation and found that no damage was done to the house, but that our larder was well replenished with such things as a preacher's family needs. God bless the donors!

On the last day of October we closed a two-weeks' meeting, conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, Miss., well known to many in Louisiana as a fearless, earnest and eloquent preacher of the gospel. He denounces the popular sins of the day in a most effective manner, and is fine help in a meeting. The interest and attendance grew from the beginning, and we closed with a full house. The general impression is that it was a fine meeting, and that great good was accomplished. The church has been revived and strengthened, backsliders reclaimed and sinners converted to God.

About seventy-five persons claimed to be converted or reclaimed, and nearly fifty gave their names for membership in the different churches. I have received twenty-two, and expect to receive others. This makes fifty-five during the year. This is decidedly a Baptist town, but our church is gaining strength and influence all the time.

Rev. A. T. Galloway was with us in the meeting, and gave great satisfaction as leader of the choir. He was pastor of the church here twenty-five years ago, but is now a member of the White River Conference, and is stationed at Wynne, Ark. He has pleasant memories of Louisiana, and his old friends were glad to meet him again. R. A. HOLLOWAY.

ST. FRANCISVILLE, LA.

Dear Doctor: The last Quarterly Conference of the St. Francisville Charge was held at Star Hill Church Nov. 3 and 4, and it was a gracious and helpful one. The good people had arranged a sumptuous repast and served it on the grounds, inviting all that were present to partake of their hospitality. All participants enjoyed it to the utmost. Brother Tucker, our presiding elder, preached three able and spiritual sermons. His discourse on "Ministerial Support" was timely, and my wish was that more could have heard it. The work has made advances along all lines.

At St. Francisville we have the church organized as well as we could with the material at hand. The W. F. M. S. is doing excellent work and the Sunday school is in a flourishing condition. This year the pastor's salary was increased $100, and, unless there are providential hindrances, it will be paid in full. The membership on this charge is very small, but is composed of zealous and earnest workers for the Lord. My work with them has been pleasant, and, I hope, productive.

Conference is near at hand, and may we all pray that the Spirit of God may control our every movement, so that our beloved Zion will not suffer any harm. Yours in Christ,
W. D. KL...C...IDT, P. C.

"Seeing the Southwest" EXCURSIONS.

Doubtless you have heard of the Bumper Crops which have been raised this year in Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Texas and New Mexico. Have you compared them with results obtained in your section? Is your work where you are, bringing you adequate returns for the capital invested and the labor expended? If not, a change would be beneficial perhaps. A visit to the Southwest will open your eyes. Out in Oklahoma the last big land opening is soon to take place; farms are still very cheap in Western Arkansas; Northern Louisiana and the Gulf Coast of Texas. Let us give you full information about these sections. You will want to see them after you have examined our illustrated literature.

Glances at the World.

The week ending November 12 was notable for railroad accidents, no less than four having occurred, which were fatal to life as well as destructive to property. And only the week before a fearful one occurred that resulted in the loss of three score or more of human lives. Altogether more than one hundred persons were killed. This loss of life has thus been going on for months. Some of these accidents were due to carelessness and might have been prevented. For others' blame can be attached to no one. They all show that greater care should be taken in running trains, especially in the matter of crossing streams spanned by drawbridges. Railway authorities should compel every engineer to stop his train before crossing such a bridge. Signals cannot always be depended on—they mislead, as did the signals near Atlantic City, when the unfortunate train plunged into the water.

Two divorce suits in high life are attracting the attention of the millionaires in America and the aristocracy in Europe. The two women in the case are Americans. Of the men, one is an Englishman, the other a Frenchman. It is not suspected that either marriage, contracted several years ago, was the outgrowth of love, but that the men sought rich women to repair their broken fortunes, and that the women were taken in by the prospect of securing European titles. All of them got what they sought—the women far more than they bargained for. They stepped into incongenial society, and into a world of trouble. They found to their sorrow that the wearing of a title was no compensation for the sacrifice of a happy home. In both cases, if reports are true, the European noblemen are at fault, and in one case, at least, the good woman files her suit for divorce on Scriptural grounds. Both cases might well remind our American girls to let foreign fortune hunters alone.

Science has discovered that many of the diseases which afflict humanity are preventable. In this class is every disease that can be traced to parasites. Physicians and scientists believe that the time has arrived for establishing a National Department of He[illegible] Washington to wage warfare against all such diseases. The last meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science appointed a committee to promote the establishment of such department. We presume the object is to secure the aid of the general government to work in the same way it does in fighting against the diseases in plants and animals. In the latter, the government during the last ten years has spent ten millions of dollars. It could just as well and as legitimately spend a few millions to save the lives of the people. The need first of all is the awakening of the nation to the possibilities of such an undertaking. That done, and a call made for the establishment of such department, it would soon be realized.

It will be remembered that some time in the summer a squadron of negro soldiers at one of the posts in Texas went on a rampage in the adjoining town, and killed one of the citizens and otherwise did damage. For their misconduct the citizens were outraged, and to prevent a clash the troops were removed. Army officers tried in vain to secure the names of the guilty parties and never succeeded. They were shielded by their comrades. After a full investigation ordered by the President it was recommended that the whole troop, composed of three companies, be dismissed from the service. Accordingly the President issued the order, and they are to be dismissed without honor. This action of the President has brought upon him the wrath of certain fire-eaters of the North, and they have condemned his action as "despotic usurpation of power." Congress will be asked by these club men [illegible] the authority of the President in such matters. There being no possibility of bringing the criminals to justice the President did the next best thing to personal punishment. He dismissed the whole troop in disgrace.

The political campaign which closed with the elections on the 6th inst. were devoid of any special interest in the South, save perhaps in Missouri, which by the votes of the people was turned from the Republican to the Democratic ranks. There was also interest in Oklahoma over the election of delegates to a constitutional convention—the prohibition question being the dominant issue. At this writing—two weeks from the election—we have seen no report as to the result. The most exciting election was in New York—the Governorship being at stake. Mr. Charles E. Hughes was the Republican candidate, and Mr. W. R. Hearst, the Independence League candidate, endorsed by the Democratic party. Mr. Hughes was successful. Mr. Hearst ran far behind his party ticket. The whole country watched this contest with interest. Mr. Hearst is an aspirant for the Presidency, and had he succeeded he would have been a dangerous rival of Mr. Bryan. We risk little in saying that, notwithstanding his defeat, he will still be a rival, but not a dangerous one.

Never in the history of our country did the negro problem excite more intense interest than it does at the present time. Its solution occupies the thoughts of statesmen, Christians, and all others who have the welfare of both whites and black at heart. That the country, especially the South, is menaced, will not be denied. Nor is there a very great difference of opinion as to the real source of the evil. The consensus of opinion is that it is found in the liquor saloons, commonly called "dives," where bad negroes, and worse white men, congregate and are served with all sorts of vile drink. We do not doubt for a moment that much of the crime now being committed is generated and plans for its execution are laid in these dens of infamy. Some of these vile places vauntingly display a license and defy all public sentiment. Others are illicit —blind tigers, and none the less evil. But acknowledging all this, we seriously doubt the efficacy of the proposed remedy. The remedy is: Continue to sell liquor, but charge the sellers a high price for the privilege. Experience proves that high license does not enhance the price of liquor by the drink. The drinks may be a fraction smaller, or more diluted with water, but the price remains the same, and all who are accustomed to drink get what they want. And what is equally true is, that where high license closes a few shops, and bars disreputable negroes and others, "speak easies" are resorted to, just as they are when prohibition prevails, and matters get no better. Liquor furnished by blind tigers will do as much damage as liquor bought in a licensed dive. The true remedy is prohibition strictly enforced. The situation in San Francisco for six weeks after the earthquake amply proves what prohibition will do when officers do their duty. San Francisco, confronted by a terrible physical calamity, was in mortal dread, and knowing the evil of liquor, closed the saloons, and kept them closed, and the city was safe. Since the reopening of the saloons, terror reigns. Close the saloons and all will be well.

IMMORTALITY.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I have just read Dr. Black's strictures on the editorial of Dr. Winton in the Advocate (Nashville) of Sept. 7th. I think Dr. Black's article is both timely and pointed. After reading his and rereading that of Dr. Winton, I was put to thinking; and as I think I write. I am glad such men as Dr. Black have the courage of their convictions. It is a matter to be deplored that our general organ should be made the vehicle for the dissemination of such unwholesome doctrine. Dr. Black says: "The devil himself cannot devise a doctrine that will be more prolific of evil results." And yet, every itinerant in the Southern Methodist Church is expected to be a party to this thing. Should I teach such from my pulpit I would expect to be tried for heresy. And justly so. What is our church coming to, when our men in positions who are, or should be, leaders in thought and defenders of Bible truth, begin to teach things which do not "become sound doctrine"? Dr. W. would fain believe in the doctrine of annihilation. I would prefer the Romish dogma purgatory. It is by far the more comforting, and is certainly as Scriptural.

Moreover, the intellect is made the basis of spiritual life and happiness, as is seen from the following: "Its (life) continuance after death is consequent upon precisely the same condition as its beginning on earth, to-wit: The intelligent and persistent choice of a free will." No one would gainsay the truth of the assertion that eternal life, after death, is conditioned on the "persistent choice of a free will." This is essentially true of the adult intelligent believer. But that this is the "beginning" of this eternal or spiritual life on earth I cannot believe. On this hypothesis all who die before the age of moral accountability are lost because they have not that intelligence to exercise the will in making and executing this choice. This is either true, or else we are called upon to believe that there is nothing in infants to correspond with the divine environments; or otherwise stated, to respond to the act of saving grace, bestowed by the supernatural power of God, in the plan of redemption. I think the Word of God is plain on the point that salvation is a condition of the heart rather than that of the head. Is religion simply a psycological phenomenon? Has not the human soul some vital connection with Christ and an interest in eternal life, before these blessed truths can be brought within the compass of an intellectual perception? I therefore cannot agree with the Doctor that the beginning of spiritual life has its origin in the intellect. If this doctrine be true, then I ask, what is the status of infants? Are they simply a corporeal structure? Have they not, to say the least, latent spiritual life which is the effect of saving grace? Then the "intelligent choice of a free will" may be the beginning of an active Christian life, but certainly not the beginning of spiritual life itself. There is too much Bible against such a theory.

Now it is also asked, "If we miss heaven, if we are to spend eternity in the outer darkness, away from the light and warmth of home, will that be life?" We answer, No. It will be death! If it has ever been taught eternal death means life I have never heard of it. The Bible nowhere promises life, beyond, for the impenitent and the unbelieving. The sinful never die in their future place of punishment. They die before they leave this world. "Dead in trespasses and in sins." Every lost soul in hell is an apostate. They were once pure. Every one of them were once redeemed by the blood of Christ. We must believe this or discard the doctrine that children are born into the world under the full benefits of the atonement. It does not hold as a sequence that there is life because there is continued existence. Whatever may be implied in the idea of eternal punishment, we know it is one of consciousness and shall abide forever "where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." Two things are necessary to hold to this theory, viz: We must fail to understand the meaning of the words "eternal" and "everlasting," or fail to read Dan. 12:2, Mark 3:29, Math. 18:8, 25:41, 46, and 2 Thes. 1:9.

It is also implied, if not so stated, that it is fatalism to hold that eternal life is a gift. The position is taken that it is a "prize won" and "not a gift given." We believe it to be a prize won; but that does not argue that it is not also a gift bestowed. Paul says: "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." So it is both a gift and a prize won. It is a gift in this life; a prize in the life to come. The prize is not won until we get to the realms of glory. John, 1 Epistle, 5:11, says: "And this is the record that God hath given (not will give) to us eternal life." Here again we find eternal life "a gift given." "Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." This tells of the glorified state of immortality with which the faithful shall be crowned at last. This is the prize to be (not, indeed, already) won. We have not this glory now, says John. But Paul says: "We rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Rom. 5:2.

"Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine,
O what a foretaste of glory divine!"

No doubt this is what Paul meant when he said: "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil. 3:14. It was this prize that he was about to win when he delivered his last message to Timothy. Charging him to be faithful in "preaching the Word," he says: "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." "They shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables." Verily, this Scripture is fulfilled in our day! Dr. Boswell, we must manufacture a theology that will meet the present day demands! If we do not the people will go from us! I suggest that a restatement of our creed would be a long stride in this direction. Just before Paul crosses the river he says to Timothy, "Make full proof of thy ministry, for I am now ready to be offered—I have fought a good fight—henceforth, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." Here is the prize. None but those who have that gift spiritual life, abiding in them, are striving for this prize. Sinners are not in this race. Eternal life, then, is a gift offered to the sinner on the condition that he repents and believes. But the prize is to be won by the Christian. If we do not remain pure in heart and upright in life we cannot "run well" and will miss the prize. This prize is certainly conditioned on our faithfulness in well doing. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:10. Would any one deny eternal life to the poor sinner if he repents and calls on God at the last hour? Certainly not. "God is able to save to the uttermost all that call on him." Do we encourage any to put this matter off because this is true? By no means! We have no authority to exhort people to come to Christ to-morrow. "Behold now is the day of salvation, behold now is the accepted time!" But mercy, which is, indeed, a gift—the unmerited favor of God—is to be recommended to the vilest wretch, if it can be said: "Behold, he prayeth." We are not saved by works, but are kept saved by works and faith combined. Paul and James do not contradict each other. Paul taught that none can get to Christ by any merit of his own. "Not by the deeds of the law shall any flesh be justified in the sight of God"—a message to sinners. James has a message for the church—the saved.

Here it is as I understand the teaching of the Bible. Sinner, if you want (this want, of course, implies penitence) salvation, here it is—a gift—"without money and without price." Christian, if you would continue in this grace and finally win the prize, "strive to enter in." "Work out our own salvation with fear and trembling." "Grow in grace, etc." The sinner is never called upon to "grow in grace," for he has none to grow in. And he is nowhere admonished to grow into grace. Therefore, it must be a gift, the opinion of others to the contrary notwithstanding.

J. M. ALFORD.

AN EXPLANATION THAT DOES NOT EXPLAIN.

The Nashville Advocate of Nov. 9th contains the following: "Some of our readers seem unaccustomed to the use of exact language. Protests and criticisms from various quarters give us to understand that we are suspected of casting doubt upon immortality. We certainly did nothing of the kind. Whether or not immortality is an endowment of our nature as created or a gift of God later does not affect the fact or the duration of it. We owe it to our Creator in any event. How he gives it to us is a question that may invite speculation without at all raising the wholly different question whether or not he does give it to us. Being assured of immortality for all the children of God, we affirm again that we have but languid interest in the purely speculative question of whether or not God can annihilate a human soul."

That is decidedly rich. The editorial in the Nashville Advocate of Sept. 7th, which called forth these "protests and criticisms from various quarters," contains the following language:

"Are the lost, the finally impenitent, as truly immortal as the saved in heaven? Is consciousness of the pains of hell as surely eternal as enjoyment of the bliss of paradise? We do not know. That man is essentially and necessarily immortal is commonly thought to be the teaching of the Bible, but our own opinion is that the Bible is silent on this point. We are ready to concede, moreover, that it would be a relief to us, if a close study of Scripture and of the facts of human consciousness should bring the condition that the unhappy dead will, sooner or later lapse into absolute and final unconsciousness."

Now, will this learned scribe, who boasts of his exactness in the use of language, tell us whether in the above extract he meant to express doubt concerning the doctrine of eternal punishment or not? Stick to the point, Doctor. Do not try to dodge.

By bringing in irrelevant matter you are not accused of denying the doctrine of the eternal punishment of the wicked, but you are accused of expressing doubt on the subject, and the above quoted product of your most exquisitely "exact" pen is offered in proof of the charge. If the language quoted above does not mean that "eternal punishment" may mean nothing more than "absolute and final unconsciousness," then as a writer you belong in the same class with the artist whose picture of a horse needed to be labeled lest the animal should be mistaken for a goat.

W. C. BLACK.

WITHOUT LOVE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: While lying upon my bed on the 5th day of October, about 3 o'clock, and musing over the condition of our Southland, the great devastation that had been wrought upon it by wind and floods in the destruction of life and property, I could only see in it the finger of the wrath of God. I know that many are ready to say that it was the natural production of fixed laws ordained of God when he created all things. But when I take his Word, read and meditate on what he has said and the promises he has made to man, it is clear to my mind that it is permitted so to be as a judgment. Several causes have presented themselves to my mind why God has sent such destruction upon life and property as a judgment. But I believe the principal cause to be the want of love between the brotherhood of man, and I am sorry to say that its commencement is at the house of God, and that is why so many of every age and sex bid defiance to the laws of God and man. St. Paul says in his Epistle to the Romans (12th chap., 9-10 verses): "Let love be without dissimulation, abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring another." Again in Heb., 13-1, he says: "Let brotherly love continue." Again: If we will turn to the First Epistle General of Peter, second and third chapters, we find that he denounces uncharitableness, but exhorts all to "love the brotherhood, fear God," and to be obedient to the higher powers, civil and ecclesiastical. But instead, my observation in the last decade has been that in all the Christian denominations, and in almost every individual church organization, there is much uncharitableness among the brethren. Our Savior, while on earth, taught his disciples that in the last days false prophets should arise and would say: "Lo, here is Christ, or lo, he is there," and would try to seduce "if it were possible even the very elect." The Apostle Peter also tells us that false teachers among us would bring in damnable heresies, and many should follow their pernicious ways, by whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of, which thing has been fulfilled during the last decade. And that these teachers, through covetousness and feigned words, make merchandise of those who follow after them. Such teachers are now going up and down through the country teaching and preaching the theories of men, and not the gospel truths as taught in the word of God. On account thereof in many congregations you will find that the love of God has waxed cold. Brotherly love and kindness have become a thing of the past. Brethren and sisters have entered upon the dangerous and soul-destroying road of fanaticism, by adhering to the teaching and theories of these false prophets. Praise and adoration at family altars to our Father in heaven have almost ceased.

The hearty handshake of brotherly love in many churches is to be seen no more. Members of the same church that worship at the same altar refuse to call each other by the endearing name of brother or sister. And why? All because they follow after the teachings of men and not after the teachings of God's holy Word. God is love, and has made love to be the chief corner stone of all good to his creatures. Love is the fountain of all good. God requires and demands love among his people.

The world has an exalted idea of the Christian life, but when so much strife and so little love is manifested among brethren and so few living up to the ordinances of God, they say there is nothing in it, it's all a myth, a delusion, a farce, and we will have a good time while we live, and thereby bid defiance to the laws of God and man. Some in high positions in the church have gone so far in their teachings as to intimate that the wicked will be in an unconscious state throughout an endless eternity. What better does the world want to believe? And these calamities are sent upon us by a sin-avenging God as a just retribution.

OBSERVER.

NOTES OF PROGRESS.

The Nashville Advocate of Oct. 26th contained the following encouraging item:

"The Holston Conference breaks its record on missions. Assessments were overpaid by $1,750, the gain over last year being $1,038. Every district and 183 of the 192 pastoral charges reported in full on foreign and domestic missions. Fifty-three charges had a surplus. Both the leaders and the rank and file of the Conference are alive to the home situation, and the importance of sending the gospel to every creature. Great credit is due to their Board of Missions, which is one among the best organized, hard-working and progressive in Southern Methodism. This board, with the approval of the Conference and the Bishop, sends into the field a Conference missionary evangelist, Rev. J. C. Ward, who has special qualifications for this work."

The truth of the old saying, "Where there's a will, there's a way," is strikingly illustrated by the record just made by a church near Winchester, Ky., of which Rev. C. A. Tague is the pastor. Says the October Go Forward, of this church: "In addition to raising its assessment of $91 for foreign missions, it contributed a special of $191 for work in Kure, Japan, making a total of $282. The church has a membership of only seventy-one, is off the railroad, and the average ability of the members is not above that of many churches that simply meet their assessments. It has paid during the year $563.63 for missions. Surely few churches can make a better showing than this. The pastor writes that the entire church took a part in this work. That is one secret of their success, and the other is having a missionary pastor in charge. Brother Tague, it will be remembered, was in Japan for a number of years until compelled to return on account of his health."

THE SONGDO SCHOOL, WITH THE HON. T. H. YUN AT ITS HEAD.

The Songdo School is now beginning under the most favorable auspices. Several years ago Hon. T. H. Yun, profoundly interested in the education of his people, gave one thousand yen to begin a fund for an industrial school in Songdo. And at the same time Mr. Yun's father, although not a Christian, but interested in education, gave a thousand yen to the same fund. This money has drawn interest and been supplemented by small gifts until it has increased to more than three thousand yen. This is only a nucleus.

The natives have waited patiently for us as a church to do something and redeem our promises to give them a school.

Bishop Candler came with this one great enterprise on his heart. He thought about it, talked about it, prayed about it and lay awake at night planning for it. The greatest concern has been a suitable man at its head. Hon. T. H.

Yun, a member of our Chatkol Church, Seoul, who was one of Bishop Candler's students at Emory, Oxford, Ga., and who also took a course at Vanderbilt University, is the man he wanted at the head of this school.

Mr. Yun has given himself to his people in the service of the Government almost continuously since his return from America. His ability is recognized throughout the empire. He is the strongest Korean in the country, and has held high official position. He has served his people as Vice Minister of Education and as Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs. He has refused other official honors among the highest in the gift of the Emperor. Recently he declined the fourth time to accept the appointment of Minister of Foreign Affairs, not desiring to continue in the service of the Government.

The great obstacle to his throwing his whole life into the work of the church has been his obligation to his father, who for a life time has been in public service.

According to Korean custom, the eldest son inherits the estate and takes care of the parents. This obligation Mr. Yun felt binding upon him, unless his father would release him entirely. And he felt that his father, not being a Christian, could not see why he should release him.

Bishop Candler was the providential character to step in and handle this situation. When he asked the aged father to give his son to this great work he replied: "I entrusted him to you years ago when I knew you not and you made a man out of him, and his walk has been straight. Now I give him back to you." And turning to his son and addressing him as a father would a child, said: "I have given you to your teacher."

That day marked a new era in the educational work of our church in Korea. We are ambitious that this Songdo School should be a great educational center for the young men of new Korea.

In one year our church has doubled its statistics and we must have a great educational plant for our rapidly growing church, and we believe we have at the head of it the best man in Korea for this place.

And now, brethren, will the church at home rally to Korea in this time of great crisis? We need your money. Some friends in Holston are already rallying to this cause with their money and their prayers. We need immediately $5000 to start the work.

Who will be the next to send a check to Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Southern Methodist Publishing House?

"WHAT LACK I YET?"

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY BRETHREN OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Superannuation has relieved me from the responsibilities of an active ministry. The Statistical Secretary will not expect a report. I am as one dead, yet alive; blind, yet can see; deaf, and yet hear; supposed to be indifferent, yet feel. "What lack I yet?"

The Bishop and Conference, from their standpoint, answer: "Nothing. After many years of faithful service, you have an honorable discharge from the activities of ministerial life." But, as I turn to Christ, and ask, I am comforted with the reply: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." There is no discharge in the war of holiness against sin short of exit from earth's battlefield. The question arises, "What am I to do?" I find myself overwhelmingly burdened about the health and welfare of Zion.

Dear brethren, your success is my success; your failure is my failure. I feel a concern about your reports to Conference, not satisfied when I hear something like this: "Bishop, I have had a good year; all Conference collections are in full; I have had 500 accessions to the church; I have built a $600 parsonage, and a $25,000 church edifice, all now clear of debt; salaries of presiding elder and pastor paid in full; my people delight to welcome financial agents." Now, would not such a report rejoice every listener, and make that pastor feel a pardonable pride? And for any one to interject the query, "What lack I yet?" does seem to be a bit impertinent, if not censorious. Yet, I do wish the report could be extended to something like this: "Bishop, in addition, I will say every new and old member in my charge is living a regenerated, or wholly sanctified life. Church conferences, class and prayer-meetings have an attendance that fills the house. A family altar and Christian Advocate is to be found in every home; the Epworth Leagues and Sunday Schools are training our young people for Christ for present as well as future results. My members are hungry for souls; I need no evangelist; my people want me to do all the preaching in our special meetings, and they cheerfully do all the rest needed on our part to win souls to Christ. Our town is shunned by 'blind tigers,' gamblers, scarlet women and traveling shows; our county fair, held in our town, draws the line on horse races, carnival shows, and such like features. Peace and prosperity abound, yet if you have any charge shunned by others, here am I, send me. I am not in the Conference for a piece of bread; I am consumed with a desire to be like Christ, to be filled with the Holy Spirit, to partake of the divine nature, to be filled with all the fullness of God. I am determined that, by the grace of God helping, 'the blood of no man's soul shall lie at my door.'"

I do believe, if I could hear such reports, I would be compelled to shout: "Glory to God! the crowning day is nigh at hand!"

"What lack I yet?" is a pertinent question for every minister of God to ask, not so much of the Bishop, Conference or world; but like the young man of Christ, "Good Lord, what lack I yet (not my neighbor)." How near to eternal life that young man was—only to miss it; just one thing.

My dear brethren, the Laurel Conference to some of you may be your last. "That which thou doest must be done quickly." Will it not be well to ask: "Is my heart right with God?" Do I hold in it any reservation? Am I living in a doubtful state? Do I feel God calling me into a state of entire consecration, to be wholly sanctified, and I not willing to pay the price? Am I living so supremely Christ's own that it is possible for the Holy Ghost to reveal to my eyes the awful, supernal, the sin consuming Glory of God, qualifying me to comprehend to an enlarged extent the agonizing love of Christ for lost souls? Would not an Isaiah vision of God's holiness cause us to pray for the touch of the coal from God's altar? Can we afford to live a single day short of any needed grace of God, since Matt. v, 6; Eph. iii, 16-20, are heaven's blank checks?

Dear brethren, wont you come to Conference with your souls all aflame for Christ, and do all in your power to start a revival flame there that will not be quenched short of the capture of the world for Christ? Your brother in Christ,

ROBT. B. DOWNER.

Mt. Olive, Miss.

WHO IS WORTHY OF HONOR?

One would rightly conclude from what appears ever and anon that one becomes worthy of honor for bringing up in full certain collections, and therefore should be, and is entered on what is termed the Honor Roll, although that act is a recorded disregard for the following resolution passed by our Conference during its session in Meridian in 1898:

"Resolved, That we ask the Annual Conference to instruct our pastors to prorate all collections taken on the assessments in such manner as not to discriminate against any one cause when such collections are not taken for a specified object." Journal, 1898, page 18.

According to this resolution our Annual Conference esteems no one worthy of honor who discriminates against one collection in favor of another, and, therefore, is it not patent that when one has brought up in full any one or two collections and not all the rest that he has discriminated against the unpaid ones, and hence should not be registered on the Honor Roll till they are fully met? It seems clear enough to me that he should not, if we are to regard that passed resolution of any force whatever.

Before this article is published all the collections on Bolton charge will have been paid in full very likely; but we are not seeking registry on any honor roll whatever, and prefer not to be thus registered, because we believe that among those who are not thus registered there will be a few, if not all, that strove as hard, if not harder, than we to bring up their collections, and yet honestly failed. All things will balance up equitably in the day of judgment.

MRS. T. C. WEIR.

Resolutions passed by Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies, Cold Water, Miss., Sardis District, North Mississippi Annual Conference.

Whereas, the angel of death has, since our last meeting, removed from our mission ranks our dearly beloved sister and friend, Mrs. T. C. Weir, we the members of the Coldwater Auxiliary of Woman's Foreign and Home Mission Societies do hereby adopt the following resolutions:

First—That by her death our church has lost a faithful and consistent member, and the cause of missions a conscientious and efficient worker. That society has been deprived of the beneficent influence of her almost faultless life, her family of a devoted mother and sister, and her husband of a loving wife and intelligent coworker.

Second—That while we bow in humble submission to God, who in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to call her to her reward, yet we miss her sadly from her place in our church, our missionary societies and our homes, where her pure, serene spirit always made her presence welcome.

Third—That we extend our heartfelt sympathies to her bereaved husband and family in their loneliness, and that we bless and praise our heavenly Father that it has been our privilege to know and love a Christian woman.

Fourth—That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of both the Woman's Foreign and Home Mission Societies, and that copies for publication be furnished the Senatobia Democrat and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Not long since we had seven questions relating to press work printed on 100 postal cards, and sent one to each auxiliary in the State. Some of them, unlike "Noah's dove," must have found a resting place for the soles of their feet, since they did not return. Fifty-three went out and twenty-eight came back. "Where are the nine?"

We learned a few things that we wanted to know. Of the twenty-eight, twelve only reported a regular press superintendent. Of the twelve, eleven use a column of space in local papers, while only one corresponding secretary acting as press superintendent does use local space. This seems to me "proof positive" that each auxiliary should elect or appoint a press superintendent who can and will say, "this one thing I do."

Mrs. Reville, Corresponding Secretary of Shreveport District, has held her district meeting. She must have done a great deal of hard work, as she was "too tired" to report anything but a "small attendance."

The annual meeting of the Crowley District was held at Lake Charles, Oct. 31-Nov. 2. Mrs. Crow Girard, District Corresponding Secretary, seems to have the happy faculty of getting work out of others, hence was not too tired to send report and programme. She says: "We had a very encouraging meeting—good attendance and deeply spiritual. Five delegates, including two Conference officers, Mr. Kemp and Mrs. Holt, were present. Four ministers assisted us. All the papers read were good, the Lake Charles editors were kind enough to print them in full. [My, we are doing extra if we get a short notice in the paper once a month in our town. Hurrah for Lake Charles editors!] St. Martinsville, where we expect to organize a new auxiliary, was chosen for the next place of meeting. Expenses overpaid."

[The above, though unsigned, is a little sarcastic. But, as it came duly authenticated, we give it space.—Editor.]

FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

There is something of vastly more importance to the natives of the hill country of this conference than the restatement of the faith just now, and that is the re-establishing of the Holly Springs District.

When it was obliterated it seemed as if there had been a death in the church family, and the grief is as keen to-day as ever. The work has suffered, the presiding elder has suffered, the people have suffered, and what profit there is widely misses matching the loss. The betterment of the situation could only be financially and the finances fall directly when the average members feel a lack of importance.

This is an instance in which facts and fancies coincide for the best interests of all concersed. There have been good meetings on the work, God's blessing has made it to prosper, but the loss of the old landmark makes human efforts more difficult. It is earnestly urged that the Holly Springs district be reassigned. It will comfort old hearts and inspire young ones "in his name."

IRREVERENT PRAYER.

My brother, take heed to that for which thou prayest! There lies the difference between the pious and the impious mind. It is not thy praying that makes thee good nor even thy sincere praying. It is not the sense of want that makes thee good nor even thy highly spiritual desire. It is not thy feeling of dependence that makes thee good nor even thy feeling of dependence on Christ. It is the thing for which thou prayest, the thing for which thou hungerest, the thing for which thou thirstest. Every man prays for his good; the difference is not in the prayer but in the thing. It is possible for thee to ask from thy God three manner of things. Thou mayest ask to take thy neighbor's vineyard; that is rather lack of good in his servant. Or thou mayest ask to be made unselfish; that is holy. It is not the prayer that thy Father prizes; it is the direction of the prayer. Dost thou deem thy child good because he asks thee for a holiday? Nay, though he sought it sorrowing and with tears. But if he asks thee to let him share his joy with a brother or sister, then thou art exceedingly glad, then thou sayest, "Thou art my son; this day have I begotten thee." So with thy Father. He waits till thou grievest for a crown, till thou prayest for his presence, longest for his light, prayest for his kingdom, hungerest for his home, faintest for his footstool, earnest for his company, tarriest for his tread, seekest for the sign of his coming. Then will be the Father's highest joy.—Rev. John Watson, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

SELF-CONTROL.

No man is at his best when he has lost control of himself, and the time of all times when a man needs to be at his best is when he is being attacked. Yet how many men deceive themselves into thinking that they actually gain in force and effectiveness by letting go of themselves—"getting mad" and showing it—under provocation! To do so is both to weaken oneself and to uncover that weakness to others. The man who can continue to smile, inside and out, no matter what the provocation to do otherwise, has a weapon that makes him hopelessly invincible to his enemies. The man who "gets mad" hands over his best weapon to the opposition.—Mazzini.

IS INFANT BAPTISM AN "EVIL?"

This question is asked, not because we have the slightest doubt that it should be answered in the negative, but because those who assume that it should be answered in the affirmative are constantly parading their sectarian view, while those who believe in and practice infant baptism, and believe that the ordinance of Christian baptism is not restricted to mode, are generally silent on the subject. As a consequence, the impression prevails, even among some of our own people, that, after all, we are in error inasmuch as we do not attempt to meet the arguments (if, indeed, they be arguments) on the other side. If our principles are worth practicing and worthy the belief of the people called Methodists, let us defend them. If we cannot then let us confess same, cease to practice it and surrender the cause.

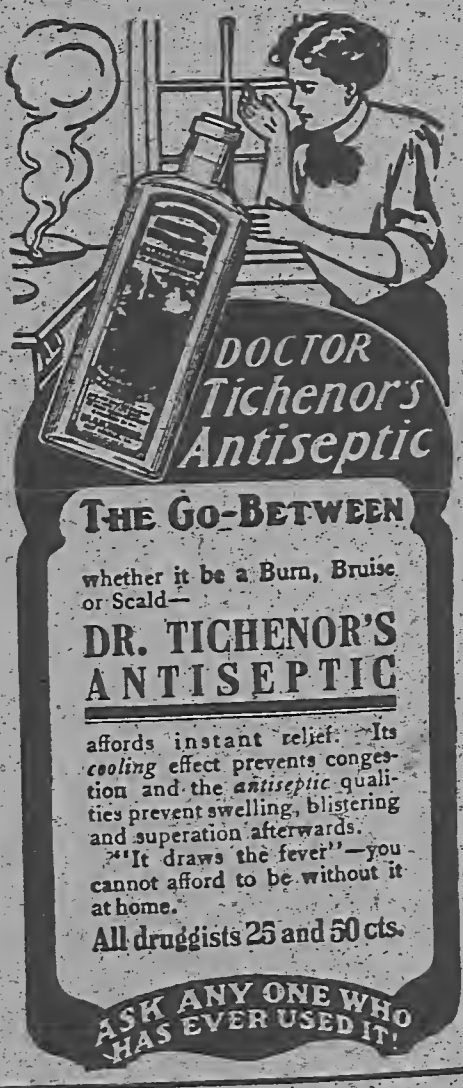
Methodists have never waged a warfare against other denominations. We do not hope to flourish along these lines. We feel called of God to preach Christ and him crucified, rather than to stir up sectional strife and create "family disturbance"—we are all one family in Christ if we are saved. Ours is not a war of conquest against other churches, but against sin and Satan. We do not expect to thrive and prosper in the downfall of other communions by a systematic process of proselyting; neither are we ready to "call down fire upon others because they do not follow us."

We claim the right to read the Bible and understand and teach its truths as we judge best for the salvation of sinners. So far we are willing for the tree to be known by its fruits. We allow others this same privilege, but are not allowed this privilege by others. If all Christian denominations would entertain a respectful recognition of the right of others to explain the Scriptures in the light and truth of intelligence as they fell, directed of God, it would consummate the happy end of all sectarian strife! So mote it be! We had hoped that the great gathering of the representative body of all the denominations in New York one year ago would prove to be an ecclesiastical "Peace Conference." But we still hear of "wars and rumors of wars," especially along the water courses—naval engagements. The Pedobaptist cause is still besieged. We are continually and publicly characterized as teaching and perpetrating "the most damnable heresy in that black catalogue that has befouled Christianity." (See "Strictures on Dr. Howell's Evils of Infant Baptism," in "Summer's On Baptism, page 175.) This thing is done in the hearing of our young people, who attend their public gatherings. They seem to think "the Lord has revealed himself unto them as he hath not unto the world" (viz. other denominations). They believe we will be saved, yet so as by fire. I have heard them make this very statement. These ultra positions that are taken remind us of the lecture we once read on "Ignorance, Prejudice, Bigotry."

The author took the position that ignorance is the prolific mother of prejudice and the grandmother of bigotry. How true this is in religious matters!

In the great commission and other places where baptism is enjoined, we do not believe it is limited to mode. We cannot see how it can be in keeping with the plain and simple teaching of our Lord that he should have instituted and demanded something that is not only very inconvenient, but under some circumstances absolutely impossible. This is certainly true of immersion. Hence, we believe baptism, in its nature, is a generic term. Not as to the moral condition of the subject, but as to the manner of application, the age of the subject, and the amount of water used. It is to be regarded as Christian baptism, since there is no precept or command specifying these things. If it is administered by, or with water in the name of the Trinity. Therefore, we are never the aggressive party in what might seem to be a discussion. We are simply acting on the defense.

Not long since the writer saw in a secular paper the programme of the Bogue Chitto Baptist Association (Pike County, Miss.). Among other subjects discussed was "The Origin, Progress, and Evils of Infant Baptism." This subject was given to one J. R. Sample. I take it that he is conversant with church history. Having believed in and taught this for years we ought to know as much about the "origin and progress" as one who opposes it. We would like, however, to know what was said about the "evils" of infant baptism. It is almost proverbial that if you want to learn all about anything just ask those who know the least about it. They are always ready to tell you what they (do not) know about it. If you want to learn how to raise children, just ask some old maid or some old bachelor! To whom shall we go to get the true information on this subject? Shall we go to those who have always opposed it, or to those who have believed in and practiced it? I think the intelligent world would go to the ninety-five percent of Christendom who believe in it rather than to the five percent who oppose it. In discussing this subject they should have called in some of their Pedobaptist friends to assist them in searching for the "origin." Indeed it is to be hoped that they found it. If they did they were convinced that it is not an evil! Just two things are necessary to get "evil" out of infant baptism: (1) wilful stupidity, and (2) a very fertile imagination.



The truth is that they have taken a position they cannot prove. It is a bare assumption—a statement that cannot be established by one word of Scripture or common-sense. To use the language of one able Pedobaptist writer, "It is a heterogeneous mass of palpable error and assumption." The history of the early church does not prove that it is an evil; neither does the Bible. That it was the general (not to say universal) practice of the early church all will acknowledge who have any sort of regard for real facts. To say that the fathers [illegible] it as an evil is only to confess ignorance or dishonesty. Tertullian, indeed, advised the delay of baptism to infants, not because he regarded it as an evil, we challenge anybody to show that he did) but because he thought salvation was secured by after baptism, and that sins committed after baptism could not be pardoned. Hence, he advised delay of baptism to both infants and adults until just before death. He is only one of the early writers who, for any reason, opposed infant baptism. Further on we shall see more of what was the practice of the early church as to infants.

One reason why Pedobaptists do not make this a leading pulpit topic is because they know the truth will stand! When you see one continually trying to air his theory and parade his dogma before the public, be it known, it is because he thinks it is in danger of defeat. A Bible truth cannot fail, according to the words of Christ himself. This is why we are willing to let our doctrines stand on their merits. If our tenets cannot survive without forever being peddled out on the public highways we want them to die.

We do not have to prove the propriety of infant baptism. It is something already authenticated and fully established. The "evils" of this are not established and never will be. The burden of proof, therefore, is with the opposers to show that the Bible and early church condemn it as an evil. Their only argument is that Christ did not, in so many words, command the baptism of infants. To which we reply: he did not command that they should wait until they became adults before they could be baptised.

THE WINNING OF BRIDGET MALONEY.

"Thank you, Bridget," said Mrs. Williams, as the new girl slammed the tray on the table before her.

A faint glimmer of surprise came into the sullen face.

"Huh?" she interrogated.

"I said, 'Thank you;' it was kind of you to climb those long stairs," responded Mrs. Williams, pleasantly.

"It's a new broom that sweeps clean, but it won't last," muttered Bridget, in her own domain.

But when day after day passed, and she never failed to receive the same perfect politeness from her employer, her wonder increased.

Bridget was used to commands, but not to requests. She was accustomed to a curt, supercilious, "That will do," but not to a kindly, "Thank you, Bridget," and she insensibly softened at the change.

Mrs. Williams treated her servants like human beings, not like machines. And while she ever maintained that nice reserve which forbade familiarity, yet she scrupulously respected the rights of others.

"Sure, one would be a haythen to be sassy to Mrs. Williams," said Bridget, after a month's stay in her new home. "She has a way of making ye feel so polite and pleased with yerself that yez want to please her, and I'll stay with her as long as me name is Bridget Maloney."—E. M. C., in Mothers' Magazine.

BOBBIE'S REASON.

When Bobbie brought his report card to papa there was a little black cross in the section marked "deportment." Bobbie knew papa's eyes would find that the first thing, and he twisted his small handkerchief into hard knots, and tried to hide part of his chubby head behind the chair in which his father sat.

"What does this mean, Bobbie?" asked his father.

"I was late at school," said Bobbie, who knew that his mother had seen him leave the house in good season each day. "The teacher rang the bell when I was just in the yard, but—I couldn't run." Bobbie was near to tears, but he was winking manfully.

"Well, that is rather bad," said papa gravely. "I don't want my son to grow up into a man who is always behindhand. Now I am going to be very severe. I shall not tell you tonight what the punishment will be, but unless you can show me a good reason why you were late—"

"I can show it," cried Bobbie. "I can show it, you just wait." He ran out of the room, and soon came running back, holding in his hands the smallest imte of a kitten. It was poor and scraggly and forsaken in appearance. Its large, frightened eyes fixed themselves on Bobby's papa as if pleading for him. "I can show the reason," urged Bobbie. "This little cat was bound to follow me, and I tried to get away, and I kept putting him over tht fence and running very, very hard; but he just jumped over and stuck his claws in my pants until I had to leave him with the lady in the candy shop until school was done, and then I brunged him home. That was the reason," Bobbie finished, all out of breath.

Papa put on his glasses and looked at the kitten. Something in its forlorn, frightened face touched him. "Well, I guess we shall have to forgive you this time," he said. "You had better feed him on cream for a while."

"Then I needn't have that punishment that one that was too awful to think up," asked Bobbie.

"No, that is all forgiven," said papa.—W. L. S., in Youth's Companion.

HOW THE TREES TALKED.

Phyllis sat on the terrace step, with her picture book on her knee, looking out into the garden and feeling very little under the big trees. She did not know she felt little, of course, but she knew that everything seemed very queer. You see, it was the first time she had been in the country since she had been old enough to realize it, and the trees that grew out of the pavement and in the park in New York weren't half so strange, she thought.

"Chees," whispered Phyllis softly to herself, directly, for this was how she said "trees."

She looked up shyly, feeling exactly as she felt when somebody said "Boo!" Overhead green leaves were waving with musical murmurs. A long tree branch almost touched her head; the leaves were green on one side, silver on the other. "Ah," said Phyllis. Then she kept very silent for a moment, and mamma, who was under another tree in a hammock, reading a book, almost forgot her.

A great big wonder of nature began to stir in Phyllis; but it was all centered on the boughs doing such strange things overhead.

She thought, maybe, she would like to be in bed; safe, safe, with the sheet up to her chin. Then she thought of big brave papa in New York; then she thought of mamma—mamma was right close by in the hammock. She looked at the hammock. Mamma had two hands—and one of them, a soft dear hand, hung down, doing nothing.

"No," thought Phyllis, for mamma hated being "sturbed."

But—oh, oh—there it was again; a soft, soft, soft whispering, like a strange, sweet voice. Mamma looked up, and Phyllis caught her eye. The spell of terror found vent.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, holding out pleading arms, her little face streaming with tears, "come, come, the chees is talking—saying fings!"

For this was how Phyllis explained the gentle rustling of the leaves above her head. Trees, which were supposed to be dumb, were telling the little child things that she could not understand.

And then, of course, mamma soothed her little girl, as mammas always do, and told her something about the strange, sweet voices of Nature. And though this happened only last summer, little Phyllis has grown so used to these voices that she can now tell you of the wonderful things the trees say when the breeze blows through their leafy boughs. Sometimes she says, quaintly:

"Now they are telling God they are happy."—Exchange.

SOME USEFUL DOGS OF EUROPE.

In America dogs are valued chiefly as pets and house guardians, but in Europe they not only fill these positions, but others of much greater importance. In England and Scotland the beautiful Scotch collies are used as shepherd dogs, and are taught to herd and guard the sheep as carefully as their masters.

High up among the snow-clad mountains of Switzerland in a great stone house called by the name of Saint Bernard live the kind monks whose mission it is to aid travelers who are snowbound or who have missed their way, and these monks keep a number of Saint Bernard dogs, which they have trained to help them in their work. In the larger Alps most terrific snowstorms come on without any warning whatever, and when one of these storms is raging the big dogs are turned loose to scent out benighted travelers and direct them to the shelter of the monastery or to drag them there if they are too exhausted to walk. Fine fellows are these noble Saint Bernards, and many wonderful rescues have they to their credit.

Then there are the milk dogs of Belgium—that is to say, the dogs that draw the little milk wagons about the city in the morning, when the milkman or milkwoman—for it is as often one as the other—is making rounds. If any of our boys or girls should have the good fortune to visit Brussels or Bruges or any other Belgian city some day they will see for themselves a novel and interesting sight.

Of course we must not forget to mention the clever police dogs of Paris. Part of a police dog's duty is to protect his master, the police man—who is called a gendarme in France—when attacked by the ruffianly thieves who hide under the dark arches of the numerous bridges; and another part of it is to help rescue the people who fall or jump into the Seine, which, as you know, is the big river that runs through Paris—and are in danger of being drowned. The dogs are Newfoundlands, and every one of them loves the water, and thinks it great fun to jump in and bring some one to shore. To train the dog a dummy figure is used, and this is thrown off the quay into the water. Then, while the trainers are busy with lifelines and lifebuoys, the dog plunges in, seizes the dummy with his strong teeth, and swims ashore—if he can. If he cannot, he just holds on until his master can help him out. It takes about four months to train a dog properly, but when he is trained he knows just how to seize a drowning person without hurting him, and how to hold his head above water until he gets him ashore.—Exchange.

THANKSGIVING.

We greet the return of another harvest season. We have abundant cause for gratitude. Our fields have yielded their increase, and plenty abounds on every hand. Only in few sections have the staple crops been cut short. What is lacking in these has been made good by the growth of other products which meet nature's wants, and keep the people above suffering. The cotton crop is fully equal to that of last year. The wheat crop was larger and the corn crop far beyond anything ever realized in the land. Of all other blessings there is no shortage. We are therefore prepared to hear that the volume of trade, including the export, the import, and the domestic transactions, is larger than ever, and all commodities bringing remunerative prices. All commercial enterprises are in a flourishing and encouraging condition.

All our people share in the prosperity—the farmers and artisans and laborers of all classes, as well as tradesmen, and the great transportation companies which handle the products of the soil and manufacturing institutions. If there is any want or suffering at all, it is not because the Lord has withheld the early or the later rain, or for lack of opportunity and needed facilities for securing needed comforts, but to unavoidable conditions on the part of some, and criminal indolence and shiftlessness on the part of others. But nobody will starve. Christian philanthropy abounds, and the wants of the poor will be supplied.

With prosperity we have peace. The country is not disturbed with internal discussions of any kind, nor by the threats of any foreign foe. The little ripples, local in their scope, occasioned by political campaigns, passed away with the day of election. The race troubles, also local, resulting in more or less rioting, while they have produced great anxiety, have not broken the general peace of the land. What is in store for the future the good Lord only knows. We trust in him and pray that peace may continue to abound.

Peace and prosperity have been no less marked in the church than in material and civil matters. Great revivals have blessed the labors of God's servants. Hundreds and thousands have been added to the Lord, and his Kingdom greatly strengthened among men. Millions rejoice in the hope of heaven. In return for these spiritual blessings the people are casting their gifts into the Lord's treasury, and the stream of philanthrophy is flowing through every available channel to bless the world. God's people were never so liberal in sustaining the ministry, and carrying on all the enterprises of the church. And the Word of God is going everywhere.

All these blessings call for the gratitude of the heart, not merely in silent breathings of thankfulness, but in words and deeds that will glorify God and bless our fellowmen. Neither as individuals nor as a people can we afford to be ungrateful. With one consent should we unite in public thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father, who has been so wonderfully good to us all. Our President, with the harvest season in mind, and with proper recognition of the goodness of God in providence and grace, has invited us to Thursday, the 29th of November, to lay aside our worldly business and to assemble in our respective places of worship and return thanks to God for his goodness. This let us all do in the name of his blessed Son.

WHAT NEXT?

The Central Christian Advocate, an official paper of the Methodist Episcopal Church, published in Kansas City, in its issue of October 24 contained two articles to which our attention has been specially called. One of the articles, "What Next in Methodism in America?" is "by a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church South." The other, "What Next Between the Two Methodisms?" is "by a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

We have neither the time nor space, if we had the inclination, to devote to a full review of the articles in question. The Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, advises frankly and without apology against union, and asks Dr. Spencer and his brethren to "dismiss all thought of organic union and pray, plan and work for a Federal Council for all branches of Episcopal Methodism in America." He expresses the belief that, in view of the "wide divergence of practice which obtains in our two great legislative bodies, a United Methodism, if actually attempted, would hardly survive one session of a General Conference." He suggests four grand divisions of the territory, each with its own General Conference, viz: One east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio; another south of the Ohio to the Republic of Mexico; another yet embracing all west of the Mississippi not included in the other two; and a fourth embracing all the negro Methodists. Over all these he suggests a Federal Council, with what authority, he does not say. Then he says: "Let the Bishops of American Methodism have their common Federal Council, annually if need be, for the wise administration and harmonious extension of American Methodism; nay, lest that savor too much of the idea of a national church, for the extension of the kingdom of Christ in all the world."

Whether Southern Methodists are prepared to accept and act on the suggestions of their Bishop remains to be seen. It is certain that our brethren of the North will not. It calls for the elimination of the negro from the jurisdiction of either Methodism. To this Dr. Spencer has emphatically said his church will not consent.

The Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church devotes about half of his lengthy article to history, and a greater part of the remainder to the negro problem, which he tells us "instead of dating from the emancipation of the slaves, dates back to the formation of the National Constitutions." It is, he says, "an inheritance of the nation." The North and South are both "responsible" for the present state of things, and therefore both are bound to join in settling the problem.

This Bishop does not urge organic union. He does not urge federation. Nor does he propose to turn the negro loose, and let him manage himself. But he would have the Southern Methodists co-operate with his church in educating the negro, as if co-operation in such work is all that is needed to bring about the best of feelings between the two churches.

The two Methodisms have a common catechism, a common order of worship, are united in their publishing interests in China, have common interest in a school in Oklahoma, and why not have common interest in educating the negro? Ever since the war between the States the Methodists North have shown a lively interest in negro education, and have accomplished much. Even so. And we beg leave to say that there has never been a time since Southern Methodists had access to the negroes in the South that they did not feel a lively interest in their welfare. They acted wisely after the war in setting their colored members off to themselves, giving them churches, and otherwise helping them, but claiming over them no jurisdiction whatever. They have never withdrawn from them their help or their sympathy. Not for a moment have they, as a church, had any negro problem to deal with.

Southern Methodists will continue to help the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, but under existing circumstances they will not join hands with the Northern Methodists in negro education.

A MILD PROTEST.

It is suggested that we sometimes "protest too much." Possibly so. Or it may be we protest against the wrong things. But we shall venture another protest—not against something way off on the other side of the continent, but against something in our midst. We refer to the desecration of the holy Sabbath in the city of New Orleans. It is not enough that many citizens, including merchants and professional men, as well as common laborers on the streets, look after their business on the Lord's day. It is not enough that of the liquor saloons—numbering one to every twenty-six men in the city—many open and sell liquor on Sunday contrary to the law. It is not enough that the theaters run wide open, and all kinds of parades are allowed, and every form of amusement is indulged on the Sabbath. Our authorities must go a step further and set a precedent in Sunday desecration by ordering the opening of civil offices on Sunday for the transaction of the business of the State, viz; for the payment of poll taxes. As a citizen believing it to be wrong to take the Lord's day for secular business, we enter our protest against this form of Sabbath desecration. In this age, when men are allowed to work only eight hours a day, there is plenty of time for them to "render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." They should not be encouraged and expected to rob God.

CONCERNING THE TIME LIMIT.

Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church are not yet unanimously in favor of an unlimited pastorate. The following paragraph which we take from Zion's Herald shows that there is dissatisfaction and a determination to make further efforts to go back to the old way of working. It gives us also some new arguments in favor of a time limit. Southern Methodists desirous of following the lead of our Northern brethren would do well to weigh carefully the reasons set forth in the paragraph:

"Resolutions in favor of restoring the time limit were passed by the Detroit Conference at its session last month. The reasons urged, as set forth in the preamble (which, by the way, was not included in the Conference action), were as follows: (1) A sense of discouragement on the part of the younger ministers because chances for advancement are reduced; (2) a sense of apprehension on the part of older ministers lest premature superannuation should be forced upon them; (3) the prolongation of some pastorates beyond the limit of effectiveness, according to the judgment of those in position to know; (4) an augmented temptation to preachers to tone down to the popular taste the public deliverances of the pulpit instead of fearlessly delivering the inspired message; (5) the multiplication of conditions favorable to dissension in the local church concerning the changing or retaining a man as pastor; (6) a very general sense of dissatisfaction and limitation affecting both preachers and churches towards the close of a Conference year."

PERSONALS.

Rev. P. D. Hardin, whose transfer to New Mexico we noted last week, informs us that the transfer has been canceled. Read his notice in another column.

Rev. J. E. Williams, of Tylertown, Miss., requests us to say that he is "closing out well—will have all the collections in full, besides a good report along other lines."

Rev. W. D. Wendell, who some years ago was a member of the North Mississippi Conference, comes back to his old home from West Texas. Brother Wendell has not been forgotten.

Rev. W. H. Huntley, closing a four years' term on Vicksburg District, has favored us with an interesting report, which will appear in our next issue. It will be read with profit by many friends.

In the appointments of the West Texas Conference we see the name of N. B. Harmon. He is appointed to Prospect Hill, San Antonio. Is this our brother N. B. Harmon of the Mississippi Conference? We have seen no notice of his transfer.

Rev. A. S. Lutz is back from California and will resume his place in the Louisiana Conference. The brethren, with one consent, will give him a hearty welcome to his old home. Brother Lutz carried to completion the Berkeley Church, which was a great work.

Bishop Hendrix will be with the brethren in Columbus on Nov. 25, and dedicate the Second Church, which has been freed of all debt. The pastor, Rev. R. A. Clark, has received seventy-five persons into the church this year, and in other ways had a year of success.

Rev. D. C. Langford, writing from Benton, Miss., says: "I am closing up my year's work nicely. I think I will make a full report at Conference. I have held two fine revivals, and took twenty-four persons into membership. I served this work once before a full term."

Dr. Charles G. Andrews, resident physician at Pedro Miguel, Canal Zone, Panama, was recently married to Miss Mary E. Cook, of Anconcita, Canal Zone. Dr. Andrews is a son of the late Dr. C. G. Andrews of the Mississippi Conference. He has been a resident of the Isthmus of Panama for the past two years.

After an ideal voyage across the Pacific, Rev. Jno. V. Randolph, chaplain, landed with his regiment at San Francisco on the 12 inst. He is in fine health. He orders his ADVOCATE changed from the Philippines to Fort Harrison, Montana. He expresses regret that he will not be able to meet the brethren at Conference.

Rev. J. B. King, under date of Nov. 15, says: "As preacher-in-charge of Auburn Circuit I am glad to say that we have had a very pleasant year—good revivals at all the churches, several bright conversions and accessions—all collections as ordered by the Annual Conference will be in full. To God be all the praise."

The Grenada Charge is in fine condition under the care of Rev. B. P. Jaco. Congregations fill the house, and new members are received almost every Sunday. His report to Conference will show an accession of one hundred and forty or more this year. Salary and all collections will be overpaid. Brother Jaco is making a fine record.

For nearly a week past great concern has been felt throughout the Church on account of the illness of Bishop Tigert at Tulsa, Indian Territory. A small piece of chicken bone lodged in his throat which produced inflammation, and caused serious distress. His condition was critical for a while, and up to Sunday last he was not entirely out of danger.

A note from Dr. T. B. Holloman, of Vicksburg, informs us of the death of his only brother, Frank P. Holloman, of Phoenix, Miss. He passed away on the 14 inst. He left his wife and four small children. Dr. Holloman says: "only two of the original nine remain, and we are feeling a sense of loneliness stealing over us. May there be a happy reunion in our Father's house!

A press dispatch of recent date announces the sudden death of Mrs. Granbery, wife of Bishop J. C. Granbery. Death came without any warning. She was a woman of lovely character, and was an earnest worker for the Lord and his Church. Besides the Bishop, she leaves two sons and one daughter to mourn her departure. They have the prayers and sympathy of friends throughout the Church.

Rev. M. L. Burton, the "beloved" of the Seashore District, in a kind note to the editor, says: "The brethren have borne patiently with the new elder this year. We have revivals in nearly all the charges, and the net gain in membership will be large. I find nearly 500 ADVOCATES taken in the district, an increase this year of about 200. The brethren are all cheerful, and we hope to be able to give a good account of ourselves at Conference."

The Religious Press Advertising Syndicate, with which we do a large advertising business, has kindly sent us a word of encouragement which we appreciate. The manager says: "Permit us to congratulate Dr. Boswell and Mr. Chalmers upon the complimentary report made by the Publishing Committee. The ADVOCATE is making a fine record, and the paper is gotten out in a pretty shape, and is an excellent Church paper. It thoroughly deserves success."

The Texas Advocate, in its issue of November, speaks thus of Rev. R. A. Burroughs, who went to Texas from North Mississippi five years ago: "Rev. R. A. Burroughs, of the Calvert District, is winding up his time limit in fine shape. He came to that Conference not a great while ago from beyond the Mississippi, but he forged to the front immediately. The brethren took him on short acquaintance, and he has not disappointed them. He has done a faithful term of service, and will give a good account of his closing year at Tyler."

Secretary Metcalf, who went to San Francisco, under the direction of President Roosevelt, to settle the trouble with the Japanese growing out of the exclusion of their children from the public schools for whites, failed in his mission. The School Board stood by their exclusion act, claiming that it was in accordance with the law of the State. The matter will have to be settled in the courts. Evidently there is a conflict between the State law and the treaty entered into between Japan and the United States.

FROM BELLEFONTAINE.

I have seen nothing in the Advocate in quite a time from this place, which is in the North Mississippi Conference, Tom Nolen charge, with Rev. Jno. G. Johnston pastor, hence I thought it not amiss to send you a few dots.

We had Bro. G. W. Bachman with us the last of October; he gave us three interesting and instructive sermons, and sold many good books to our people. Our Fourth Quarterly Conference met here on Thursday, the 8th inst.

Bro. Dorsey preached for us three times. Large and attentive audiences greeted him at each service. Bro. Dorsey is much loved by the people here of all denominations. The brother seemed to be at his best, his preaching was powerful and direct, and he told of "the unsearchable riches of the gospel" with an earnestness and enthusiasm that appealed strongly to all. There is no one that heard his sermon of Thursday whose heart was not touched and tendered, and it will bear fruit many days hence. At the conclusion of the evening service ten came forward and united with the church.

All the seven churches made a very satisfactory report. J. W. Vance was granted license to exhort and E. M. Shaw recommended to District Conference for license to preach. Our pastor, Bro. Johnson, with the assistance of Bros. Dorsey, Bowen, O'Bryant, Marvin, Johnson and Mitchell, has done a fine year's work. One hundred and twenty persons have been added to the church in this charge this Conference year. I will give you a bit of history just here that will show what Methodism is accomplishing in this section. Fourteen years ago, when I came to this town, I found one Methodist, and no church nearer than three miles. Now we have a nice little church worth $600, with only $85.00 indebtedness, and with seventy members. That is not all; we have a live, wide-awake Sunday School and a good prayer meeting.

I think I see two great needs that our church should pay great attention to; they are, the development of rural Methodism and the placing of good, sound and wholesome literature in the hands of country Methodists. I risk nothing in saying that up to five years ago both these great factors had been neglected at this place. Good literature must be brought to these people here, they must be encouraged and persuaded to buy.

I am glad to say that there are many signs of improvement along all lines; Methodism is now planted here firmly and to stay, the lamp of truth is lighted and is blazing forth brilliantly, and we purpose with the aid of God, personal work, the prayer meeting, the Sunday School and the preached Word to sow seeds that will bring forth an abundant harvest.

Respectfully,

E. F. ARNOLD.

REV. W. H. HUNTLEY.

Resolution of the Fourth Quarterly Conference, Hermanville Charge, Vicksburg District, Mississippi Annual Conference.

Being the last year of the term of Rev. W. H. Huntley, as presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, and appreciating the honor, and cherishing grateful feelings for his valued services, we suppress all murmurings and bid him adieu with sorrowful hearts, commending him most highly to the District that will surely be most fortunate in securing this most worthy and faithful minister. He has endeared himself more and more to us, he has been kind and considerate, refined and gracious, bravely and faithfully discharging his duties. He has most earnestly from time to time urged upon us the great need of reaching to a higher plane of living, diligently and anxiously striving to rouse the conscience and convincing us of the glorious opportunity and ability of achieving wonderful things lying within our grasp. We know that his labors are not in vain, and future developments hoped for, both spiritually and otherwise, will be largely due to his painstaking and untiring efforts. He is fully alive to all the interests of the church, neglecting none, including the Foreign and Home Mission Societies, which he valued most highly. Thank you and God bless you, Bro. Huntley.

WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: — My last Quarterly Conference for Walnut Grove Circuit was held at Zion on Nov. 12, 1906. Brother Morse was present, and gave us a splendid sermon. Every church was represented, and churches made splendid reports, the largest made since we have been on the circuit. All the assessments were reported in full by the pastor. So I shall have the pleasure again at Conference of reporting everything in full from Walnut Grove Circuit.

I am packing, getting ready to move somewhere, this being my fourth year. During these four years we have built three church-houses, to-wit, Wiley Plains, Zion and Freeny. The membership of the circuit has been doubled, some 450 members added to the church; six men have been licensed to preach, one to exhort. We will have good things from these men some day. I hope the Conference can give them work now as supplies. Their names are Brothers Ferguson, Ware, Kelley, Watkins, Moore and Ashman. Brother Ware has been serving the Scott Circuit this year. This makes eight years I have spent in Leake County—four at Carthage and four at Walnut Grove, twelve miles apart. During these eight years between 800 and 1000 members have been received into the church; seven men licensed to preach; two to exhort, but lost one exhorter, who went with the come-outers. Bro. George Shearer, the one licensed at Carthage, is now in Texas, and I understand he is doing good work in one of the Texas Conferences.

Eight years ago we had two circuits in Leake County, and part of Neshoba, Carthage and Walnut Grove. Now we have four, Carthage, Walnut Grove, Edenburg and Scotland. The circuit I have been traveling these four years is now divided, and the preachers that get these circuits will be cared for well.

Walnut Grove is no longer a drag, but is one of the best circuits in the Conference. I have never been more comfortable nor better cared for than during these years. I have never served a more [illegible]

Doctor, I have done my best here and am leaving with a good conscience. The people in the bounds of this circuit have been good to me and my family. I leave them reluctantly. I pray God's blessings on them, and assure the coming preacher a warm reception.

Suitable resolutions were read before the Quarterly Conference in reference to our presiding elder, who moves also. Yours, etc.,

M. E. WHITE.

FROM THE COLPORTER'S DESK.

Brethren, will you please notify me in due time of any special books wanted at either of the Conferences at Corinth or Laurel?

By so doing expense of transportation will be saved to them, specially on any of our song books in lots and on quarterly conference records, church registers, etc.

A good meeting of eleven days duration has just closed in Winona. The pastor, Brother Bowen, did the preaching and Brother Smoot led in the singing. Results to date: a goodly number of conversions, six accessions to the church by profession, and spiritual refreshing to all who participated in the services. Prominence and much time were given to the service of song in the meeting, which, under the skillful leadership of Prof. Smoot, proved to be both entertaining and spiritually edifying; and we trust that the effect may be manifest in the continued improvement of congregational singing in all the church services.

With our Methodist Hymnal and the devout leadership of a religious precentor, organist and choir, we may have congregational singing equal to any in the world. Let us wake up, think and provide for it. G. W. BACHMAN.

THROW AWAY MEDICINES, PILLS AND POWDERS AND GET A BOTTLE OF DRAKE'S PALMETTO WINE.

It is made from the luscious berries of the Saw-Palmetto tree. The Florida Indians used to exrtact from them what they called "Wine Medicine," and it did wonders for them. This wonderful remedy is not in any sense of the word a medicine, but a pure strengthening, restoring tonic from Nature's own storehouse, and it acts in Nature's own effective and harmless way. It purifies and enriches the blood, and imparts new life and vigor to every member and organ of the body. It rebuilds and renews the wasted tissues, and puts every part of the system in perfect condition to do its natural work, and thus ward off disease.

Constipation, Indigestion and all Stomach troubles, Kidney and Bladder troubles, torpid and sluggish Liver, Catarrh and Catarrhal diseases, all nervous disorders and affections, nervous weakness in men and women, all female weaknesses and diseases, and, in fact, all weakened and run-down conditions of the human system, are quickly relieved and permanently cured in a natural, safe and positive way by Drake's Palmetto Wine.

You can get a usual dollar size bottle of any druggist for 75c, or, if you wish to try it before buying, write The Drake Company, 302 Drake Bldg., Wheeling, W. Va., for a test bottle, which will be sent free and post paid.

A WORD FROM PORT GIBSON.

Mr. Editor:

Allow me to say to your readers that the faculty and students of the Port Gibson Female College are close at their tasks trying to achieve a noble session's work. It is a source of gratification to the friends of the institution that the attendance in the boarding department is the largest it has had since the civil war. We would have the pastor of this year, Rev. W. H. Lewis, returned to us, and if we could we would have as a neighbor again, Rev. W. H. Huntley, presiding elder of this, the Vicksburg District. Both of these brethren have helped us in many ways.

LESSON FOR DEC. 2.

CHRIST BEFORE PILATE.

Luke xxiii:13-24.

Golden text: "Then said Pilate I find no fault in this man." Luke xxiii:4.

In our last study of the last days of our Lord, we remember that he was first taken before Annas, not that he had any official power, but that he was such a shrewd intriguer, he had directed all the proceedings against the Lord and that he was actually the power behind Caiaphas. The assemblage before whom the Lord was first taken was not a full meeting of the Sanhedrin, and this was the most illegal part of the trial, if trial it desired to be called; they had regular forms of law in regard even to assembling themselves together. However, the decision of this part of the court was final for when morning came and the whole council came together, they were preparing to take Jesus to Pilate that they might have the finding of their court confirmed by the Roman Procurator. About an hour passed in preparation, and in this hour began the cruel mocking and base indignity that ended when the cross was laid on his shoulders, and the journey began to Calvary. "So as 'He was numbered with the transgressors' they brought him to Pilate, the whole multitude following.

It was early in the morning when Pilate was aroused and called out to dispense justice (?)—perhaps earlier than 7. He may not have been affably disposed when he asked the question: "What accusation bring ye against this man?" They were surprised at his question, because they had forgotten that their deliberations had been in secret. They were impelled by one idea, that was to hurry Jesus to his death. So they ill-naturedly replied: "If he were not malefactor, we would not have brought him to thee."

Then said Pilate: "Take ye him and judge him according to your law." No, it was not lawful for them to put any man to death, and this man was worthy of death. Pilot was, indeed, of a weak and vacilating character, easily drawn from this to that view of any question. His own ease and undisturbed rest was of much more importance to him than any question. He had also been informed of the case in hand, even to reflecting that the envy of the Jews was at the bottom of the whole matter. Any way, he listened to their numerous accusations, and, after calling Jesus, asked: "Art thou the king of the Jews?"

Jesus answered in effect: Is this question original with you, or did others tell you to ask it? Then Pilate's hatred of everything Jewish was shown in his retort. "Am I a Jew? Your own people have brought you before me accusing you. What have you done?" Then Jesus said: "My kingdom is not of this world, if it was I would not be before you now." "Thou art a king then!" said Pilate. Jesus replied: "I am, and to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness of the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." If Pilate had waited for the answer to his next question as Jesus would have given answer, perhaps there would have been a change in history and in the final destiny of all concerned; but turning to go, even on his way out he asked, "What is truth?" We know what truth is, and the world has learned it through the offering up of him who is the Way, the Truth and the Life.

Pilate went out to the people saying: "I find no fault in this man." Then the mob grew fierce in denunciation, saying that Jesus had not only stirred up the people in Jerusalem, but throughout all Jewry, beginning at Galilee to this place. Ah, Galilee! Here was the opportunity for Pilate to shift from his shoulders a matter that superstition was placing before him in the light of responsibility. Herod had jurisdiction over Galilee, and Herod was then in Jerusalem; he would send him to Herod, and to Herod Jesus was brought. It was a short interview between Herod and the Lord, for as soon as he saw that Jesus would do no miracle for his diversion, Herod sent him back to Pilate, but not before he, with his soldiers, had "set him at naught, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe." Both Pilate and Herod seemed to see a humorous side—witness the gorgeous robe—to this heathenish and cruel persecution of him who "had done no violence" and "who was holy, undefiled and separate from sinners," as there was and there will ever be a common sympathy among the enemies of our blessed Lord: Pilate and Herod, who were before at enmity, were made friends that day.

Then Jesus was taken back to Pilate, who, after calling the chief priests and the rulers and all the people together, said to them: "You have brought this man to me accusing him of many things contrary to law. I have examined him and find no fault in him at all; neither does Herod see where he is guilty, therefore I will chastise him and release him." Then the mob, increased in numbers, gathering to witness the release of one prisoner, which was the custom on feast-days, became furious, crying out, "Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas," who had been imprisoned for sedition and murder. Pilate was, or seemed to be, anxious to release Jesus, tried to speak again to the people, but his voice was drowned by their cries of "crucify him, crucify him." About this time a message came to Pilate from his wife, saying: "Have thou nothing to do with that just man, for I have suffered many things this day in a dream, because of him." So Pilate said to those assembled before him: "Take ye him and crucify him, for I find no fault in him." Then came the answer: "We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God."

At this Pilate was more afraid; and bringing a basin of water, he used a symbolic act, saying: "I am innocent of the blood of this just person, see ye to it." Then came a cry from lost Israel: "His blood be on us and on our children." This with the vehement assertion uttered before: "We have no king but Caesar," coming from accredited representatives, was, in the language of a great writer: "Judaism guilty of denial of God, of blasphemy, of apostacy. It committed suicide; and even since has its dead body been carried in show from land to land, to be dead and to remain dead, till he comes the second time, who is the Resurrection and the Life."

STATEMENT.

I have received Church Extension money as follows:

Byhalia, S. A. Brown	$27.85
New Albany, O. L. Savage	26.00
Shelby & Merigold, D. L. Cogdell	30.00
West, J. J. Garner	25.00
Tupelo, T. W. Lewis	40.00
Clarksdale, R. P. Neblett	35.00
Sidon, W. B. Pinson	20.00
Courtland, C. W. Baley	20.00
West Point, J. E. Thomas	50.60

If every charge will enable its pastor to pay before the meeting of Conference it will be a great relief to the pastor, and greater to me. All banks now charge to handle checks on local banks; so let each pastor ask his bank to give him exchange, either Memphis or New York. That will cost the pastor nothing, and will be a saving to the Board of Church Extension.

If the Board of Education will not think I am meddling, I will say that I hope the charges will pay more, a good deal more, than 60 per cent on education this year. Every dollar is needed, and no charge should permit its pastor to make a short report. Last year the collection was less than 60 per cent of the assessment.

Why advertise that local disturbance, caused by a local scribbler, in a county paper, before the seven thousand readers of the Advocate? Not one in a thousand would have heard of it except through the Advocate? Sometimes, I fear, we protest too much; we explain too much; we defend too much.

WILLIAM A. WHIGHAM was born July 2nd, 1820; departed this life August 17th, 1906. My first acquaintance with Bro. Whigham was during the latter part of the winter of 1905. Old age had, with hard physical labor, made deep inroads on his constitution, I found him fast ripening for the grave and ready for the change. He told me a number of times that he was ready when his Lord said, "It is enough; come up higher." Bro. Whigham's home was with Bro. H. C. Pridgeon, who had married one of his daughters. He had a pleasant Christian home with devoted children and grandchildren to comfort and wait upon him in his last days. Bro. Whigham received a fall and broke one of his hips, which hastened his death. His sufferings were intense but he murmured not, and prayed that his Lord would take him home. In comfort to his loved ones, I can say that the testimony he left behind can but make us strong in hope. He is not now like he was when we saw him last, old and feeble, but young and vigorous in the glorious kingdom of his Lord, in whom he trusted.

F. A. LANE, P. C.

SARAH JANE WILKINS was born in Halifax county, Va., May 15, 1848, moved, with her parents, to Kemper county, Miss., in 1860, was married to Narcissus L. Dorr Feb. 2, 1869, with whom she moved, soon after, to Panola county, Miss., and died at her home near Sardis, Miss., November 3, 1906. Sister Dorr passed away almost without warning, being a remarkably healthy woman, and apparently in the best of health to within an hour of her death, but no one who knew her could well doubt that she was full ready to go, having professed religion and joined the church in childhood and remaining a devout and useful member to the day of death. She was in her usual place at church the Sunday next preceding her death. She was the mother of nine children, of whom the first born died in infancy. The rest, with the sorrowing husband, still survive. As a wife and mother, her life was characterized by constant devotion, as a neighbor she was a general favorite; as a child of God, she trusted Him with implicit faith and never shirked any known duty. "Many will rise up at the last day to call her blessed." Her friend and pastor,

E. E. LANGFORD.

A. G. BEAUCHAMP, the very embodiment of honesty and industry, was born in Morgan County, Ala., Aug. 7, 1829, and departed this life Oct. 19, 1906. He lived a few years in Perry County, Tenn., when a boy. Ten years were spent in Marshall County, this State; thence he removed to Attala County, where he lived to the day of his death. He was married in 1855, and reared a large family. Eight children and his widow followed his remains to the grave. Brother Beauchamp was a sincere, honest, guileless man. He never did an fellowman a known wrong. He lived a life of simple faith in God, and loyal service to his fellowman. He was a life-long Methodist, and a regular attendant upon the services of the sanctuary. True to his God, devoted to his family, patriotic as a citizen, he passed away with no stains upon his character, and no shadows in his heart. His end was peace. For three years he was a member of Forest's Cavalry and made a good record with this dashing cavalry leader. He is dead but his works do follow him. He sleeps in the Kosciusko cemetery to await the resurrection.

LEAKESVILLE CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I send you this brief report of our work this year for publication in the ADVOCATE.

We began the year's work with an indebtedness of $1,198 on the new church at this place. With the aid of donations from the Church Extension Boards to the amount of $400, we have been able to pay this indebtedness (except $48, which is secured), and have the building dedicated.

Our finances are in proper shape—every assessment on the charge having been paid in full, save a deficit on pastor's salary. That will be in hand by the time our Fourth Quarterly Conference is held.

Revival meetings have been held at every church on the circuit, which resulted in much good. Rev. W. A. Hays rendered us valuable service at Adamsville, where the church was edified and four members received on profession of faith. Brother Hays is a strong preacher for a man of his age; is thoroughly consecrated, and bids fair to be eminently useful in the Master's service. Rev. B. W. Lewis was to have assisted me at Avera, but throat trouble made it necessary for him to cancel the engagement. Rev. Reusie, a Protestant Methodist, popped into the meeting and preached twice for us. Some reclamations, one member received on profession of faith and organization of a Sunday school were the visible results of this meeting. Rev. J. F. Feagin, of the Alabama Conference, was with me at Ramseyville after Sunday. He is an accomplished young man, and preaches the Gospel with power, and in demonstration of the Spirit. Circumstances were against us at this point. The great storm had swept over the country a few days before, and everything was in a state of confusion. Nevertheless, I am pursuaded to believe that much good was accomplished.

Rev. W. L. Linfield did all of the preaching in the meeting at Leakesville. Those who have been associated with him in revival work need not be told anything as to the character of his preaching. He is more of a preacher than a revivalist in the modern sense of that term. He does not relate deathbed experiences, tell graveyard stories, nor resort to questionable methods of manipulating a revival to move the people, but depends upon the power of the Word, accompanied by the Holy Spirit, to stir the hearts and quicken the consciences of his hearers. After all, such a preacher is the really successful revivalist. His preaching here did much good in the way of training up the membership of the church. Brother Linfield and this scribe were fellow-laborers in the Y. M. C. A. at Centenary College, and it was a personal pleasure to me to have him with us in this meeting. During the year we have had twenty-four accessions to the church, sowed down the work with missionary literature, secured thirty-one subscribers to our church papers, added several articles to the furniture of the parsonage, sent two young men to Millsaps College, and one young lady to Whitworth College, raised $44.25 for our Orphans' Home, paid $25 on district parsonage and will pay more, collected $33 for relief of the poor, and contributed to the building fund of the Superannuate home at Waynesboro.

We will need two preachers at this point another year in order that we may continue to move forward in the work. The people througout this charge are anxious for Brother Sullivan to be returned to the Meridian District for next year. We ask an interest in the prayers of all the readers of the ADVOCATE.

A GOOD WORK AT RUSTON, LA.

Dear Dr. Boswell:

I have just closed a revival service in Ruston of seventeen days' duration, in which I was ably assisted for two weeks by Brother Joe M. Ramsey, of Tennessee, the well-known blind lay-evangelist. As the result of the meeting I have already had thirty-two accessions by vows and baptism, with more to follow. I will report at Conference more than one hundred accessions in various ways during the year, and a membership of six hundred.

The citizens of Ruston are ready to turn over a beautiful forty-acre tract of land to the Legal Conference for the use of the Orphans' Home Board.

I congratulate in advance the brother who succeeds to the pastorate here, on a rare opportunity to preach to large congregations, to influence young student life from all over the state and to do much hard work for an appreciative people.

Any of the brethren who may be fortunate enough to secure the service of Bro. Ramsey any time in the future will find his help invaluable. He has marvelous mental and spiritual power without the faults which have characterized many professional evangelists.

MOREHOUSE IN THE DRY LIST.

Mr Editor: At the earnest solicitation of the best citizens of Morehouse parish, I went there on the 29th of October to make a fight for prohibition. After a vigorous and persistent campaign, succeeded in dealing the liquor men a crushing defeat. I had been preceded by some very rabid and injudicious speeches which lost us a number of votes, but, notwithstanding this unfortunate occurrence, our majority was almost two to one. I visited and spoke in every ward of the parish except the ninth, which was the only precinct giving a plurality to the whiskey dealers.

Rev. A. S. J. Neill and myself started the prohibition movement in Morehouse parish two years ago, and notwithstanding the indifference of friends and persistent opposition of enemies we carried the parish "dry" by a respectable majority. The liquor dealers, however, by some technicality in the law, succeeded in getting the saloon voted back into the incorporated town. The election on Nov. 6, which resulted in a sweeping victory for prohibition, is a definite protest against the liquor traffic, and a vindication of the manhood of the parish of Morehouse, and we once more with supreme gratification, write Morehouse in the dry list.

"Seeing the Southwest" EXCURSIONS.

Doubtless you have heard of the Bumper Crops which have been raised this year in Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Texas and New Mexico. Have you compared them with results obtained in your section? Is your work where you are bringing you adequate returns for the capital invested and the labor expended? If not, a change would be beneficial perhaps. A visit to the Southwest will open your eyes. Out in Oklahoma the last big land opening is soon to take place; farms are still very cheap in Western Arkansas, Northern Louisiana and the Gulf Coast of Texas. Let us give you full information about these sections. You will want to see them after you have examined our illustrated literature.

ONE WAY TO HELP.

OR A GOOD THING FOR CHRISTMAS.

The work of our church in the Oita Circuit, Japan Conference, is, for several reasons, as interesting as any we have. It was at this city Francis Xavier landed over three hundred years ago and began his marvelous career in Japan, and may be—who can tell?—it was here he wrote those striking measures which breathe such a beautiful spirit of love for the Master:

"My God, I love Thee, not because I hope for heaven thereby.
Nor yet because if I love not, I must forever die.
Not for the sake of gaining aught, nor winning a reward.
But as Thyself has loved me, oh ever blessed Lord."

This impressive hymn, a blessed legacy from this devoted, though misguided Jesuit, can be found entire in the Methodist Hymnal.

Our work in Oita is about eighteen years old. From this circuit have come a number of our best preachers and most earnest laymen. There are now a splendid lot of young men on its roll of members who are full of promise for the cause of Christ in Japan. The church is in charge of Rev. W. A. Wilson, one of the most indefatigable workers in any field, and its interests are rapidly advancing. In the city of Oita, it is absolutely necessary to enlarge the church building in order to accommodate the Sunday School, several classes of which have to meet in the parsonage, which causes much delay and confusion. The proposed enlargement will nearly double the size of the audience room, which is frequently too small for the crowds that assemble.

In order to help pay for this improvement, the Oita Christians are making a very pretty bookmark, faced with silk crape of various hues and colors. The back is of plain silk of a delicate color on which has been written in Japanese a verse of Scripture. The whole is finished with a pretty silk tassel.

These bookmarks are just the thing for Bible use. Nothing better could be had in the way of a cheap and pretty gift for the members of a Sunday School class from their teacher, or for a simple gift among friends. As they will readily slip into an envelope they can be mailed to friends.

The purchase of these bookmarks would not only solve the question "what shall I give for Christmas?" but would also be one way to help the cause of Christ. They will be sent in assorted packages of three, six and twelve, at 35 cents and $1.25, respectively. Miss Kate Harlan, care Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., has very kindly agreed to fill all orders. Please order liberally and thus help the struggling band of Oita Christians in their efforts to build up the cause of Christ in Japan.

BUILDING GOOD CHURCHES.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I write this note to state that while we lost by the recent storm six churches in the Seashore District, none of the churches built by the Church Extension plans were injured to any appreciable degree, except one. That was blown from the foundation, and would not have been injured, but for a stump that was underneath. My observation convinces me that in building churches a good plan, good material and good workmanship guarantee safety, comfort and security, and I know of no plan better than the Church Extension plans. Sincerely yours,

M. L. BURTON.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT—"LAST ROUND."

Dr. Boswell: It will not be easy to avoid the ground of valedictory in what follows. Four years mark a course in many fields, its end surely involving meditation upon the beginning and progress of all the work. In work like ours, four years are regarded as a course complete. And while mention has been had from year to year of what has been done, there is disposition, nevertheless, to travel the course as a whole.

Considerateness of your space and claims from Conference calls upon it will serve to keep this statement brief, however, and only a sentence or two will be devoted to matter of the three years preceding this year of certain grace.

In the first month of service on the District care was taken to equalize assessments, notices reaching me from District Stewards that divers crows were to be picked because of irregular percentages, running between 33 and 56, upon the pastors' salaries.

A straight average was taken with all the pastorates and peace resulted, all being contented. Realizing the increased cost of living, the salary of the Presiding Elder was substantially increased without solicitation. This gracious introduction to the district has been followed by equal attentions from official brethren, always fraternal, broad minded, and, for the most part, co-operative. My successor may have to call loudly for District Stewards to meet him next January; their readiness to commit their ways unto the Elder, trusting in him, serving to fill my hands with more proxies than persons, in the January past. The confidence was appreciated, and preserved, but I said that they seemed to require disturbance rather than harmony, in order to get a full attendance out.

There has been steady accord throughout the District along the term, to increase the salaries of the pastors. This is shown in a contrast of the first with this last year. Of 14 charges two were paying $800 or more. At the beginning of this year, of 15 charges nine will pay $800 and more, five paying $900. Had one circuit not been divided, it would have made the tenth.

Each District probably insists upon securing pastors with peculiar fitness, one presiding Elder holding his field to be different and demanding especial culture. This has certainly been the case with the Vicksburg. With a settled society, large culture of its people, its working centres largely Methodist, it may be easily seen how weighty our responsibility has been. The Presbyterian Church has three pastorates, the Episcopal three, perhaps I should say four; the Baptist three, one "Christian" pastor. Methodist obligation with 15 pastorates and 45 congregations, is pressing and profound.

Mayersville may well be named the "Northwest Passage" of the Conference. E. P. Ormond, with difficulties indeed environing his work, is finishing his second year. Sickness in his home has hampered, and the State Levee Board ran the levee outside one of his two churches, allowing the rising spring flood to almost reach its roof, and disabling it completely. It will be removed and rebuilt at a point further downstream, and in a place of safety. Despite obstructions, the pastor has done faithful service, deserving well of the church.

George A. Gilliee, serving Anguilla the second year, preserves his character of doing effective work, and will be remembered as receiving a large number of members, among them some of the prominent men of that section.

W. T. Griffin, at Rolling Fork, will bring to Laurel an inspiring report. The church at Rolling Fork has been practically reconstructed. Has spire, handsome stained windows; its appearance leading a traveller coming into the place to remark that it must be an Episcopal Church, so fine it looks—which it verily is, Methodist Episcopal. Out on the Sunflower river a new congregation with 30 members and evidence of enthusiasm has been organized.

"Famous," the pony, would prove an eloquent witness for or against Brother Griffin, recounting the daily journeys into all the region round about. Famous is undoubtedly an itinerant minister.

At Satartia W. J. Ferguson has been active, receiving more new members than any charge of the District. He is gifted in many ways, cheerful to a fault (should it not be to a virtue?), looking squarely at his difficulties and fearlessly exposing them.

Oak Ridge is half of old Warren circuit. J. M. Lewis is the pastor there, who, with his young wife, has gone carefully through a prosperous year, passing his studies in the Correspondence School, and coming up for ordination as Deacon.

J. L. Peebles, closing his second year at Bolton, will bring the charge out in his customary completeness in the details of his work. Nothing is ever neglected by this pastor.

J. W. Campbell closes his second year at Edwards. His energies have enabled him to take strong hold of his charge, and his work has been appreciated by his people.

J. T. Leggett for three years has been pastor at Utica. His service evokes high praise from his membership, proving him, or approving him as the strong, patient and helpful pastor.

J. H. Foreman brings up for Hermanville, during the past two years, the best reports of many. He is in high favor among all the people. Is closing up a large balance upon his church at Hermanville, which has been troublesome, and which received substantial stimulus from Bishop Ward during the session of the late District Conference held there.

H. H. Griffin, son of our A. C. Griffin, has supplied Rocky Springs this year. He is a young man with his heart in his work, and will make a creditable account of his charge coming up for admission on trial.

M. B. Sharbrough at Harrison opens the resources of the seasoned veteran in his first year home from California. He has been unceasing in his efforts to develop his work, winning the interest of his people, some of them declaring they have the greatest preacher on their long line of pastors.

At Port Gibson W. H. Lewis closes his second with the same successful results as with last year. He is planning needed and extensive improvements to his church, and his people are more than likely to see him through with his plans, all of them in sympathy with his administration. He has his hands full, this being the seat of our College for Girls, as also of the Sunday school for boys, Chamberlain-Hunt Academy. Both these schools are full to overflow this session. H. C. Hawkins, President of the college, has probably the record attendance for 20 years. The session is moving easily along at this time. His girls contented and looking wholesome and well. The community is proud of the institution.

H. P. Lewis, Sr., is too well known to require mention here. Next year will round out the half century's service for this man of God. His superior in fidelity to his trust, patience under affliction, and cheerfulness under hardship, may not be found. The benediction in association with him will remain with me, as with all his brethren. He finishes his second year on Vicksburg Circuit.

W. A. Terry at Washington Street has had the vicissitudes of the missionary. His pastorate is composed of people who for the most part are transient, coming in to the railroad shops, and going from them constantly. He has labored faithfully and efficiently, and will be remembered for his devotion to his difficult field.

Dr. Holloman reaches the time limit at Crawford Street. He is also somewhat of a veteran, well known and always well loved. His service covers the liquidation of a rather heavy debt upon the church, and the run of yellow fever last year.

He was almost the only pastor left in the city in that racking time. Semper fidelis may be claimed for his crest. He has served without reserve, fully and abundantly, and closes his quadrennium sincerely honored by all the people.

In the effort to be brief, I have realized the deficit in this personal report and reference to the pastors of the District.

Bare outlines only are possible; while upon me is the memory and the pressure of incidents filling all the time and the years of this united service from these godly men. In such a history the work of the great wives should have place, and high place; for theirs is the place of crucifixion, often.

There has been no complaint without exception the force of workers among whom I have been honored and privileged to serve has kept near to God and loved their work. The register of the history can not be kept with more than casual accuracy; it will all appear in the Book of Life. The ruling, intense motive in all the service has ranged about one central fact—the salvation of sinners. May God be gracious to the Vicksburg District, to these and other pastors who have served it during the four years past, and to the people who compose it and befriend it, for we have many friends and helpers outside the church. The collection of pictures which fill my album will not be needed to preserve always in fresh and grand interests and affections which have lain their birth during the quadrennium, and which will not have its death.

W. H. Lewis.

THE DOGMA OF CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY.

Some years ago a prominent preacher in the Mississippi Conference, a learned man, handed me a book, which had been given him by another very prominent preacher, teaching this dogma. Both of these preachers, since dead, were persuaded of the truth of the book's dogma. I have been told that many of our preachers in the West are tainted with this error. I was surprised and rather pained to find by the editorial alluded to by Dr. Black in the ADVOCATE of October 25th that the brilliant editor of the Nashville Advocate had become thus tainted; for, while I do not share with Dr. Black his fear, and am no heresy hunter, yet I feel that it does discredit to the intellectual acumen of a Methodist preacher to be led away by an error so baldly erroneous as is this one.

The whole theory rests upon a literal interpretation of such passages as these: "Whosoever believeth may in Him (Christ) have eternal life." "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life." "God gave unto us eternal life, and this life is in His Son—he that hath the Son hath the life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not the life." If the term "eternal life" in these and other similar passages means, as this theory insists, simply and literally endless duration of life, then it is true that only the converted man is immortal: and the man who dies unconverted will pass into nonexistence—will be annihilated.

But what about this literal interpretation? Let us apply the same canon of interpretation to such passages as these: "He that believeth hath passed from death unto life." "The bread of God is that which cometh down out of heaven"—he alludes here to himself—"and giveth life unto the world." "The bread which I will give is my flesh for the life of the world." "I am come that they might have life." "Believing ye may have life in His name." "God hath granted repentance unto life." In these and other similar passages it is baldly, literally said that the thing which Christ by His atonement brings us is life—not eternal life or immortality, but simply life—physical life. We see that a literal interpretation will land us in the baldest absurdity; and yet I have as much right to insist upon a literal interpretation here as has any one else to insist upon a literal interpretation of passages telling that Christ's redemption means the giving of eternal life. "What proves too much proves nothing."

Those who accept this conditional dogma of immortality must face this problem also: The Christ taught that infants are born in a saved state—"of such is the Kingdom of God." Born saved, immortal, do they lose their immortality when they grow older and become sinners? What of the Christians who backslide? Immortal today, and void of immortality next year?

There is another problem to meet. Can there be such a thing as a mortal soul? Are not souls by their very nature immortal?

The most difficult of all the problems these errorists have to meet is the teaching of the Bible positively contradictory of their dogma. For instance: "Marvel not at this: for the hour cometh in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the ressurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of condemnation"—not destruction—not annihilation. John v. 28 and 29. "These shall go away into eternal punishment"—not annihilation. Matt. xxv. 46. "There shall be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust"—Acts xxiv. 15—what immortality one has, so has the other—else why a resurrection for both? Is the "lake of fire" in Rev. xx. and xxi. a fit figure of annihilation?

The simple truth is that throughout the New Testament the salvation brought to us by the Christ is spoken of under the figure of life—sometimes eternal life, which only means the highest grade of life; while the unsaved condition is presented as death, e. g. "Dead in trespasses and in sins"—Eph. ii. 1; "Dead in your sins"—Eph. ii. 13; "Thou hast a name * * * and art dead." Conversion is figured as the passing from death unto life. Any system of interpretation that would make literal these figures of speech will become utterly absurd. Hence the ridicule justly hurled at the Nashville editor.

H. W. FEATHERSTON.

P. S.—Since writing this article I have read the learned, logical and very timely article in the ADVOCATE of November 15th by Prof. Swartz, of Millsaps College. I heartily congratulate the ADVOCATE and commend the utterance.

MISSIONARY PASTORS AND ELSE.

Dr. Boswell has in receipt of a letter from Brother J. E. Thomas of West Point, telling of his success on Sunday School Rally Day. His school gave $67.04. This, with other money he has raised, will go to the erection of a church in Japan. At the suggestion of Dr. Lambuth the West Point Church has undertaken the building of a church in Japan rather than the support of a missionary pastor. In excess of its regular assessment they will pay this year more than $300 for this work.

Bother J. C. Park writes from Greenwood that the Towson-Japan Missionary Circle is more firmly fixed than ever before. He is now on the safe side of the support of the missionary pastor for another year. The movement gives every evidence of permanency. This circle has a membership of more than 100, who agree to pay annually from one to fifty dollars for the support of Brother Towson, and to pray especially for him. He sends to their Quarterly Conference reports of his work and thus a personal connection is kept between them. In addition to the Missionary Circle the Sunday School and Epworth Leagues pledge given amounts. The plans for the accomplishment of this work are so simple that for a working pastor success is assured.

The movement for the support of individual missionaries is growing rapidly. In our church there are nineteen Conferences which have taken up this work. They have the care of seventy-eight missionary pastors. Of these the South Georgia supports thirty-seven. Five Conferences are building churches, of which the South Georgia is undertaking two. I am glad the North Mississippi is represented in both of these companies. But this is only the beginning of what we should do. While our less well organized charges are learning the grace of making full payment of assessments, our better-organized charges, of which we have not a few, should be growing into this larger movement. Not content to meet a minimum call, which they have learned to do years ago, a number of our charges ought to set the inspiring example of a larger benevolence. Why may we not have within two or three years ten or twelve men who stand as our personal representatives in the foreign fields? Who will say there are not this many charges in our Conference which are abundantly able to assume and carry this work? Awaking these churches to a sense of obligation is what is needed. In China, Japan, Korea and Mexico only $600 is needed for the support of a single missionary. To put this burden on the consciences of the members of these churches will require much work. Perhaps some of us as pastors will have to feel it more sensibly. We can not inspire where we ourselves are not enthused. We cannot teach when we are unlearned. But the time is on us as a church when these larger duties must be taken up. New doors are opening for work. We have undertaken the work of teaching the wide, wide world of the Christ. With our regular work our Board is taxed to the utmost of its stated income. It must have relief at some points to enter these new openings. When has a more urgent appeal come than that from Bishop Candler in Korea? With the maintenance of all our missionaries on individual churches, the Board would not have to wait an indefinite time for a special offering to meet such emergencies.

Will not our pastors and presiding elders lead our better organized charges into this work? No Conference has more faithful men. Let us put our life into this movement of doing something for our Lord that is worthy of him and of us.

W. W. WOOLLARD.

CARROLLTON AVENUE.

At the Fourth Quarterly Conference held last Friday night and presided over by Rev. T. J. Warlick, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, our church has enjoyed a season of prosperity, and whereas we attribute much of our success to the consistent, faithful and diligent efforts of our pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, we believe it proper, while praising God, to convey an official expression of our appreciation and approval of the ministry of our beloved pastor to the presiding Bishop of the Annual Conference to meet in Shreveport December 5, 1906, through our presiding elder, Rev. T. J. Warlick.

During the three years that Brother Holmes has served us our membership has increased nearly 150 per cent, and the attendance upon our services has been correspondingly large. The Sunday School, Epworth Leagues and Missionary Societies have improved as a result of the encouragement given them by our pastor. In fact, Brother Holmes has given eminent satisfaction, both as a pastor and preacher, and is loved by all of our people and respected by the community at large.

Whereas, we believe it to be the unanimous desire of our congregation that he be returned to us for the ensuing year; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Carrollton Avenue M. E. Church, South, That we earnestly implore Bishop Ward and his cabinet to reassign Rev. W. W. Holmes to our pulpit for the ensuing Conference year.

YUN IN THE GINSENG SHED.

Bishop Candler has received from Mr. T. H. Yun, since he left Korea, the letter which appears below. As it shows, our brother has begun the school in the old ginseng shed, which still stands on our property in Songdo. In this old house he and Brother A. W. Wasson and Mrs. Wasson will conduct the school until the new school building can be erected.

We cannot afford to disappoint the hopes of such a man, nor fail to keep faith with the Songdo people. We feel sure the Church will not. We must redeem our overdue pledges and do this great work grandly.

Brother W. G. Cram writes of Brother Yun: "He has begun his work with zeal and earnestness. His ideas are sane and wholesome. He does not wish to begin a large school at present, but seems to be of the opinion that a good foundation is much better at the present time than numbers.

"Let us help him lay broad foundations for this great work. A good brother offers $5000 for the hospital, and that house will go up at an early date. We need more for the school building. We must take Yun and the school out of the Gensing shed.

"The Presbyterians have made their center at Pyeng-Yang, and at their great station there they have baptized over 1000 new members during the last twelve months. We can do as much at Songdo. We must!"

In another letter to Bishop Candler, Brother Yun says: "Please do not trouble yourself about raising anything for my house or on my account whatsoever. Let the school be built, equipped and manned first of all." That shows the spirit of the man.

But let us turn to the letter we set out to print. It is as follows:

My dear Bishop Candler: You came and went so quickly and did so many things in so short a time that your visit lingers in my memory like a pleasant dream—only a dream to be realized into a hospital, a school and a missionary center. I hope this will find you safe and sound in your new duties in Shanghai. Please remember me kindly to my friends in China, and to your traveling companions, Messrs. Tompson and Candler.

I came to Songdo last Thursday. Mr. Wasson being away to Wonsan, Mrs. Wasson and I are going to start a school next Wednesday with the boys who studied under Mr. Wasson last spring as a nucleus. Most of them are members of our church in Songdo. They represent the upper class here and the mission will find this school a powerful auxiliary for reaching that class of people who have so far been more or less inaccessible.

Now Bishop, as you have taken in the situation of Korea in general, and of our mission in particular, I do not think it at all necessary to urge on you the importance of Songdo. But through you, may I call the attention of the mother church in America to the claims of this one of the three great centres of Korea, the other two being Seoul and Fyeng-Yang? Songdo was chosen as the centre of our mission ten years ago. The experience since has proved the wisdom of the choice. If the centre has not been made strong and flourishing as the Presbyterians have made Pyeng-Yang to be, it is a misfortune of our mission, and not the fault of Songdo. It is high time now to quit playing with—worse than forgetting this great missionary centre. With God in heaven and you in the Church, I am sure some of the promises which the mission has been making to the people will be redeemed.

A hospital was promised ten or eleven years ago. Yet not a doctor in sight anywhere for Songdo. I have been obliged to give excuses for the delay—such as wars and rumors of wars—but these excuses, thin as they are, can hold water no longer. The Presbyterians have built and are operating three really fine hospitals in spite of, nay, in the very midst of wars. Do give us a well-equipped hospital. If the Church is willing, she is able. Our mission must respect its own honor—to say the least.

An industrial school was also promised ten years ago, but it is only this year that the thing is being talked about—yes, only talked about. Schools are being started by the Koreans everywhere. There are already ten in this town alone. If we must have a school—and we must have one to conserve and consolidate the work that has been so well done by the missionaries—I say, if we must have a school we cannot afford to have one of cheap grade. It must be far and away the best in the city—in the country.

Please send us a missionary, who, in addition to other qualifications, loves education for its own sake. With Mr. and Mrs. Wasson and another such a man or a family entirely given to building up a distinctly Christian school, I assure you of a success that will surprise us all.

Please put several families in Songdo, forming a missionary settlement. The phenomenal success of the Presbyterians in the northwest of Korea owes much to their concentration.

The changes and trials I have had during the past years make me weary of more changes. Yet I have no right to complain of them. I shall gladly submit myself to changes and toils as God-given if I find the mother church ready and willing to help forward the work.

May we soon be able to tell the Songdo public "Here we have given you a hospital, a school, and a missionary centre, each perfect in its kind. We have not deceived you. Now, do your part." With love, yours affectionately,

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

The Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Conference of M. E. Church, South, Brookhaven District, met at Magnolia, Miss., October 10, 1906.

Saturday, 10 a. m.—Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Lipscomb. Prayer by Brother J. A. B. Jones. The business session of the foreign missionary work was presided over by the District Secretary, Mrs. Clifford, of Columbia. Mrs. T. R. Ratliff, of McComb, was appointed secretary. Delegates representing Brookhaven, Wesson, McComb, South McComb, and Magnolia were present.

Mrs. Lipscomb reported earnest work and liberal donations from Brookhaven. Miss Kate Kendrick brought encouraging tidings from Wesson. Mrs. Ratliff reported small membership, but earnest workers at McComb. The work of the Young People and Juveniles were next discussed. Mrs. Clifford represented the Golden Links and Clifford Workers of Columbia. She reported excellent work, also gave a very helpful talk on her plan of organizing children and young people in a missionary society.

The Jane Watkins Golden Links of Wesson was represented by Miss Kate Kendrick. Mrs. Lipscomb gave a very pleasing talk in which she described the plan adopted to carry on the missionary work among the girls at Whitworth Female College. She also reviewed the most interesting features of the Annual Meeting, which convened at Laurel. The meeting adjourned. Prayer by Brother Tholburn.

The Conference met again at 3 p. m. After devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Lipscomb the business session of the home mission work was opened, presided over by Mrs. A. M. Mullin, District Secretary. Hazlehurst and Wesson sent no reports. The report of McComb Centenary Church was read by Mrs. Mullin, South McComb by Mrs. Platt, Magnolia by Mrs. Norwood, and Columbia by Mrs. Clifford. All reports were very fine. The women of the Home Mission Society of Brookhaven District are doing a work of which the church is, and should be, very proud.

Magnolia can boast of the banner auxiliary for the present year, 1906-07. Various and interesting subjects were discussed. Meeting adjourned, prayer by Brother Galloway.

At 7:30 p. m. the Conference met in joint session and were delightfully entertained with interesting papers and fine music.

The welcome address was delivered by Mrs. Jerome Ford; response by Mrs. Clifford. The rescue work was very instructively discussed by Mrs. Edgar. Mrs. Ratliff read a paper on "Woman in the Mission Field."

Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m. Mrs. Lipscomb delivered a very fine address on "Missions." She placed the church in the cause and pictured very forcibly the obligations of the church towards this missionary cause. The cause for which she plead was very joyfully received by that large audience, as was evidenced by the liberal donation given to the scholarship fund in the Scarritt Bible and Training School.

At 3:30 p. m. Mrs. Clifford instructed the children on Japan and displayed interesting curios.

The Conference adjourned Sunday night with an interesting programme.

LIFE AND SAYINGS OF SAM JONES.

The contract for placing before the people of the United States the Life and Sayings of Sam Jones has been awarded to J. L. Nichols & Co., of Atlanta. The contract was secured at immense expense in addition to the royalty which will go to Mrs. Jones.

There will probably be a half score of biographies of Sam Jones—cheap and unsatisfactory books. This biography will be prepared by Mrs. Jones and the Rev. Walt. Holcomb, who was Sam Jones' faithful friend, and his last co-laborer. The book will be large and complete, and, being authorized by Mrs. Jones, we advise all who propose securing a biography of this wonderful man, to wait until this book is published.

Sam Jones was not only the greatest pulpit genius of this generation, but the most successful soul winner of his day. His life will read like a romance. The volume will be welcomed by thousands.

LEAKESVILLE, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I want to correct some typographical errors in my letter published in the ADVOCATE last week.

The type made me say that "Rev. Kensie, a Protestant Methodist, popped into the meeting." I said that "Rev. Kensie, a Protestant Methodist dropped into the meeting." In speaking of the work of Rev. W. L. Linfield in the meeting at Leakesville, I said that his preaching did much good in the way of "toning up the membership," but the type made me say, "Training up the membership." Again, I wrote Roussasaville instead of "Ramsayville," as published.

I seldom write to the ADVOCATE, and when I do I don't like for the type to make me say ridiculous things. Yours, etc.

D. SEARBOROUGH.

[We sympathize with Brother Searborough. The type will "slip up" on all of us occasionally. They make the editor talk nonsense now and then, but we trust the good sense of our readers to make the necessary corrections. In Brother Searborough's case he is somewhat at fault as well as the types. The printer submitted ones of the words to the Editor, and between us we did the best we could. And one of the words looks much more like we printed it than like what he says he wrote. We shall do our best to print his corrections exactly as he writes them.—EDITOR.]

LETTER FROM TENNESSEE.

Dear Brother Boswell: I have been for some time in the state that gave me birth—"Old Tennessee." Here are the footprints of my youth, my kindred and the graves of my sires. I find my father's kindred almost as numerous as the "sands of the sea." God has wonderfully bound this world together in the bonds of family relationship. My great-grandmother Polk visited my father's home after she had passed her hundredth year. She was a near relative of James K. Polk and remembered to have been often in his company. Many of my kindred fell in the ranks of the Civil War. They were brave patriots. I never heard of a coward among them. I find my native home to be historic. Many of General Jackson's men, with whom he subdued the Indians during the Florida campaign, and defeated the British in New Orleans, were drawn from this vicinity, including the hunter and statesman, David Crockett. The hero of the Alamo first settled in what is now known as the "Whites Settlement" in Gibson County, just three miles east from where I was reared. He afterwards removed three miles west of my father's old home. I spent the night recently in the old home of "Uncle Bob Bovett," who hunted bear with the pioneer. An aged lady in the same neighborhood, Mrs. Holloman, presented me with a souvenir—a thimble worn by Colonel Crockett's daughter Matilda. In spite of his illiteracy, Crockett was great and readily took rank as a statesman with Webster, Clay and Calhoun. It was near this place that Crockett rebuked his opponent, Adam Huntsman, who had ignored him on the stump. Huntsman had been interrupted in his speech by some guinea fowls when he paused to have them driven away. At the close of his discourse Crockett said to him: "Colonel, you didn't have the politeness to notice me in your speech, and when my friends, the guineas, began to cry 'Crockett, Crockett Crockett,' you made them hush." This merited rebuke was greeted with a storm of applause that swept the vain pedant from his feet. "The very stones cry out" when merited virtue is abused.

This was also the stamping ground of General Simon Kenton, whose exploits with Daniel Boone as an Indian scout surpass the tales of fiction. But I must desist, but not without an apology. Some will say "we are concerned about the present and not the past." Not so. The common use of "past" is a misnomer. We are all links in the same living chain of life, each other's successor in humanity's work. We are builders of the structure for which the fathers laid the foundation. Shall we not keep before us the original plan? Surely, if we build wisely. The voices of the past speak to us in warning, counsel and in wisdom. While returning home recently from a stroll in the neighborhood I chanced to pass the graves of the departed loved ones of my father's family. Under a silvered canopy of a Tennessee autumn sky, I approached the bronze shaft in the silence of the night. A sense of restfulness and sweetness stole gently over my soul. Those sweet, loving faces seemed to rise to greet me, while a message seemed to come with all paternal and brotherly tenderness, "Press on, press on, the victory will soon be won." In that sweet solitude, on the playground where my father taught the first school I attended, I fell to my knees. With a melted heart and tearful eyes I thanked God that I had a Christian experience—that I knew Christ as my redeemer. I said in heart, "If heaven is gained what matters it if we lose all? I can thank God in hope of heaven, though I suffer the demolition of every earthly hope." God bless you all.

Your brother in Christ.

ROBERT L. PHILLIPS.

MRS. T. C. WEIR.

Mrs. Mary L. Weir, wife of Dr. T. C. Weir, died at her home in Coldwater, Miss., Oct. 17, and was carried to Starkville for burial. As one who loved her and knew her well, I ask room enough in THE ADVOCATE to bear testimony to her excellent life.

My acquaintance with Sister Weir began with the fall of 1892, at which time I was appointed to the pastorate of the Starkville charge. In the capacity of pastor I soon learned to appreciate the Christian character of Sister Weir. She was regularly in her pew, and when absent this writer been helped and encouraged in her sympathetic and prayerful presence. There was always trustfulness in her face and demeanor and one felt stronger when sure of her friendship and support.

Sister Weir's life took deep hold on religious truth, and having had many years for maturity she became "a pillar in the temple of God." I had seen and enjoyed this mature and strong Christian life, but could not account for its richness and fruitfulness until Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan at her funeral, gave a description of her childhood and young womanhood. Then it all became plain. A good beginning had developed a character of fullness. After her marriage, for near forty years she walked beside an itinerant, through all the exactions of a public position, and no one was heard to say aught against her. A large family blessed her life and demanded her service, in addition to the constant cares of her position as the pastor's wife, yet there were no lapses nor hesitations. As regularly as the days came this life moved steadily on to its great end.

It is no surprise that a large number of noble sons and two accomplished daughters have gone out from that home to bless the world. She and their neighbors "rise up" and call her blessed."

She has ceased action in the flesh, but still lives in influence. Her memory is a precious heritage left to her husband, children and all her friends. This writer is especially thankful for the acquaintance had with Sister Weir. Her life of godliness was an inspiration on many occasions. For this reason this tribute is rendered as a debt of love.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES.

The Holston Conference gave a sympathetic and helpful hearing to Rev. W. H. H. Joyce's appeal for the Whisner Memorial Church, now under construction at Blacksburg, Va. This great Conference paid this year $4025.00, or 95 per cent, on its assessment for Church Extension, an increase of $182 over last year's receipts.

The New Mexico Conference paid $268, 107 per cent, on its assessment for Church Extension, an increase of $27 over last year's receipts. The German Mission Conference paid $157.40, or 105 per cent, on its assessment, an increase of $29 over last year's receipts. The West Texas Conference gave the Secretary a good hearing, reported a larger percentage paid on its assessment than ever before, and subscribed $315 for the purchase of lots in the "Big Pastures."

Rev. J. N. Fannin was appointed by Bishop Wilson to Central City, W. Va., at the Conference of 1905. He preached his first sermon in a rented hall Oct. 5, 1905. The Secretary of the Board of Church Extension dedicated the new church on Oct. 6, 1906. One year and one day's work at that point shows the following results: A thoroughly organized society of 80 members, and the building of a good brick church on well located lots, at a total cost of $7500, all of which has been provided for. The Board of Church Extension wisely invested $1200 in the enterprise. This is Church Extension in its best form.

Rev. I. T. Morris, pastor of Cuero Station, West Texas Conference, in reporting his work to that body, said that he had received a contribution from a friend at Cuero which enabled him to make an unusually good financial report. The instructions accompanying the contribution were as follows: "I leave the direction to you with this only remark from me that I have always felt a great desire that the Church Extension claim be paid in full by this church, because we had aided to help from the Board, when we were in great distress. There would be a marked increase in the receipts of the Board if all the 6500 churches which have been helped were moved by the same spirit.

The entire church will be interested in a report of the material progress being made in the Durango District, Denver Conference. Rev. J. V. Lewis is presiding elder of the district and pastor at Aztec, N. M. There are five pastoral charges in the district. Durango has expended in repairs on church and parsonage $500. A movement is on foot to improve the parsonage property at Manco and to liquidate the debt on same. A lot has been secured, lumber purchased, and some work done on the foundation for a new church at Cedar Hill. The congregation at Flora Vista has already decided to begin the erection of a parsonage this fall. Rev. R. C. Waldraven, of Farmington, is busy raising funds to pay for lots already contracted for on which he expects to erect a large, modern church. The congregation at Aztec, N. M., now only a little over one year old, has on hand the erection of a $4500 church building. They have $3100 in sight. The $1400 unprovided for must be found.

THE NEW SCHOLAR.

When the first class in geography was called Polly Carter stepped out into the aisle and to the front with the other children, her shoes squeaking at every step. The girls smiled at each other.

To be sure, they did not mean to be unkind, but Polly Carter was a new girl, her people had just moved to the old farm house on the marsh road.

"I'm glad you're the one that lives her way," said one of the other girls to Dorothy May, when school was over. "You'll have to walk home with her and be polite. My, don't her shoes squeak!"

Dorothy's face flushed, and she poked the dirt in front of the school house step with her slim little shoe.

"I guess I sha'n't walk with her!" she pouted. "I don't like squeaky shoes any more than the rest of you!"

The teacher had been talking to Polly Carter; they thought she was out of hearing, but just at that minute she walked out of the door with her head held high, and hurried along the board walk toward the corner.

"There, she heard what you said," whispered one of the other children.

Then they all ran off up the road, followed by the teacher.

"Come along with us and get some blueberries!" But Dorothy did not stir. Her way led by the board walk toward the corner, and she did not seem to care much for blueberries just then.

"If she heard, I can't help it," said Dorothy as she started slowly along. "Nobody ought to wear such squeaky shoes."

When she had almost reached the corner Dorothy's foot slipped where there was a broken place in the board. Her foot slid into the rough hole, and her poor little ankle had a twist that hurt. The foot would not come out. "Won't somebody, he-elp me? Won't somebody he-elp me?" cried Dorothy.

Suddenly, squeak! squeak! came the sound of hurrying steps.

"What's the matter?" asked Polly Carter. Her eyes were red, but her round, freckled face looked pleasant. "Is your foot caught? I'll get it out."

One strong little hand pulled the board up just enough for the other hand to lift out the poor foot.

"You've hurt it, twisting it so," said Polly Carter. "You sit down and let me look at it. Oh, your ankle's all swollen! You can't wear that shoe home."

She hesitated a moment; then she sat down and put her shoe on Dorothy's lame foot. "I'll go barefoot—I don't mind a bit. Now you stand up and I'll put my arm around you, so you won't have to bear your weight on that foot."

"Polly Carter," said Dorothy, with a little catch in her voice, "I'm just as ashamed! I'm going to love you, and I shall love squeaky shoes, too, forever, after this!"

Polly Carter laughed as she put her arm round Dorothy. "You needn't," she said, "mine won't squeak when father has had a chance to fix them. I don't like squeaky shoes a bit, but sometimes I like people a bit in them, I do, when they are kind."

"So do I," said Dorothy, squeezing in an—Elizabeth L. Cheney, in [illegible]

COMMON MISTAKES OF THE YOUNG.

"My dear," said a lady to a young woman who was insisting that a decision [illegible] not wear herself out by undertaking [illegible] in which the mother's heart was [illegible] her a great deal more by your opposition than she would tire herself by doing as she wished to. It was true, though it was hard for a loving daughter to understand why a young, eager, imperious and strong-willed one, in its very beautiful and unselfish impulsiveness it wounds those it would help. One has to arrive at a certain place in life to comprehend that the largest kindness which may be done anyone is, in nine cases out of ten, just to let her alone. Especially in the dealings of the young with the old, of grown-up sons and daughters with the parents who stand a generation in front of them, there is need of caution, for even kindness may fail in its good intention if it be overdone.

Everybody has noticed and many have smiled at the quick sensitiveness of the aged where their acceptance of aid in things smaller or greater seems to imply a falling off of power. Probably the real reason why people as a rule object to growing old and cling desperately to the receding skirts of youth is because little by little age does grow conscious of infirmity, age feels that it is pushed from its position in the activities of life and forced to stand aside. When age is still far away, a mere shadow in the distance, there are those who forecast the future and rebel against its limitations, and they are more than ordinarily ready to resist when their juniors lay, though softly and sweetly, stumbling blocks in their way. It makes them a little difficult to get on with, and they are brusquer and more prickly than they would be but for the constant endeavor to hold their own, which has the effect of all struggle, and toughens and hardens the one who conquers, so that there is little tarnish on the gold of victory.

Yet this is better than the too easy giving up, the relinquishing of privilege, the loss of standing-ground which we sometimes see. I have known a mother at fifty, when she should have been in the splendor and prime of her years, abandon her appropriate chair of state in the family councils simply because her strong-willed children were too much for her. Their overzeal in kindness effaced her as inevitably as if they had treated her with rudeness and neglect. In the latter alternative, indeed, she would have had more scope for growth, for the wind and the sun and the dew of heaven are better for the rooted plant than is the breath of the hot-house. Few human beings are improved by constant living in a glass case, and when a human being ceases to grow and develop, he or she then, and not till then, becomes past usefulness and a cumberer of the ground. By what right, by what excuse, do children ever thus impose an arresting kindness on their parents?

Generally speaking, to be very plain about it, children should not interfere too much with the mother's freedom of action. It is a Sunday morning. "You surely are not going to church?" says Jane. "In this weather?" adds Elizabeth.

Katherine [illegible]

[illegible] consideration, sweetness and gentleness of action on the part of children [illegible] it is a small word by way of reminder to those who do not know or comprehend how much real sincere, well meant kindness may be as deleterious as its opposite. Not always do age and youth see things alike. The point of view differs. Age [illegible] be admired, is often capricious and impatient, but Death, which we all have had so great an advantage in itself that it should learn magnanimity and restrain its desire to rule. One of these days, these coming days, the [illegible] of us all will [illegible] remember and regret that can never be atoned for.—Alice Meynell, in Christian Intelligencer.

The preacher said, with some truth perhaps, that "the reason why men do not go to church is because the Book stirs them up and they do not like to hear it." But what about men whose seats are vacant in those churches in which the Book holds a secondary and unimportant place?

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1906.

There is something new in Southern Methodism—the Conference Mission Evangelist. So it reads in the appointments of the West Texas Conference. Will this new office help to rid the churches of self-appointed evangelists? If so, it will be welcomed in all our connection.

"Every preacher," says Gypsy Smith, "should be careful how he asserts that he is simply a preacher and nothing more, or that he is only a pastor. Every real minister of Jesus will find an evangelist inside of himself if he goes deep enough in his digging." That is well put.

Is it true that after twenty years' experience with traveling evangelists the churches are beginning to demand "evangelistic pastors?" We hope so. Some churches know nothing of a revival except such as are conducted by strangers calling themselves evangelists—revivals that do not always last the waxing and the waning of a single moon.

The pastor of a certain city church "eschews every suggestion of sensationalism, declining to advertise even his sermon topics in the papers, puts his strength into his preaching and pastoral visitations, declines all invitations to lecture, and attends simply to his work as pastor." It goes without saying that the great church to which he ministers is nourished and built up in the faith.

If every preacher fully realized, as did Michael Angelo, that his work is for eternity, there would be more careful preparation for the pulpit, and a more intense desire to get at the mind of the Spirit as revealed in the written Word. Too many of us are satisfied with our own superficial productions, being self-confident, or too indolent to spend our strength in hard study. No wonder we make so many blunders.

* * *

Would it not be well to inquire who or what is responsible for the careless manner in which so many men of to-day hear the Word of God? Is it because men have lost faith in God, or because they have come to believe that God is too good to punish them? Or is it because the pulpit of to-day is too often silent on the judgment and the wrath of a sin-avenging God? Somebody somewhere is at fault.

TAKE HEED HOW YE HEAR.

The parable of the sower does not signify any man in undertaking to determine what proportion of the human family will be saved. True, our Lord divides the ground into four parts, assigning to each peculiar characteristics, but he says nothing about the proportion of this or that character of soil, nor the amount of seed that fell on each. These were not the material points in the parable. If they were we would naturally conclude that a very small proportion of hearers are careless or indifferent to the word, and that only a few allow it to be choked, while the great majority are either stony ground or faithful hearers, for the reason that the wayside or beaten track, and thorny spots bear but a small proportion to other sorts of soil in the fields.

In applying the parable we can but see that the seed, being the Word of God, is good, and possesses the germ of an abundant harvest. If there is failure it is not because of defect in the seed, but fault in the hearer. Our Lord's caution to men to take heed how they hear shows that on each hearer rests a responsibility. Otherwise the caution would be useless. This simply means that no matter what a man's natural conditions and surroundings, he is responsible for his attitude towards the Word of God, and is capable with proper attention and cultivation of producing good fruit. Every man is responsible to the full extent of his ability and opportunities.

We cannot apply the parable literally in all particulars. If so, we would be obliged to say that the Word of God falling on wayside or stony or thorny ground hearers could, under no conditions, be made fruitful. But everybody knows that seeds falling on such soils, if given diligent cultivation, will produce fruit—even thirty or sixty fold. Everybody also knows that though seeds may fall into good ground, entirely free from rocks or thorns, if left uncultivated, there will be no harvest. We must keep in mind the general purpose of the parable, viz: To impress hearers with the necessity of heeding the Word of God. Take heed how ye hear.

Instructions are ample and specific. Accepting the Word of God as true, it must be heard with a desire both to learn and to do the will of God. It must be heard not only with the ear, but treasured in the heart. "Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty—studying it as a sincere seeker after the truth, and not as a critic—and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed." Only such as are stirred and fascinated with the Word fixed in their hearts, and practiced in their lives, ever receive the blessing of the Lord. It does little good to hear and turn away from the truth. "If any man be a hearer of the Word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was." So the man who beholds his own spiritual character and moral destiny in the Word, as in a glass, may pass away, and retain no permanent impression. A most beautiful illustration of our moral nature from a physiological fact familiar to all, yet seldom noted. (Whedon.)

St. James' exhortation to the unconverted was what may be characterized as strenuous: "Lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness and receive with meekness the ingrafted Word, which is able to save your souls." The word filthiness does not refer to uncleanliness of person or apparel, but to the wrath of the soul which is often excited, and made to flame out in indecent speech when the Word of God, under the quickening power of the Holy Spirit enters the soul. The "superfluity of naughtiness" which also must be laid aside, refers to the overabundance of malignity cherished by men who "do not like to retain God in their knowledge." No man can hear the Word to profit in whose heart abounds these evil passions.

In addition to the evils existing in the heart there are outside influences which often hinder the success of the Word. Multitudes acknowledging the necessity of religion allow "the cares and riches and pleasures of this life" to choke out all holy desires and aspirations. Their hearts are so filled with these things that there is no room for God. Certainly the things of the world must be looked after, but the world must be made man's servant, not his master. As to pleasures, God would deny nothing to his children adapted to enhance their happiness, but they must learn to discriminate between the pleasures that are innocent and those that cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus. The greed for riches and indulgence in worldly pleasures are crying evils of our day. The consciences of men are being deadened, and their ears are getting heavy that they cannot hear. They must be aroused. The Word must be proclaimed in thunder tones. The blood of the lost must not be found on the garments of God's messengers.

LAYMEN AT WORK FOR THE LORD.

We see no reason why the men of the church who both know and love its doctrines should not exercise their gifts in publicly exhorting sinners to come to Christ, and to instruct such as are penitent and seeking to be saved. Two or three such laymen in each congregation would tell wondrously on the life of the church. No reason exists why even our stewards, who are supposed to have official duties save to look after the temporal interests of the church, should not exercise spiritual functions. By virtue of their office they are required to do this, so far, at least, as concerns the preachers—telling them what they think wrong in them, and also to notify the preacher of any that are sick or walk disorderly. Why should they not concern themselves about the spiritual welfare of the wicked?

A good brother, closing his third year in one of our large towns, tells us that his church is in a better condition than he has ever known it. And no wonder, for though he "closed a revival" a bad term to use) weeks ago, the work is still going on, "the laymen having caught the spirit of soul-saving and are going out after the unsaved at their places of business, and on the streets," and conversions follow. And converts join the church. That is good and worth shouting over—not only quietly in the heart as the pastor says he shouts as he goes about his charge, but aloud, as did the man who, healed of the Lord, "blazed abroad the matter." O that all the Lord's people were prophets!

THE DEATH OF BISHOP TIGERT.

We noted last week the critical illness of Bishop Tigert. We pen now, with inexpressible sadness, the news of his death. He passed away at Tulsa, Ind. Ty., on the morning of Nov. 21. He had gone to Tulsa to hold the Indian Mission Conference, but was taken ill about the time the Conference convened, and was unable to transact the business. Bishop Key was called and went immediately to his assistance and held the Conference for him.

The particulars of his last illness we quote from the Christian Advocate (Nashville):

"The immediate cause of his death was septic poisoning superinduced by a small fragment of bone which had lodged in his throat below the larynx. The physicians failed at first to find and remove it. After several days it was thrown off by suppuration. But the mischief was already done. By Wednesday, Nov. 14, his entire system was infected, the seat of the infection being so inaccessible as to defy local treatment.

"His physicians, including his own son, could only stand by and watch the gallant struggle which his robust system made against its powerful foe. His condition was never other than critical, and the helplessness of the physicians but added pathos to the case. The chance of saving his life might have been slightly greater had he been in a well-equipped hospital instead of a hotel apartment, but it was in any event a very slender one. Bishop Key, Dr. Lambuth, the Editor of the Advocate, Dr. McMurry, the members of the Oklahoma Conference, and the citizens of Tulsa gave the physicians every possible aid. Bishop Key and Dr. Lambuth were with him till the end came."

Bishop Tigert was a great man. He was a great preacher—loyal alike to his Church and his Lord. Nature had amply endowed him with physical manhood and a strong mind. He was not possessed in early life with advantages that fall to the lot of many, but he was bent on qualifying himself for a life of usefulness. He labored with his own hands to procure the means necessary to carry him through college. And when he entered Vanderbilt University he supported himself by teaching in the sub-college classes. It was while he was a student at Vanderbilt that he attracted the attention of Dr. Summers and Bishop McTyeire. Though barely out of his teens he was regarded as the brightest student in the University. Soon after graduation he was elected to a professorship and after a few years' work in the University he entered the pastorate. For twelve years he was Book Editor and Editor of the Review. In this work he took rank with the foremost editors of the country. He was the author of several volumes, and edited the great work of Dr. Summers on Systematic Theology.

Dr. Tigert was elevated to the Episcopacy by the General Conference at Birmingham in May, 1906. He was then about forty-nine years and six months old. A little less than six months he exercised the functions of his office, a shorter period than any Bishop in Methodism save Bishop John Emory and Bishop Bascom. He gave promise of living long, and of doing as much work as any man ever elected Bishop. He was in perfect health and little beyond the meridian of life.

We mourn the departure of a prince in Israel, but we do not mourn as those who have no hope. God buries his workman, but carries on his work.

The following resolutions on the death of Bishop Tigert were passed by the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting Monday morning, Nov. 26, 1906:

Whereas, Almighty God in his wise Providence has called our beloved Bishop Tigert from the limitations of this earthly life;

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, in connection with our whole Church, mourn the loss of a scholar of profound erudition, a thinker who illumined every subject he touched with the light of a superior intelligence, a theologian who had attained a secure and eminent place among the highest teachers of spiritual things, and a truly great preacher of the gospel.

Resolved, That we assure Bishop Tigert's bereaved family of our heartfelt sympathy and most earnest prayers.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Preachers' Meeting.

PERSONAL.

Rev. M. M. Black, in closing his labors for this year at Purvis, Miss., is putting in some successful work for the ADVOCATE, for which we sincerely thank him.

In a private letter from Gilderoy he complains of being somewhat out of health, but no one would ever suspect him of ailing by reading his letters to the public, one of which will grace our columns next week.

Rev. D. E. Kelley, who some months since favored us with a list of sixty-six new subscribers, has again brought us under obligation. He sends this time twenty-four, and two renewals. We thank Brother Kelley for his good work.

Dr. Sawyer, finding it difficult to get a quorum of the trustees of Centenary College to go to Jackson to hold a meeting, has changed the date and place to Dec. 4 at 3 p. m., in Shreveport, La. All the trustees will please take notice.

Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, after a serious surgical operation from which he rapidly recovered, is now among friends in Georgia, but will soon be back in Mississippi in much improved health. So we learn in a letter from Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan.

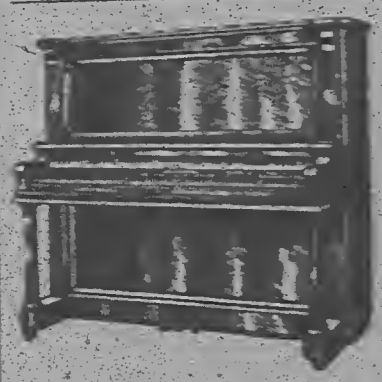
A note from Rev. C. M. Chapman informs us that he is closing up his work for the year in College Hill Station, Ark., and will transfer to the Mississippi Conference. His wife's health has not improved, and they prefer to be at home and among their old friends.

Rev. R. A. Clark desires in advance of the meeting of the North Mississippi Conference to notify the brethren that the churches in Columbus desire the next session to be held with them, and will petition to that effect. There is no better place than Columbus. The brethren will take the matter under advisement.

Bishop Galloway has greatly improved in health, and one day last week visited Millsaps College, where he received a rousing welcome at the hands of the students and faculty. The Bishop will spend the winter in Florida, and give himself a season of complete rest. We trust that long rest in the balmy Florida atmosphere will restore him to his usual vigor.

We are indebted to Rev. H. G. Hawkins for the following notice of a pleasant occasion: "On Thursday, Nov. 22, at the district parsonage in Port Gibson, Miss., Mrs. W. H. Huntley gave a dining in honor of the birthday of her husband. It was the passing of the fiftieth milestone. The seven guests present greatly enjoyed the tasty repast and the hospitable spirit of their hosts."

Rev. R. O. Brown, writing from Batesville, Miss., says: "I am winding up well. In two years Batesville has developed from a church on a circuit, paying $400, to a station, paying $900, and paying salary monthly, 'in full.' Have had twenty-five additions this year, mostly on profession of faith. Have a Sunday school with a membership larger than the membership of the church; an Epworth League of fifty-three members; a Men's Prayer Meeting, with an average attendance of between twenty-five and fifty. Batesville is alive and at work."



Dr. S. A. Steele, who located two years ago, was readmitted into the traveling connection by the Indian Mission Conference at its recent session. His name, however, does not appear in the list of appointments. We suspect that he was transferred to one of the Texas Conferences.

Of Mississippi preachers now in the Oklahoma Conference (formerly the Indian Mission), Rev. W. D. Matthews was appointed presiding elder of the Weatherford district; Rev. T. L. Mellen to Antlers and Nelson Station, and Rev. W. L. Anderson to Poteau and Cameron.

The Senatobia (Miss.) Democrat of the 23d voices the sentiment of the church and community in saying that Rev. J. T. Murrah, pastor of our church in that city, "has by his loyalty to every interest of the church, his able manner in presenting Biblical truths, and consecration to duty, won the confidence and esteem of the entire community. He is indeed a high-toned Christian gentleman." His return to Senatobia for another year is unanimously desired, and the official board will petition the appointing power to that effect. If agreeable to Brother Murrah, we hope the request will be granted.

Avoid alum and alum phosphate baking powders. The label law requires that all the ingredients be named on the labels. Look out for the alum compounds.

NOTE.—Safety lies in buying only Royal Baking Powder, which is a pure, cream of tartar baking powder, and the best that can be made.

Heiskell's Ointment Cures Skin Diseases

For half a century Heiskell's Ointment has been used in all cases of skin disease with most gratifying results. Many have become entirely cured who had suffered untold pain and annoyance for years. One man in New Baltimore, Pa., writes that it cured him when he was raw all over. A lady in Philadelphia cured a case of tetter of six years' standing in fourteen days, while a man in Allentown, Pa., cured his case of eczema that had troubled him for eleven years with less than two boxes of the ointment. These and hundreds of others have found that Heiskell's Ointment is worth more than its weight in gold. Being a purely vegetable preparation, Heiskell's Ointment soothes and heals where others fail. It allays the itching and burning common to all skin disease, and all yield quickly to its magic influence.

There are many varieties of skin diseases with confusing titles, but they are all susceptible to one and the same cure—Heiskell's Ointment. No one need suffer long if afflicted with any skin disease not of a constitutional character if they will apply this remedy. This includes such skin diseases as erysipelas, prurigo, eczema, milk crust, itching piles, scaldhead, tetter, ringworm, blackheads, psoriasis, pimples, freckles. In some cases it is necessary to give some constitutional treatment, as in erysipelas, eczema, etc.; the liver should be toned to healthy action, and the blood and all the secretions purified. In all cases of skin disease cures are hastened by the use of Heiskell's Medicinal Soap before applying the ointment, and in cleaning up the blood and liver with Heiskell's Blood and Liver Pills.

Heiskell's Medicinal and Toilet Soap contains in a modified form the medicinal properties of Heiskell's Ointment, and is particularly effective in slight disorders of the skin, as rash, eruptions and abrasions. It cleans perfectly, and in the bath is a great luxury.

Heiskell's Blood and Liver Pills contain the active medicinal principles of various roots and herbs approved in medical practice.

Remember that there is no case so obstinate that Heiskell's Ointment will not cure it. The ointment is sold at 50c a box. Soap at 25c a cake. Pills at 25c a bottle.

You can get them of any druggist, or we will send by mail on receipt of price. Address Johnston, Holloway & Company, 531 Commerce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

SECOND CHURCH, BATON ROUGE.

Dear Doctor: Last Sunday was a great day for us here at Second Church. The Sunday school was much larger and my congregation heard a strong sermon by Rev. Mr. Caldwell, pastor of Carrollton Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La. His theme was the "Cross of Jesus," and he handled it well. In his discourse he mentioned the fact that his pulpit was being filled by a Methodist (on that day), whose name is Rev. Jno. W. Boswell, D. D. Mr. Caldwell is a young man of great promise and usefulness. I understand that he is a grandson of the late and lamented Rev. B. M. Palmer, D. D., whose eloquent tongue was heard both North and South on the glorious theme of the Gospel of Jesus.

At 3:30 p. m. we had our Sunday School Mission Rally, which was by far the best and most entertaining rally ever held here. All honor is due Miss Booth and Mrs. S. E. Corneaux, who trained the children. This rally closed with a stirring address by our presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker. His praise of the exercises were beautiful and gratifying. His missionary address was about the best one I have ever heard on the subject. It was cram-full of common sense, graphic illustrations, sound logic and Scripture.

The day culminated in a great service Sunday night, at which Brother Tucker preached one of his best sermons. "Ministerial Support" being the theme. No man who heard his strong and convincing arguments could doubt for a moment that "they who preach the gospel should live by the gospel." At the close of the sermon an offering was taken for superannuated preachers.

This closes our second year at Baton Rouge. Both years have not been without their fruits. Last year 77 souls were added to the church, and this year 51 up to date, making a total of 128 in the two years. These people are men of "solid piety," who both know and love the Methodist doctrine. A more spiritual congregation cannot be found in the Louisiana Conference. Our finances as usual will be paid in full. Fraternally. A. I. TOWNSLEY, Pastor.

JACKSON, LA.

Mr. Editor: From Nov. 5 to 11 a meeting was carried on at this place. Rev. A. W. Turner captured this community by his forceful gospel sermons, as did Brother R. N. Jeffrey by his soul-stirring gospel songs. The attendance and interest were better than one could well anticipate just at that time. One afternoon service for children was especially inspiring there being about one hundred present, besides a good number of grown people. One Sunday there were five youthful applicants for church membership.

Both Rev. Mr. Turner and Mr. Jeffery wrought well here. The entire series of meetings was a blessing to us all, for which we thank God.

Fraternally, WM. SCHUHLE.

SILVER CREEK, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: We have seen but little in print as regards the work being done on the charge, for the simple reason that our pastor is down here trying to do, and well nigh succeeding in doing, the work of three men, and has no time to tell about it. Will you listen to me while I tell you of some of the great things done in Zion, away down on this little insignificant (?) work?

The beginning of the year found us in a disorganized condition, part of the charge being taken from Olon Circuit and part from Mt. Carmel Circuit.

The parsonage was located here and early in the year the building was begun. We now have a neat home for Brother Ferguson and his good wife and they seem most contented. The parsonage and its furnishings are valued at about $1400, and when we pay the small debt due on it, and give it a nice coat of paint, Brother and Sister Ferguson will be able to entertain a goodly number of delegates to the District Conference next summer with a good grace.

Our new church here is about completed. This, not including some of the old material used in the new, will cost us about $1400. We hope to have it nicely furnished by the end of another year. There have been 113 accessions to the church throughout the work, forty-six of them here.

Right here let me tell you of the good work done here this past summer by that consecrated man of God, Rev. I. L. Peebles. He conducted our revival services, and never preached a sermon but that was full of Divine power. Our Christian people never had a more spiritual uplift; many sinners were converted. Besides the good influence of his teaching that will abide with us, he left quite a number of his writings in our homes that will prove a power for good. May God bless him!

Our Sunday school, in charge of Brother J. J. Denson, who has been superintendent for so long we have ceased to count the years, is in a flourishing condition. We have a live prayer-meeting that is influencing the lives of our boys, especially, for good; also we have an Epworth League lately organized with forty-five members.

At New Hebron they have a church that was organized at the first of the year, that now has 75 members. They are building a nice, new house of worship. The house and lot will cost $1674, with nearly all the amount paid.

The churches at Hathorn, Oakvale and Bethel are making steady progress. There are the brightest prospects of paying all claims in full. Indeed, much has been accomplished on the work and we give God the glory!

Wherever Brother Ferguson is he will hold his reputation as a conscientious worker in the name of Christ.

FROM EUPORA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Boswell: Maben and Mathiston were struck by a cyclone Saturday, Nov. 17, at 10 o'clock p. m. Both towns were badly demolished. About forty houses of all kinds were wrecked or destroyed at Maben, including our church, which is a total wreck, valued at $2500.

The Methodist church at Mathiston was also wrecked. At Mathiston about thirty houses of all kinds were wrecked, many blown completely away. The escapes were marvelous, only one death so far, others may die. The damage will run close to $100,000. Many people are homeless and in distress. Pray for us.

W. M. JOHNSON.

OUR LAST DAYS.

Dear Advocate: We are now closing a most pleasant four-year stay with the good people of Kosciusko. This is a splendid place for some good man another year. During the four years of our pastorate here 184 have been added to the Church, 67 by profession. We have raised $8,600 for church purposes. The fourth year has been the best. I go to Conference with profound gratitude to God for his goodness to me and mine and for whatever has been accomplished in his name.

Dr. H. A. Jones, Presbyterian Church, has just closed a fine meeting here. He did us splendid service and great good resulted from his work.

The churches here are all in good condition. The Baptists and the Methodists will have new pastors another year, the Baptist pastor having accepted a call to the Greenwood church, and the Methodist pastor—well, his call will come later. Yours truly,

E. S. LEWIS.

Kosciusko, Miss.

If not a change would be beneficial perhaps. A visit to the Southwest will open your eyes. Out in Oklahoma the last big land opening is soon to take place, farms are still very cheap in Western Arkansas, Northern Louisiana and the Gulf Coast of Texas. Mrs. RACHEL HAYS, wife of J. H. Hays, was born March the 1st, 1831, and died September the 12th, 1906, aged 75 years, 6 months, and 12 days. Sister Hays joined the Baptist Church in early life, and remained a faithful member of the same until the day of her death. During the last month of her life she was very feeble and hardly ever able to attend service at her church or with her husband, who is a faithful member, steward and class-leader in the M. E. Church, South. Two or three weeks before her death she attended the class-meeting with her husband, and standing as a witness for Jesus, said: "I will soon cross over the river, and be with Jesus, and I want all of you to go with me." On her deathbed, and just before the end came, she said: "I am going to heaven." Sister Hays leaves a husband, one son, seven grandchildren, and a host of friends to mourn her death. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors." J. B. KING.

Mrs. W. W. HOPPER, wife of Rev. W. W. Hopper, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, now a local preacher and evangelist, died at her home at College Heights, Meridian, Miss., on Wednesday, Oct. 17, 1906. Sister Hopper was sick only a short while, was taken with pneumonia, being in bed only about five days when the summons came. She was carefully attended by her husabnd and kind friends, but it seemed to be God's time for her to be promoted. She was a devout Christian woman, professed the experience of entire sanctification and lived a consistent Christian life. She was not as demonstrative as some people, but was none the less devout and earnest. She was an helpmeet to her husband, and he will greatly miss her companionship. Sister Hopper was formerly Miss Harriet Frankie Renfroe, and was married to Rev. W. W. Hopper at the home of her brother, Mr. Renfroe, in Atlanta, Ga., May 1, 1879. She had no children and was survived by one brother and two sisters, a brother and sister having died during the first part of this year, and she has gone on to join them and wait for the loved ones she has left behind.

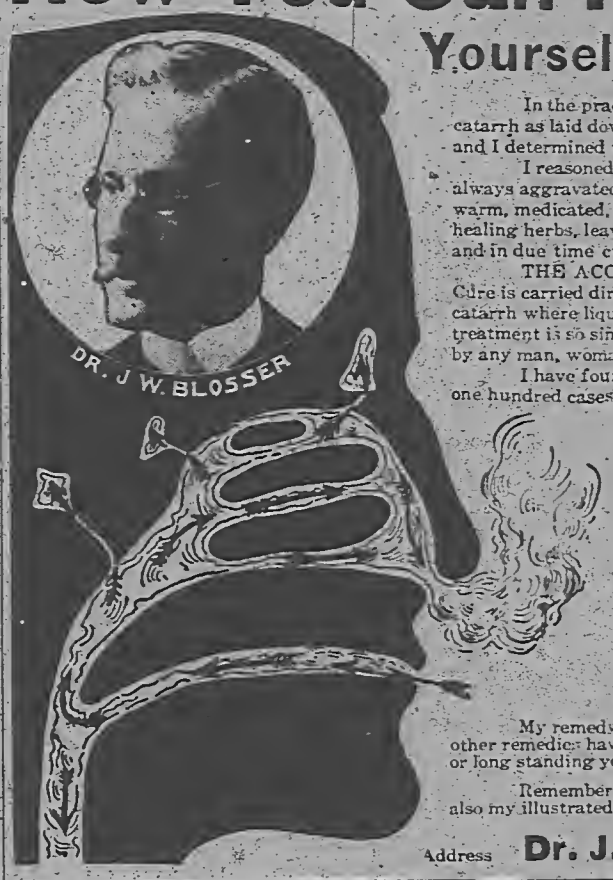
JESUS ON THE CROSS.

Luke xxiii: 33-46.

Golden text: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Luke xxiii: 34.

Pilate had given sentence that it should be as the enemies of Jesus desired. Barabbas was released, but Jesus was given into the hands of the soldiers to be crucified. They had torn the purple robe from his wounded body, and taken the crown of thorns from his bleeding brow. He was clothed again with his own raiment; all had been made ready for the journey to Golgotha. The centurion in front on horseback, the guards following in the form of a hollow square, in the midst of which was the Lord of glory, bearing his heavy cross, followed by the malefactors, condemned as he was, bearing their crosses. The gates were thrown open and the saddest of all processions was at once greeted with the cries and taunts of an impatient multitude. Some among them that followed were moved by compassion; no matter of wonder indeed, for as we view it all, even at this distance, we turn away in shame and despair; shame for humanity and despair that there were none to help, none to aid in this hour when the powers of earth and hell seemed exulting together. Yet, we can rejoice; we see the victory; through this suffering we see the glory that must need follow. No human help was needed by the meek and lowly one now. He may have been even then sustaining himself by the fulfilled words of the Psalmist: "Lo, I come in the volume of the book it is written of me; I delight to do thy will, O my God."

In the great company that followed him, Jesus could heed nothing save the weeping and wailing of the women that lamented him. To them he directed the words: "Weep not for me, daughters of Jerusalem, but weep for yourselves, and for your children." He had wept over Jerusalem, but the time would come when the inhabitants of that city would have cause, not only to weep, but to say to the mountains: "Fall on us," and to the hills: "Cover us." The prophesy of the city's doom is so terrible that the reader of Scripture has difficulty in disconnecting it from the description of the world's great judgment day.



Through the crowded streets they led him, the shops and places of merchandise being closed on this feast day to make a public example, as the custom was. On reaching the gate of the city, it is said, they were met by Simon, a Syrian, coming out of the country. Him they compelled to take the cross and bear it after Jesus. We are not told that Simon was a disciple, but the manner in which his two sons, Alexander and Rufus, were afterwards mentioned, we infer that he was any other than of the class that was then following in the way to Calvary. In mercy to all lovers of Christ the details of the preparation for crucifixion are not related. Matthew and Mark tell us that before the torture of driving the nails, they offered him a mixture prepared as an opiate, but Jesus, after having tasted, refused to drink it. He would not, by the least act, lessen the suffering through which he learned obedience, though he were a son. Hebrews v. 8. The ribald soldiers stripped him of his clothing and wrapped his body in a winding of cloth. In disposing of his garments, even these unfeeling Romans aided in fulfilling Scripture. Psalms xxii-18. After careful study many writers conclude that John was the only disciple of the Lord who was an eye witness to the c- We infer from Luke that the cruel work was done in silence, and as soon as it was complete the voice of the gentle and forgiving Savior was heard in supplicating prayer: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

The suffering of Jesus was indescribable, but he never, for one moment, lost sight of the suffering of others. We are ever mindful that his suffering was for us, that we, through him, should not suffer.

Through the words of the gospel writers we plainly see the pleading face of the penitent thief and hear the words of comfort from the Lord. Even the sun veiled its face from the awful scene. The earth was shaken, and some that were dead arose—and the great veil in the temple was torn from the top to the bottom.

"Truly this was the Son of God," said the captain of the guard; but the better witness of his sonship is his life rather than his death. The best and sweetest of all that picture on Calvary is the love and care for his mother in giving her in charge of the disciple whom he loved, for he knew better than any "that the sword was piercing through Mary's soul."

How You Can Rid Yourself of Catarrh

In the practice of my profession many years ago, I very quickly found out that the treatment of catarrh as laid down in medical books and taught in medical colleges did not give satisfactory results, and I determined to find something better.

I reasoned that as the catarrhal germs enter the nasal passages with the breath, and catarrh is always aggravated by breathing cold and raw air, the most likely cure would be by the inhalation of a warm, medicated, germ-destroying vapor; and after nine years of effort, I at last found a combination of healing herbs, leaves and flowers which, being burned and the warm fumes inhaled, promptly relieved and in due time cured this disease where other remedies had completely failed.

THE ACCOMPANYING ILLUSTRATION shows the route by which the vapor of my Catarrh Cure is carried directly into all the parts that are affected by the disease. It searches out and wipes out catarrh where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly reach it. This treatment is so simple that it can be applied at home, and so harmless that it may safely be employed by any man, woman or child.

I have found in thirty-two years' experience that it cures not less than ninety-five in every one hundred cases, where it is given a fair trial.

Free Trial by Mail

Write me a postal (or letter) and I will send you by mail a liberal trial treatment entirely free. When you try this free sample you will see that the pleasant, warm, medicated vapor goes directly to every spot where the disease might possibly have reached, and when you experience the soothing effect produced you will be convinced that it is the proper and necessary treatment.

If you are afflicted with Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness or other catarrhal troubles, you cannot afford to allow it to run longer, for if you do the probability is that it will either extend to the middle ear destroying the hearing, or else it may spread to the throat and lungs, with fatal results.

My remedy is curing cases of catarrh of the head, nose, middle ear, throat and lungs after various other remedies have failed; therefore, there is every reason for believing it will cure you, however severe or long standing your case may be.

Remember, a postal with your name and address will bring you this free trial treatment, and also my illustrated booklet HOW I CURE CATARRH. Write today, before you forget it.

Little ELLEN MAY, daughter of Wiley G. and Cora Bell, was born Dec. 29, 1903, and left this world for her home with Jesus on the morning of Nov. 18, 1906. In the death of this dear little child many hearts have been made sad and lonely. Those who loved and knew her best feel most deeply that aching void. A loving mother has lost for a while a precious child that was the source of so much comfort and pleasure. O how she will miss the little darling as from day to day she goes about the home, quietly and faithfully performing the queenly functions of wife and mother. Only in loving memory will be the vision of a happy little child welcoming father and uncle as they come home from their business in town. Hushed is that sweet voice that we have listened to with so much delight when she played with brother and sisters, and ran to tell others of her joys. For one so young she was remarkably bright and interesting. It has been my good fortune to live in the home of Brother and Sister Bell for several months, and I feel deeply a personal loss in the death of this little child. She was always so happy and appreciative. She can truly appreciate the joys of heaven, as she did the good things of earth. This is the first time death has visited this lovely home. The most beautiful flower has been taken and transplanted in the garden above. Tho she was here for only a short while, our lives have been enriched by her having lived among us. Some day we will praise God for his matchless wisdom and compassionate love, and know that 'twas best for him to have his way. The one that was so dear to father, mother, brother, sisters, uncles and aunts, and to the writer, awaits with glad anticipation our coming to the Father's home.

OSMOND LEWIS.

Mrs. KATIE HOYTTE (nee Stroton) was born near Springfield, La., July 8, 1876, was married to Samuel A. Hoytte Sept. 26, 1895. To them was born seven children, the eldest being 10 years and the youngest 9 months. At 11 years of age she connected herself with the M. E. Church South, and lived a faithful, consistent member of the same up to her death. She was a devoted wife and mother. Her whole aim in life was to bring her husband and children to Christ. Sister Hoytte had a severe spell of sickness of eight months' duration and at one time her husband and friends thought the end had come. But God, in his mercy, spared her a little longer, and she got up and enjoyed very good health for a month. On Oct. 10, in company with her husband, she attended the Morrell meeting at Springfield, La. She was at the 3 o'clock service, and came back at night and during the altar service was instrumental in bringing several to the altar for prayer, among them her husband, who was soundly converted. She started back the next evening to church, but was taken seriously ill and returned home, and on the 12th of October she quietly passed away. Thus a good woman is gone, but thank God she leaves a beautiful record. Her last work on earth was leading sinners to Christ. Grieve not, dear loved ones, be faithful and you will meet wife and mother, daughter and sister in the sweet by and by.

F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.

Miss FANNIE RUSSELL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. P. Russell, was born Sept. 22, 1888, and died in her home in Rankin County, Miss., Nov. 2, 1906. Her short life of eighteen years was spent in a quiet and consistent way, lending sunshine and gladness to the home. Her noble character and amiable disposition won for her many friends, and the respect of all who knew her. She joined the Forest Hill Methodist Church on July 12, 1904, and her willingness to do and her love for the work promised a life of usefulness and unreserved service to the church. How soon she is taken from us! God said it is enough, and called her unto himself. It is his will, and his will be done, not ours. She leaves a large family of loved ones and a great host of friends to mourn their loss. But we do not mourn as those without hope. There is a vacant chair in the home that can never be filled, but may her loved ones so live that there shall be no vacant chairs in heaven. Her remains were laid away in the Hebron Cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

EVON D. LEWIS.

JOHN W. McKISSACK was born in Henry Co., Ala., Oct. 10, 1826. Died at the home of his son, C. C. McKissack, Ellisville, Miss., Oct. 11, 1906, aged 80 years and a day. Brother McKissack professed religion at the age of eighteen and united with the Methodist Church, in which he remained a faithful and consistent member till the day of his death. He was married in Barbour County, Ala., Dec. 25, 1849, to Miss Eliza Shanks, daughter of the Rev. James Shanks, late of the Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South. He is survived by six children, four sons and two daughters, his wife having preceded him to the better land by 22 years. He lived in Clark County, Miss., since 1872, near Barnett, up until three months before his death. He served with distinction for three years in the Confederate army. He never doubted his conversion, his life was upright and respected by all who knew him. "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

W. J. DAWSON.

Mrs. MAGGIE CONNERLY (nee Ratliff) was born May 8, 1875, near China Grove church. Her parents were people of high Christian character, not neglecting their duty toward their children, and it was as it should have been, that they grew up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Sister Maggie joined the Methodist Church when 12 years of age at old China Grove Camp Ground, and her life was ever afterward characterized by a sweet Christian spirit. She was married to Mr. Baxter Connerly, Sept. 22, 1898, with whom she lived happily until her death, which sad event occurred Oct. 29, 1906. Besides her husband she leaves three little children, one of them a little infant only a few weeks old, her aged parents and brothers and sisters. They mourn for her, but not as those who have no hope, for they expect to meet her in heaven. It is a happy thought for us that Christians are not separated forever, but that we shall be united again. We go in mourning here, but "we shall be satisfied when we awake in his likeness." So let us thank God for the Christian hope and take courage. May God comfort the sorrowing ones. Her pastor,

F. WILLIAMS.

MALTHUS JARVIS DURHAM was born in Holmes County, Miss., Oct. 8, 1881, and died at Parchman, Miss., Nov. 11, 1906, his mother having, by a notable coincidence, preceded him into the better land by precisely twenty-two years to a day. In September of this year he was soundly converted, and united with the Methodist Church at his home in Sturgis, Miss., and thereafter exemplified the life hid with Christ. A faithful, dutiful, honorable youth, he had earned the respect of all who know him, and enjoyed a host of friends, as was evidenced by the large concourse which followed his remains to the grave. An earnest, trustful, zealous Christian, of rare sweetness and purity of thought and life, he leaves us every assurance of his salvation, and we sorrow as those without hope. May God comfort the bereaved!

COPPER IS KING

THOS W. LAWSON	JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER	H. H. ROGERS	SENATOR CLARK.
Says: "Copper stocks offer the biggest opportunity for money making in the world today."	Says nothing but puts millions of dollars into Amalgamated and other Copper stocks.	Says: "Lawson, we have verified your conclusions as to the value of Copper stocks as an investment."	Does not talk but draws $6,000,000 a year in dividends from one Copper mine, the United Verde.

The world's greatest financiers have seen the possibilities of Copper; they are pouring their millions into Copper Stocks; they are piling up their dollars mountain high with dividends from Copper Stocks; gold mines no longer interest them; the cry is—"Copper!"

Copper is the Safest--the Most Profitable--the Most Permanent Investment in the World Today

COPPER IS A SAFE INVESTMENT

The uses of Copper are extending every year. The demand is far ahead of the supply. All the present production of Copper in the world cannot supply the demands of electricity alone. All scientists agree that we are just beginning to learn the uses of electricity. As these uses multiply, so will the demands for Copper increase. The price is steadily going up. In the last few years it has risen from 11c to 15c a pound.

Thomas W. Lawson says: "A good Copper mine is really a safe-deposit vault of stored up dividends which cannot be stolen or destroyed by fire, flood or famine."

The Copper Mine is the Mine of To-Day.

COPPER IS A PERMANENT INVESTMENT

No man can tell how long a Copper mine will last because no man has ever seen one exhausted. The Rio Tinto mines in Spain have been worked for over two thousand years, and last year they were the third largest producer in the world. The Mansfield mines in Germany have been worked for 700 years and last year they were the sixth largest producer. Copper was discovered in this country in 1845, and in the Lake Superior district the levels are a mile below the lake, yet last year they produced more Copper than ever before in their history. The famous Anaconda mine is steadily increasing its production. The United Verde in Arizona is turning out more and more Copper every year. No real Copper mine in this country has yet been exhausted.

COPPER IS A PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

One Copper mine that cost $1,200,000 paid in one year ten million dollars in dividends, while four of the largest Western trunk line railroads, with 17,000 miles of track, paid only $9,750,000 dividends. Thirty-two of the leading Copper mines in this country on a paid-in capital of $80,000,000 have paid over $220,000,000 in dividends, while no railroad in the United States has ever paid back its original cost.

The Steel Trust, with a capitalization of $1,400,000,000, earned only $24,000,000 profit last year.

Of the seven largest dividend-paying mines in the United States today, six are Copper mines.

No wonder the shrewd investors are rushing for good Copper stocks.

Investment in Copper Stocks Offers the Safety of a Government Bond with the Speculative Element of a Gold Mine.

OUR PROPERTY IS FAVORABLY LOCATED IN THE HEART OF A GREAT COPPER DISTRICT.

The Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company's property is located in Yavapai County fifty miles southeast of Prescott and twenty-four miles South of Jerome, Arizona, and in the same range with the great United Verde mine, which has paid over $18,000,000 in dividends to its stockholders. The Crown King mine, a great producer, just West, has produced hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Richenbar, which pays good dividends, is near us. North, South and West of our property, are located mines of unlimited value, as well as the smelter plants to handle their output. At umbolt and Mayer are located three independent smelters, with a capacity to handle the entire output of the district. Cordes, our railroad station, is but 20 miles west of us, and it is from that point, when connected by the completion of a good wagon road, we will deliver our output and receive freight.

We have 280 acres with copper ore sticking out on every claim, and a 10-foot shaft has been sunk on Copper lodes on each claim. All this shows the presence of an enormous Copper deposit. In short, beyond the possibility of a doubt, there is Copper ore on the Company's land sufficient to keep an enormous plant running for generations to come. We do not believe there is any such showing of Copper as this property and this district exhibit anywhere else on the American continent. The great United Verde, the mine of Senator Clark, is some 24 miles North of us and in the same range; its main workings consist of only 40 acres; it did not begin to have the surface showing our property has; and it is turning out over 3,000,000 pounds of copper a month.

More than that—Copper Creek, the greatest unfailing water supply in the district, runs through our property for 1800 feet, and as water is absolutely essential, its value cannot be estimated.

We offer you a ground-floor proposition. With the ore actually exposed we can run a concentrator of 300 tons capacity as quickly as it can be erected, for an indefinite period. Unless every geological sign fails, within two years, with ample capital, we should be mining ore enough to supply a 5000-ton concentrator for generations.

We have had assays from four of these ledges with the following results of pure copper: 14 4-10 per cent, 17 7-10 per cent, 22 1-10 per cent, 30 6-10 per cent.

These were selected samples, and we are frank to say that no such ore exists in the deep workings of copper mines. On the property adjoining, however, on a vein which is traceable in ours, at a depth of 97 feet, ore was taken out which cannot be distinguished from the ore at the 400 and 500 feet levels in the United Verde Copper mine, which runs 6 per cent in Copper. This is above the average of the ore of the world's greatest producers, the famous Anaconda producing ore which averages only a little over 3 per cent.

300 tons daily of 6 per cent ore will produce $6,120.00 per day net profit, but our intention is to erect a concentrator of 1000 tons capacity. Such a plant would produce a daily profit of over $20,000, a yearly profit of over $7,500,000!

This will give you dividends on your stock of 500 per cent on your investment.

Think of it! 5 times your money back in each year! Does this startle you? Our neighbor, Senator Clark, is clearing over $6,000,000 each year, working 40 acres, 24 miles away, right on the same range.

Dividend paying Copper stock sells on the market at about 10 times the amount it pays in yearly dividends. This stock, therefore, on the above estimate, which you can get today at ONLY 15 CENTS A SHARE, should sell on the market at about $7.50 a share—at 50 times what you can buy it for today.

$45 invested now would be worth 2,250
$90 invested now would be worth 4,500
$300 invested now would be worth 15,000
$600 invested now would be worth 30,000
$1,200 invested now would be worth 60,000

Do these figures startle you? Read history.

$100 invested in Greene Consolidated in 1901 is now worth $8,700.
$100 invested in United Verde in 1897 is now worth $30,000.
$100 invested in Wolverine in 1893 is now worth $5,000.
$100 invested in Calumet and Pittsburg in 1903 is now worth $5,000.
$100 invested in Calumet and Arizona in 1902 is now worth $10,000.

ARIZINA LEADS THE WORLD IN COPPER MINES.

Beyond a doubt, Arizona has underneath her soil larger, richer deposits of Copper than any other section of the world. The ancient Spaniards and the Indians were known to mine the metal, while there is evidence that prehistoric races knew how to utilize Copper, and in their crude way mined and smelted it.

Today this territory is dotted here and there with working mines which produce millions upon millions of dollars worth of Copper, and in many places prospecting has revealed many more veins which are still undeveloped. At some points the ore crops out at the roots of the grass, widening out as it goes downward.

The mountains and valleys of this district are underlaid with such a wealth of Copper ore as exists nowhere else in the world.

OUR BIG ADVANTAGES OVER OTHER GREAT COPPER MINES.

All the large copper mines that we have quoted have had to expend from one to four million dollars in smelting plants. There are THREE large independent smelters within hauling distance of our property, obviating all necessity on our part of this tremendous outlay of money. Therefore, all we need to do is to concentrate our ore, an inexpensive process, haul the concentrates to the smelter, and there receive our money. This puts us practically in the same position that these other large Copper mines attained only after the expenditure of millions.

Remember this company OWNS ALL OF ITS PROPERTY, free and clear; IT DOES NOT OWE A CENT.

The stock is non-assessable and full paid. There is no preferred stock or bonds. All stock shares alike.

No salaried officers until dividends are paid.

The officers and board of directors of the Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Co. are all thorough business men, which guarantees a square deal. Their rugged honesty stands as a sure protection to your interests.

Price of Stock Now 15c a Share---Par Value $1.00

The executive and finance committee of the Consolidated Copper Mining Company has authorized the sale of a limited amount of treasury stock at 15c a share. Par value of this stock is $1.00 a share, and we believe that within one year it will be worth a dollar a share on the markets of the world; nor will it stop there. A good Copper stock will rise and rise till the owners become dizzy; there seems hardly any limit to its valuation. As our shafts go down, this stock will go up in value. We, therefore, reserve the right to advance the price without notice. If you are wise, buy stock now and thus secure the benefit of the future advances in price.

Why We Sell Stock

We have a great property, but we need money to develop it. If a farmer owned a quarter section of land and had only a spade to cultivate it with, it would take years of toil for him to get money enough to buy proper machinery to work it to advantage. So it is with a mine. If we went to a capitalist he would demand the lion's share; but we believe the American people will be glad to come in with us and help us to make this property the greatest Copper mine on the continent. So we go to YOU, relying on your judgment and sound common sense, and ask YOU to join with us, man to man, share and share alike, in this great enterprise. With YOUR aid we should make a second United Verde of this property. With unity there is hardly any limit to what can be accomplished. The day will come when you will be proud to be a stockholder in the Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company.

WRITE TODAY—OR, BETTER, TELEGRAPH—ORDERING NUMBER OF SHARES YOU DESIRE.

At the rate subscriptions are coming in the present allotment will not last long. The price will then advance, and its rise should be rapid and permanent. No order will be received for less than 100 shares. Should you at any time desire to discontinue payments on your stock, the Company will issue a certificate for the amount you have paid in.

If you wish any further information fill out the coupon opposite and we will gladly furnish you with full particulars, assay certificates, samples of ore, etc.

The Philadelphia Record has this to say concerning the fearful famine prevailing in Russia: "Nearly 30,000,000 people in Russia are doomed to starvation this winter. The government hasn't money to do much, and relief funds are habitually stolen. The famine is described as more terrible than the memorable famine following the crop failure of 1891. The Russians are supine and fatalistic. But men may die by bullets with less discomfort than by hunger, and a starving population may resort to violence in an effort to get a little food, or to give vent to its wrath. There may be only silent suffering and there may be a duplicate of the French revolution. The Russian peasant is little known in the west."

Never since we can remember have we seen or heard of so much satisfaction over the result of an election as followed the defeat of Mr. Hearst for governor of New York. Prominent men, among them some of the very best men of the country, are rejoicing as though the country had escaped a real calamity. The rejoicing is not confined to one party—it is with Democrats and Republicans alike. We are not sufficiently acquainted with the particulars of Mr. Hearst's political platform to express an opinion. He was at the head of the Independence League, was nominated by it for governor, and was endorsed by the Democrats, as we thought, simply because they thought he could beat the Republicans — about which they were mistaken as shown by the fact that he was the only man on his ticket that was beaten. He was taken up by Tammany Hall and voted for, but since the election he has been repudiated by the Tammany boss. Mr. Hearst owns several daily papers—all of them being classed as "yellow journals." This fact alone has excited our prejudices against him for years past. It may be the country has escaped a real peril.

The negroes, and many white people, are much agitated over the order of President Roosevelt in dismissing three companies of the 25th Regiment (colored) from the army. They have made a great outcry, and sent in many protests against the President's action, and for once Genl. Taft, generally so cool and level-headed, was thrown off his base, and yielded to the entreaties of the negroes so far as to suspend the President's order until he could be communicated with. Dispatches were sent informing him of the situation, but they did not effect any change in the President's purpose. He proposed to stand by his original order, unless new facts could be presented. Mr. Roosevelt had tried hard to locate the persons who were guilty of rioting and murder at Brownsville, Texas, but he failed, the soldiers with one consent affirming innocence and ignorance. It seemed hard to make the innocent suffer with the guilty, but the soldiers, by protecting their guilty comrades, became virtual participants in the crime, and there was no other way to punish them than by dismissing them in disgrace. The President's order was carried out. The three companies have been dismissed, and if anything more is done the friends of the troops will have to show new proof, else surrender the guilty negroes.

Mr. Tillman, senator from South Carolina, was booked to deliver an address before a charitable organization in Chicago on the evening of Nov. 27, his subject being "The Annexation of Cuba." When the announcement was made many of the leading negroes of Chicago arose in anger, and besieged Mayor Dunne to issue an order prohibiting the Senator from speaking. Mr. Dunne assured the negroes that he could not prohibit the speaking, but would endeavor to prevail on the Senator to refrain from discussing the race question. It was intimated, too, that Mr. Tillman would meet with personal violence if he ventured to come into the city. But the senator remained unmoved. He did not fear violence, and declared he could not discuss the Cuban question without discussing the race problem. But Mr. Dunne took fright, and notified the ladies who had charge of the organization that he could not preside at the lecture, as he had promised. It is thus seen that the negroes have gotten so far along that they propose to control in public speaking—if not to tell men what they may discuss, to tell them, at least, what they shall not. It is a blow at free speech, which right thinking men properly condemn. If the negroes do not desire to hear Mr. Tillman talk, they have but to remain away from the lecture hall.

Our country seems to be regarded as good soil in which to plant the seeds of anarchy. At any rate they are planted, and some take root. The latest effort in this direction, though possibly not so intended, was put forth by the wife of a Congressman. She has published a book which deals somewhat with "family relations." She is quoted as saying: "It would, therefore, seem well, from this point of view, to encourage early trial marriage, the relation to be entered into with a view to permanency, but with the privilege of breaking it if proved unsuccessful, and in the absence of offspring, without suffering any great degree of public condemnation." This is evidently a blow at family life, as we have it in this good land, and as we believe it is ordained of God. Anything that strikes at the family, at the same time strikes at the life of the State, for without the family no state or civilization can exist. We wonder if this woman's husband does not sometimes suspect that, were it not for the laws of the land and "public condemnation," she would leave him to live with some other man. If she has been a wife many years, and has lived happily, we cannot understand how she could consent to put forth such strange and ungodly notions. And the volume was written with a view to making it a "college text-book for sociological students interested in the subject of marriage, the family and parenthood." But what college in the United States would adopt it?

Mr. John Sharp Williams, the brilliant Mississippi congressman, delivered a notable speech last week to the citizens of his state. He reviewed at large the "race problem" now before the country. In the discussion he boldly opposed the proposition, now and then hinted at, to repeal the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, which gave the negro citizenship and suffrage. The repeal of these amendments is a pet idea with Senator Tillman of South Carolina, though he has not ventured to introduce a resolution to that end in Congress. Mr. Williams is quite as much Southern in his feelings and views as any man in the South, but he sees, and honestly tells the people, that the thing is impossible. Less than one-third of the population of the country is in the South, and considerably less than one-third are white. The South has less than one-third of the representatives in the Senate and lower house of Congress, and Mr. Williams says the man is blind or has his head above the clouds who believes that two-thirds of the members of Congress and three-fourths of the States can be induced to vote for the repeal of the amendments. He does not believe that it would be wise to agitate the country on the subject. He had rather endure the ills than have them fly to worse. In these things we fully agree with Mr. Williams.

REPORT OF INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

The committee of investigation in the case of Rev. C. C. Miller, president of Centenary College, who was under report of unbecoming conduct, to-wit: fighting, met in the parsonage at Jackson, La., on Nov. 28. The committee was composed of Revs. P. H. Fontain, of Wilson; E. K. Means, of Baton Rouge, and W. D. Kleinschmidt, of St. Francisville, with Rev. R. W. Tucker, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, presiding, and Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Clinton, acting as secretary. After a thorough investigation a ballot was cast at 1 a. m., on the 29th, and the unanimous verdict was, "no trial necessary."

R. W. TUCKER, Chairman,
W. H. COLEMAN, Secty.

THAT HONOR ROLL AGAIN.

The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of Nov. 22 contains an article by Rev. J. L. Peebles, headed, "Who Is Worthy of Honor?" in which he unfairly intimates and insinuates that the pastors of the Mississippi Conference, who have brought up their missionary assessments in full before the close of the Conference year, and whose appointments have been registered on a "Missionary Honor Roll," stand guilty of discriminating against the other Conference assessments, and consequently of being undeserving of honor. The conclusion any fair-minded reader would naturally draw from Bro. Peebles' article is that some of the brethren who have reported their missionary collections in full have neglected, or are neglecting, other claims. If the charges be true, some of us pastors who labored diligently to raise our missionary assessments early in the year ought to hang our heads in shame. But what are the real facts in the case? Is it true that success in raising missionary funds involves culpable neglect of other collections? While exact information for the current year from other districts is not at hand, it is noteworthy that in the Seashore District in every instance those pastoral charges which have brought up their missionary assessments have also paid every other claim.

For several years our missionary secretaries at Nashville have urged the importance of early collections, and have stated that the interest every year on money which has to be borrowed till the collections come in would support an additional missionary in the foreign field. It is to be regretted that some of our leading stations rarely pay up their missionary assessments till the end of the year. In view of all the facts in the case, it is to be thought illegal and criminal to give honorable mention to certain appointments which have responded promptly and liberally to the call of the church for funds for the evangelization of the world? I trow not. The Conference resolution quoted by Bro. Peebles applies only to what are called "lump collections," and has no force in other cases. This scribe has always pursued the plan of taking his missionary collections separate from the others, nor has he ever been guilty of discriminating against other claims.

The reports for last year, as published in our Conference Minutes, make the following revelation: One hundred and twenty pastoral charges out of a total of one hundred and forty-eight paid their missionary assessments in full. Of the said one hundred and twenty, entitled to the said one hundred and twenty, entitled to honorable mention, only sixteen were delinquent in any wise on their other Conference assessments. In eight charges of the said delinquent sixteen, the deficit on all the claims did not exceed five dollars! In three other charges of the delinquent sixteen, the total defeat was less than twelve dollars! Thus in only five instances of the sixteen is there anything like an unfair discrimination against the other assessments, and in favor of missions. But it is possible that in these instances the brethren presented certain claims on their merits, with the result indicated.

The twenty-eight pastoral charges that were delinquent last year on their missionary assessments were badly delinquent also on the other assessments. One hundred and four of the one hundred and twenty charges that paid in full on missions last year brought up every other claim in full and over! It is also noticeable that the sixteen charges that paid up on missions, but which were delinquent on other claims, made a better showing on all their assessments than the twenty-eight charges that fell behind on missions! Hence nothing is plainer than that quickened interest in missions usually means success in every other direction. The pastor who pushes the cause of missions is the one most likely to bring up every other claim in full. No doubt it is impossible in some instances to bring up full collections, and no man is more ready than is this scribe to accord all honor to the man who does his best.

It is not within the province of the Conference Missionary Secretary to publish reports regarding other collections. That is the prerogative of other secretaries, not his. Other Conferences, notably the Holston, have for a number of years, followed the plan of publishing in a classified list the names of the charges paying in full on missions. Hence this secretary is not acting without precedent.

M. M. BLACK,
Conf. Missionary Secy.

LETTER FROM GIDEROY.

A Chinaman living in Lula, Lonjohn, always contributes to missions, and says, "I am glad to do this, for a good work has been done and is being done by the Christians among my people in China." Lonjohn is not a Christian, but he seems to have a great admiration for Christianity and for the Christian civilization of this country. He takes a paper printed in Chinese, and he tries to keep abreast of the times. In the last few days he has installed a phonograph that grinds out songs and speeches in the Chinese language. I am not much edified by them.

Some Greeks living here, Marco and Compos, have a fair knowledge of the Scriptures, the Ten Commandments and of the New Testament, of Christ and the Apostles. They are not religious only in a minor key, and yet they regard themselves as very religious. They have been pretty well instructed in the tenets of the Greek Catholic Church. Anyway, they are in a better condition to understand our Protestant Christianity than raw heathen from any other land. They know some truth, and some truth is better than no truth. Of course, preconceived opinion and national and denominational prejudices are greatly in their way.

I have not as yet gotten on talking terms with the Italians. I know nothing of their language and they know little of ours save the terms of traffic and trade. I suppose they are Roman Catholics and have some knowledge of God and of Christ, and of God's method of saving souls. I have an idea that the Holy Ghost has a constant and careful watch-care over the smallest seeds of divine truth. The samples of Christians seen in daily life by these foreigners are not calculated to increase their respect for our form of Christianity. They are inclined to judge us by what we do, and not by what we say, by the lives we live, and not by the professions we make. "A tree is known by its fruit." The only way our faith can be exhibited to the world is by our works. Men cannot see our faith, but they can see our works.

This great influx of foreigners from almost every country on the face of the globe into our Southland entails a fearful responsibility upon our churches. If we are to Christianize this great mass, we ought to do it as they come in. We need to be up and doing. The time is not far off when eastern Catholic churches and western Catholic churches and heathen and pagan temples will dot our fair Southland all over. We will be a Christian nation only by a stretch of poetic license. Yours,

LILA, Miss.

PREVAILING PRAYER.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." These are the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, who spake as never man spake, and it was reserved for him to teach us to say our Father. The Old Testament prophets knew nothing about the real Fatherhood God. Jesus opened the gate and made the way clear. In writing on this subject there are a few principles that I want to notice.

First—The form of prayer is no more prayer than the form of check is the cash.

Second—No one has a right to say that I have really prayed without obtaining an answer, or the assurance that the prayer was heard.

Third—Prayer was ordained of God himself in order that we might have sweet communion with him, and get the things that he alone can supply.

(1) When we pray we must approach God with a clean heart. The Psalmist tells us in the Psalm lxvi: 18: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." Again in Isaiah lix:1-2, we have a very plain statement: "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear. But your iniquities have separated between you and your God and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." We see from the foregoing Scriptures, as well as many other passages, we must approach God with a conscience void of offense toward God and man. If we regard sin of any kind in our hearts we may rest assured that God will not hear us when we try to pray. Therefore, we must divest ourselves of everything that would prevent us from having real communion with God.

(2) We must approach God with a believing heart. St. Paul tells in Heb. xi: 6, that "without faith it is impossible to please God," and says when we come to him we must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." And, again, the same writer tells us, Romans xiv: 23, that, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." We must take God at his word, and remember that it is impossible for him to lie. We are told again, "All things are possible to them that believe." "Faith is the victory that overcometh the world, that laughs at impossibilities and says 'it shall be done'"—yea, that reaches the great throbbing heart of God, and brings the blessings that we so much need and desire.

(3) We must approach God in the name of Jesus Christ. That name that is above every name. The mighty name of Jesus, the mediator between God and men, who ever liveth to make intercession for us.

There is a great deal in the name that we pray in. To illustrate, suppose I give my check to Brother A. for $1000 on the First National Bank in New Orleans. He presents the check and the cashier says: "My friend, I would like very much to accommodate you, but it is impossible from the fact that the giver of this check is a perfect stranger to me, and in the next place he has no money in the bank." Brother A. returns to me with the check unpaid, and says: "The bank refused to cash this check." And so we go to Brother B., who has a controlling interest in the First National Bank, and he takes the same check and simply erases my name and signs his, without changing the form or amount, and goes back to the bank and presents the same check, only in a different name, and the cashier says, "just endorse it," and he endorses it and the cashier counts him out dollar for dollar. Why this difference and discrimination between my check and Brother B's? Because B. has a controlling interest in the bank, and I haven't. That is all. Just so. Jesus said: "All power is given me in heaven and earth. Therefore, whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye ask anything in my name, I will do it." John xiv: 1-3-14. There is power in the name of Jesus. Before it the devils quake and tremble, and angels veil their faces. Here are three steps in prevailing prayer: 1. To approach God with a clean heart. 2. To approach God with a believing heart. 3. To approach him in the name of Jesus. Make these three steps and hold on without giving up and your prayer shall be answered. Pray on, believe on, hold on and thou will know that the open text is true. Yours to serve,

TO THE BRETHREN OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At the coming session of our Conference I will propose for adoption the following:

Resolved, That in order to secure a just and equitable apportionment of the assessments ordered by the Conference to the several districts, the secretary of the "Joint Board of Finance," the secretary of the "Board of Missions," the secretary of the "Board of Church Extension," the secretary of the "Board of Education," and the secretary of the "Bible Society Board" shall together constitute the "Board of Apportionment" for the North Mississippi Conference, and shall at each annual session of the Conference meet together and proceed to fix a ratio for the apportionment among the several districts of the general connectional assessments and the assessments ordered by the Conference. Such ratios shall be determined in the following manner: An apportionment shall be made according to the number of members in the several districts, and another according to the amounts contributed therein during the preceding year for the support of the presiding elders and preachers-in-charge, not counting missionary collection, or appropriations.

The average of the two fractions thus obtained, for any district, shall constitute the fractional part of each of the several assessments upon the Conference at large to be apportioned to such district.

The board shall take into consideration any changes that may have taken place in district boundaries, and adjust the ratios according to statistical returns from the territory effected by such changes.

This resolution calling for a Board of Apportionment is simply an adaptation of the law in the Discipline, paragraph 423, with regard to the Board of Apportionment, authorized by the General Conference. Surely, we need some basis upon which to distribute the assessments, which shall be at once just and equitable, and fair to all. Respectfully submitted,

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

By Prof. J. E. Walmsley.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new Carnegie-Millsaps Library. Mr. J. F. Barnes, the contractor has made the excavation for the foundation and basement, and material is on hand for foundation. Gray sandstone and St. Louis brick for the body of the building has not arrived yet, but it will not be long before the edifice will take shape. The general style will be on the French Rennaissance, and it is considered one of the most perfect pieces of architectural work in the south.

The students are delighted at Bishop Galloway's recovery from his recent illness. The first visit which he made after his release from his room was to the College, and he was given an enthusiastic welcome by the student body and visitors present. The College considers the Bishop as, in a certain sense, its own peculiar property, and he is coming to his own when he visits us.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City, Mo., was present recently at the chapel exercises, and gave an inspiring and helpful talk on the "Ideals of a College Man." Bishop Hendrix is a college man by nature as well as by training, and he at once won the hearts of all his hearers. The boys are hoping that he will soon find it is his line of work to visit Jackson again.

Rev. Paul B. Kern, of Nashville, Tenn., has accepted an invitation from the Lamar Literary Society to deliver its Anniversary address in April. Mr. Kern is no stranger to the students at Millsaps, as he conducted the Y. M. C. A. revival exercises last spring, and made many warm friends among both students and faculty. He is a brother of Prof. A. A. Kern, who is now studying at the Johns Hopkins University.

The beautiful fall weather has inspired an enthusiastic interest in athletics on the College campus, and the gymnasium and athletic field are liberally patronized each evening. Prof. Walmsley has offered a silver loving cup to the class making the best record in athletics, and great interest is manifested in the contest.

A joint debate has been arranged to take place in Greensboro, Ala., in March, between representatives of Millsaps College and Southern University. Messrs. W. A. Williams and C. C. Applewhite will represent Millsaps College. The subject for debate is the proposed annexation of Cuba.

An open session of the Millsaps Auxiliary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held in the chapel last Sunday night, and was a thoroughly enjoyable occasion. An attractive musical programme was arranged, and after the objects of the auxiliary had been stated, a free will offering was made by the audience to forward the work of this noble band of women.

Several new students have come in recently and the enrollment is nearly 300 now. A large increase is expected after Christmas, with the opening of the second term.

URGENT APPEAL FOR HELP.

To our Methodist People of Mississippi:

You have learned through the Memphis Appeal of the havoc wrought by the cyclone on the 17th inst., in and around Mathiston, Miss. There is actual distress. Two widows suffered severely. Most of the Methodist homes are either totally destroyed or wrecked. Our church-house is not a total wreck. Estimates to repair the church-house are one hundred dollars. Brother E. M. Lipscomb was here and knows the situation.

This is the only church-house in the town, and we very much need help to replace it. Contributions may be sent to Rev. T. J. Hopper, pastor, or Rev. B. P. Patterson.

Signed:

B. P. Patterson.
T. J. Hopper.

Dear Dr. Boswell: The above note of distress from Brother Patterson will explain itself. All our people know something of the ruin of Mathiston by the cyclone on the night of Nov. 17. But I have seen no account of it in any of the daily papers which would begin to give an adequate idea of the havoc and ruin actually wrought. The accounts in the papers have been meagre, indeed. I was in the storm, and saw it fully next morning in all its desolation. The people mangled and bruised and suffering, the houses wrecked and leveled to the ground, and many of them blown into fragments, and some swept away to the foundation stone.

The people need help. They are suffering now, and many of them will suffer severely till help comes. The situation can be relieved if those who were spared and blessed with plenty will lend a helping hand. Let all who will do so, do so speedily. Send funds to persons above suggested. Yours in behalf of the sufferers,

S. M. Lipscomb,
Presiding Elder, Columbus District.
Mathiston, Miss.

P. S.—Let moneys sent on church go to Rev. B. P. Patterson; money sent sufferers, to M. Hickey, mayor, Mathiston, Miss.

MRS. M. LUCILLA WEBB.

I have known this good woman since 1894—was her pastor from 1894 to 1898—and she was a true Christian friend all the time. On my coming to Birmingham she gave to my family and me a refined and delicate token of her regard. The evening we came we found at the home a gathering of kindly people. She was at her old family home, Greensboro, Ala., but she had sent for the evening a box of the sweetest, richest Southern flowers, with a word of welcome. We did not meet her for weeks, but we counted her a real friend.

She had a great capacity for friendship—was born, like a brother, for adversity. That is the highest of the virtues. We may hold all the sacred relatives, and yet be without true love. But to be a true friend we must have love, and that carries all. Not every one knows how to be friendly in the best sense; she did. Her hands were extended and open, her heart, like the Joseph-vine, ran over the wall. The center of her life was without herself, and it extended far. Any who needed the ministry of her hand and the sympathy of her heart were sure to share them, if they were within her reach. There was no congestion in her beneficence; no determination of its offices within a narrow bound. She was a blessing wherever she went.

She was a friend to the church. Her Christian spirit was broadly catholic. It was not a narrow bigotry which bound her to the Methodist Church, though she was quite pronounced in her devotion to it as the church of her fathers. It was not a mere condition of salvation to her, nor a mere convenience for Christian association. It meant vastly more—the place where God's honor dwelt, the association of those who looked and longed for and hastened the coming of the Lord. She was devoted to its institutions, its services and its work because they were for him whom she loved. She ever commended the church by her connection with it.

She was the friend of God. This accounts for all the rest of her friendships. That was the inner life of which they were the expressions. This friendship with God is the supreme virtue of human life. We often think that the supreme good is the friendship of God; but this is unspeakably more. God's friendship is that which makes any good possible to us. Aside from this, men can neither have good nor be good. But that does not necessarily mean character to us; for God's friendship is absolutely independent of moral character. He is the friend of the unjust as well as the just, of the wicked and of the unworthy as well as the good. But to be the friend of God means high character. Only the pure in heart—those who return the love of God with the love of their hearts and the devotion of their lives—can be the friends of God. This was the highest praise ever given to any man, that which God gave to Abraham, "my friend."

It seems strange to say that God needs friends among men, and yet he does. He created men in his own likeness that they might be his friends to whom he could communicate himself, and upon whom he might bestow the riches of his inheritance. And everywhere, and all the time, he is seeking for men of heart upon whom he may rely and to whom he may commit the great work of his kingdom.

Such was this choice woman. She was ever on God's side; she walked with God; she worked for God. Her life was hid in God, and she is not, for God took her.

It seems a strange providence that she should be taken from the companion who loved her so well, and needed her so much; but these words come to assure our hearts,—the words of Jesus—"What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt understand hereafter." Let us patiently wait.

James C. Morris.

REV. N. B. HARMON TRANSFERRED.

Dear Brother Boswell: Yes it is really and truly our good brother, Rev. N. B. Harmon, of the Mississippi Conference, whose name you found in the appointments of the West Texas Conference. He was transferred by Bishop Ward and stationed by Bishop Morrison at Prospect Hill, San Antonio, Texas.

Brother Harmon has suffered greatly this year from a severe bronchial trouble, and his physicians advised him to seek relief in a dry and pure atmosphere. This is the sole cause of Brother Harmon's leaving the Mississippi Conference. He regretfully leaves us. I held his quarterly conference last night, and found everything in fine condition. He has built a magnificent new church, and largely increased the membership during his three years of pastoral service at Centenary. We shall miss Brother Harmon in our Conference sessions, and in our work. He is a noble spirit, and an untiring and successful worker. May journeying and abiding mercies be vouchsafed him and his good family. Your brother, T. W. ADAMS.

AMORY AND NETTLETON.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I am winding up one of the most successful year's work of my life. Amory and Nettleton, two live, growing towns, twelve miles apart on the Frisco Railroad, make a most delightful charge. Nettleton gets fourth and fifth Sundays. Here Brothers Barnes and Johnston live. These brethren are in sympathy with the pastor, and are eminently useful. Here we have one of the finest graded schools in all the country. Our parsonage is at Amory, the town of many artesian wells, and a good strong membership, fast pushing to the front. It was assessed for preacher last year $800 and paid it; this year assessed $1000, and will more than pay it. All collections are paid and more; treasurers of boards have my check for same. I have made twenty-five reports and have never reported less than assessments. I have received forty-one into the church this year. I have not done so much for the ADVOCATE as I hope to do next year. The preacher who is fortunate enough to secure this charge next year will have a royal and loyal people, and can expect a $1200 salary. Very truly your brother, W. S. SITTMAN.

THE QUIET HOUR LEAGUE.

I am impressed with the proposition that comes to us from the representatives of the several connectional activities of our Church to form the Quiet Hour League for the purpose of encouraging the devotional study of the Bible, enlarging the Church's vision of the needs of the world, inspiring personal and intercessory prayer, and stimulating individual effort for the advancement of the kingdom of God. All this means the quickening of the spiritual life of the Church, a result devoutly to be wished.

It has been noticed that the adoption of the tithe system in paying what we owe to God generally results in increased prosperity in our worldly business. This may be accounted for in part by the fact that it introduces system into our financial affairs, for system is an element of success in our worldly interests. It is also an element of success in our spiritual life. A time to study the Word of God, and to pray in secret—a quiet hour—rigidly followed, will most surely promote our spiritual growth and result in a deeper work of grace.

But first of all there should be a deepening of the spiritual life of our preachers. At the close of our great missionary conference in New Orleans a few years ago one of our Bishops, a godly man, proclaimed his purpose to devote more of his time to secret prayer, and to the devotional study of the Scriptures than he had done before. To my heart it was a thrilling announcement, in the presence of the large audience that filled Tulane Hall on that occasion. And the question arose in my mind, and arises now, if he needed more time for communion with God, what do I need?

Brethren of the Mississippi Conference, pardon the presumption of one of the least of your number in the suggestion that, with perfect unanimity, we ought to accede to the proposition of our honored brother, Robert B. Downer, to make our approaching session an occasion of renewed consecration, and of spiritual refreshing from on high. Then, how can we better begin the work of the new year than by trying to get all our people to join the Quiet Hour League? The Bishop above referred to writes: "I am pleased with the idea, . . . and desire to have my name enrolled as a member."

IS INFANT BAPTISM AN EVIL?

(No. 2)

We take it for granted that those who oppose infant baptism to that extent as to brand it "the greatest curse that has ever afflicted Christendom" are set for the defense of right principles. In this they, in common with all other churches, stand for the condemnation of evil of every kind. But it is indeed strange that, in a country where Pedobaptists abound, they should thus condemn one of their doctrines—something that is adhered to by a vast majority of even Protestant Christianity. Is there no brain among Pedobaptist churches? Have they been imposing such an awful sin on their people for so many centuries past? Is it at all reasonable to suppose that the early Christian church—right back under the shadow of the inspired Apostles—should have imposed and enjoined such an evil on the people? In the name of truth and intelligence what shall we answer to these things? Where on record do we find great councils of the early church discussing this thing as an "evil?" On the other hand we do find them sanctioning it, some of them positively stating that they received it from the Apostles themselves.

Others may do as they please, but as for the writer of these articles, we intend either to quit the practice or defend it. We hope to make the impression, at least, that we are trying to do the latter.

To prove that infant baptism is an evil, here is about the line of reasoning (?) that is usually produced: We do not believe any one is a subject for baptism who cannot understand its meaning. But infants cannot understand this. Therefore, they are excluded.

Here is another: We are opposed to everything that is wrong; but it is wrong to baptize infants; therefore, we exclude them.

Or otherwise and better stated: Anything is a sin that we do not believe in; but we do not believe in infant baptism; therefore, it is a sin!

We might reply to the above with the following: We believe in everything that is right; but it is right to baptize infants; therefore, we baptize them.

But if it should require sensible argument we might state it thus: All human beings who are in a state of grace are entitled to baptism; but infants are in a state of grace, and are human beings; therefore, infants should be baptized.

And again: Christ said, "Preach the gospel to every creature." "Teach all nations, baptizing them." But infants are among the "nations," and are likewise "creatures;" therefore, infants are to be baptized, according to the command of Christ.

After pentecost, when Peter exhorted the people he enjoined baptism, saying: "For the promise is unto you and your children." "But," says some one, who (like Pharoah of old) would fain rule the children out, "the word children here evidently referred to adults." To which we reply, it evidently referred to infants as well as adults, and their argument is fully met!

We have had occasion recently to give some time to the study of the anti-Pedobaptist views on this subject. It is obvious that the staple of their argument consists in the failure on the part of Christ to use the word "children" in the great commission. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, etc." They go altogether on the hypothesis that as infants cannot believe, they are, therefore, excluded from the rite of baptism. The unfortunate thing about this theory is that it is without Scriptural foundation. Two things are necessary for its support. (1) Water baptism must be made essential to salvation, and (2) salvation must be a condition of the head—the intellect. That the plain teaching of God's Word is against this needs no debate. This position must of necessity exclude infants from heaven. In the first commission, in the same verse, yea, the same sentence, it says: "But he that believeth not shall be damned!" Therefore, according to their logic and theology, all infants who die before the age of intellectual perception are lost, because, forsooth, they cannot believe. This is putting salvation on strictly a psychological basis. They are excluded from heaven on the same ground that they are from the grace of baptism. This thing of making the intellect the basis of fitness for baptism is equivalent to making salvation a condition of the head. Christ put it differently. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Water baptism is an outward sign of inward grace. That infants have this grace no one will deny. Therefore, they are entitled to the thing that signifies this grace.

When the question was being discussed as to "who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven," after teaching the lesson, having a little child before him to show, as an object lesson, what class of people are really the greatest in his kingdom, Christ says, "These little ones that believe in me." Math. xviii:6. This is declared, was a "little child," not an adult. (Further on we see the Greek on this.) Now, who knows but that little children, even infants, in some way unknown to us, can take hold of Christ by faith? You observe I do not give this out dogmatically, but inquiringly.

Are we to suppose that infants who die before the age of intellectual perception will be ignorant in heaven? No. Then is it not reasonable to suppose that they in some way know God while here on earth? They may not be able to recognize an earthly parent, but our humble opinion is that they know their "Father in heaven." Is it true that no unbeliever can get to heaven? Yes; but do all go there who die in infancy? Yes; and why? Draw your own conclusion.

It is natural for little children to believe. They do not know what it is to doubt. Unbelief is a foreign principle that comes into the heart in after life. Children are pure, simple, trustful, and believing. If little children thus know Christ it is a divine principle. It is not the "wisdom of the world." It is that "wisdom that cometh from above, is first pure, then peacable, gentle and easy to be entreated." This is the kind of wisdom adults must have to know and enjoy God. Every sinner is ignorant of God. And we will never be saved until he has that same "wisdom" that infants have. Christ said, "Unless you become converted and become as little children ye cannot see the kingdom of heaven." In giving this account Mark and Luke say, "Infants."

I know we are accustomed to believing that God in some way has made special provisions for children. But where is the Scripture for it? I have never heard of but one condition for all classes, and that is faith! One atonement by the one Christ for all. No doubt infants come into this world under the full benefits of the atonement with this divine principle of faith in their hearts, pure as the angels. Brother R. J. Harp, the veteran of the Louisiana Conference, says he cannot remember the day when he did not love God. Can anybody love God without faith? Can anybody know God without faith? Can anybody please God without faith? "Without faith it is impossible to please him." Heb. xi:6. Then is God pleased with infants? There is only one answer to this question. Then why exclude them from baptism because they do not know God from the standpoint of human wisdom—worldly wisdom? The opposers of infant baptism pride themselves on demanding that their candidates for baptism shall have something more than this human wisdom—a mere intellectual conception of God. But when it comes to infants they demand head faith. "O, consistency, thou art a jewel!"

There is no more Scripture showing that only adults are to be baptized than there is to prove that infants are excluded. We know what had always been the custom of the church. And we do know that Christ did not change the age at which we are to receive the outward sign of grace—the initiatory rite into the visible church. If he did, why don't the opposers give us the Scripture on it? We are willing to abide by the "thus saith the Lord." Pedobaptists want to see the opposers prove that Christ excluded the children when he came. It is true that when he came he increased the blessings and privileges of his people. Strange that this should be for adults only! Verily, children were more blessed under the old dispensation, if the position some take is true! But there are numerous passages of Scripture proving that Christ not only retained the children but augmented their privileges. In doing this did he anywhere intimate that the time had come when the children must not any longer receive the outward sign that could secure the benefits of the external church? That water baptism was instituted by Christ to serve the place in the church that circumcision had needs no argument to establish.

Now, the righteousness or the unrighteousness of infant baptism is not to be settled by what one church or another may or may not believe about it, but by the Word of God, the practice of the early church, and the general practice of the church in all ages even down to the present time. All who have any knowledge of church history will admit that this has been a general practice of the Christian church and was practiced by the early fathers. Not by heretics, but by grand conclaves of the chief representatives of the Christian church!

THE LESSON OF SERVICE.

One of the best of human disciplines is to be forced to do for oneself what has been done for us by others. To be compelled to clean doors in the damp season to dig in one's garden to fetch and carry, to cook and to clean, is to understand the difficulty of doing what we criticise—not always gently—the laboring men and women to do it well. "I know how to abound," said Paul. And to know how to work as well as to be worked for is to understand human life on a broader scale than that of our own little part in the world's labor. Summer away from the organized life of the city enlarges our experience, makes us modest our estimate of ourselves, and makes kindly our judgment of others.—Christian Register.

"TAKE US AS WE ARE, MAKE US WHAT WE OUGHT TO BE."

Many years ago I was a young pastor in a Virginia village near a great university, and one Sunday evening in the prayer-meeting there came in a young man—one of the students—whom I knew to be a professing Christian. He has since become one of my best and dearest friends, and has filled many high places with distinguished usefulness; but I barely knew him then. I asked him to pray in the prayer-meeting, and in the course of a simple, earnest prayer such as a truly intelligent and loving soul might be expected to make he used an expression which sank into the very soul of me and which I have remembered, I think, dozens of times. He said: "O Lord, please to take us as we are, for Jesus' sake, and make us, by the Holy Spirit, what we ought to be."—Doctor Broadus.

"THE REBEL SIGH."

Two young women in tawdry dressing-sacques were lounging in rocking-chairs reading the Sunday morning paper and discussing the fashion page in loud tones.

Stephanie Southam turned away from the boarding-house parlor in disgust. There was no Sabbath-like atmosphere there, certainly! She retraced her steps, reaching her own room at the top of the stairs, and sat down, discouraged, in the stiff little rocker, contemplating the view from her one window with homesick eyes.

A dingy, three-story boarding-house across the street, with soot-laden, ragged lace curtains at the windows, confronted her. A chilly rain pattered on the tin roof of the porch just outside her window. She turned away.

Just then a cold draft and a whiff of tobacco smoke came in from the hall below. Some one was standing looking at the open front door. She closed her own door; she could at least shut herself in to her own company, while the sudden loud jangle of a popular tune played on the piano in the parlor jarred upon her ears. That was too much. A girl brought up in a Christian home, as she had been, with all its sweet, helpful, refining influences, has a right to better things, even though obliged to leave that home and work in a strange city. It seemed quite unjust to her. Why had it so happened, anyway, that she had to leave that dear home she felt ... been ... ever ought ... so hard!

She ... girls and women ... Such she ... and ... her steps.

... gathered. Even the ... room, old Granny, with the rat-eating maltese, Whitey, and the spirit of discontent, seemed to have taken possession of Stephanie.

Others came in, shook out their damp coats and sat down quietly.

The leader was one of those wise, strong women who knew how to cut off sorts girls feel when they are in a mood, and in a cheery voice she announced the hymn, and kept them singing for a few minutes.

Through the blessed influence of Christian songs, Stephanie's heart softened. After all, her lot was not so hard.

Sweetly the girlish voices sang:

"Spirit of God, descend upon my heart;
Wean it from earth; through all its pulses move;
Stoop to my weakness, mighty as thou art,
And make me love thee as I ought to love.

Stephanie's heart was getting in tune once more.

"Teach me to feel that thou art always nigh;
Teach me the struggles of the soul to bear,
To check the rising doubt."

Ah, she scorned to doubt; she whose father had been a pillar in the church, and his father before; whose mother was a saint. Doubt? She who had generations of stanch Christianity back of her? Ah, never!

"To check the rising doubt, the rebel sigh."

The remainder of the song she did not hear. Her sighing and complaining had been rebellion against God. The pity of it! To God, who was so good to her, so full of tender compassion, who had served her all her days and now even, in a strange, lonely city, when full of murmuring, had led her to this prayer, this quiet place where he was. Ah, to ask God!

The meeting, naturally, was but a common-place one. There was no great manifestation, no wonderful exercises related, but one girl, at least, went away with new courage, new strength and a fresh determination to "check the rebel sigh" which was eating away the joy of her Christian life like a canker-worm.

With such thoughts it was not strange that she ... in the boarding-house parlor looked at her shining face as she passed the open door, and asked wonderingly: "Where've you been?"

She saw the shabby parlor and the loud-voiced, thoughtless girls with new eyes. Here was something for her to do. Why should she complain against the surrounding ... hen she d ... nothing to better them? ... days to ... should be full; she would ... ger sit an ... plain.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1906.

When church choirs have whetted the appetite of Sunday evening church goers by giving them a taste of Sunday evening sacred concerts, they should be neither surprised nor grieved if some slip off between times to the theatre to hear the sacred music rendered by the prima donna. They can be easily persuaded that the prima donna and her assistants outclass church choirs as singers and players on instruments. Nor should the preacher scold them if they go.

The following was not a reprimand, but more than a gentle hint: "A certain man, when a new pastor came, presented him with a book of illustrations with this remark: 'Please use these illustrations if you have to get them out of books. Your four or five predecessors used the same book of illustrations, and to prevent any more repetition I imported this from England. It is a new book, not in circulation in this country.'" Dr. Buckley says he knows this to be a fact. The preacher who gets his illustrations from a book should be on his guard.

Dr. H. M. Hamill has been holding Sunday School Institutes in the Delta—the richest part of the North Mississippi Conference. While there he studied the Methodist situation. What is needed there, he says, "is a full corps of up-to-date, aggressive pastors, strong in body and spirit, and with good organizing ability. * * * It is no place for the preacher whose future is 'behind him.'" In his own Conference he says: "I think I know a half score of big-hearted and hard-working young men who could do a mighty work down there for God and our church." We do not doubt it. But there is a full score in the North Mississippi Conference just as big hearted and just as able and willing. North Mississippi preachers cut away the cane and felled the trees and opened the fields. They are beginning to enjoy the fruits of their labor. They used to travel their circuits in skiffs and dugouts and bateaux. Now they go on railroads. If Pullman sleepers or electric cars are in reserve for them they should not be deprived of a few years' enjoyment by importing men to take their places. After a while other men may enter into their labors—but not now.

WITNESSES FOR CHRIST.

More than once did our Lord tell his disciples that they were to be his witnesses. His last utterance on earth was to this effect: "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." This is to be taken in a literal sense, both as to the power to testify, and the facts to which they were to bear witness. The early Christians were few in number, and feeble in all respects, and wholly unable to contend against the people and the rulers who had so shamelessly crucified their Lord. They were without power and without courage. Nothing short of power, physical and spiritual, communicated by the Holy Ghost could enable them to stand before their enemies and bear witness to the despised Nazarine. Notwithstanding they had positive knowledge of the Lord's resurrection, they were afraid to speak of it. Even among themselves it was a matter of quiet talk. Not until after the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost came upon them, did they venture among the people as preachers of the gospel. But from then on they never hesitated. In regard to the facts to which they testified, St. Peter voiced the sentiments of his colleagues when he said, "we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty."

Christians to-day do not testify as eye-witnesses, but they are none the less credible witnesses to the truth and power of the gospel. They have in them that which inspired and empowered the apostles on the day of Pentecost—the Holy Ghost, the gift of God. This inspiration and power is never communicated to sinners, no matter how strong their convictions may be in regard to the truths of the gospel. Christians speak the "hidden wisdom of God * * * which none of the princes of this world knew, for eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

Christians come into an experience, clear and unmistakable. Their sins are pardoned. They are born of God, and become his sons and daughters—partakers of a divine nature. To this great fact the Holy Spirit bears witness, as does also the spirit of the child of God. Love reigns in his heart, and he knows that he has passed from death unto life because he loves the brethren. Henceforth, he is to be a witness for Christ.

Christ's witnesses bear testimony to his power to save. It is personal. One cannot bear testimony for another. One may bear testimony to a change in his neighbor's life, but to look into his heart and certify to a change of his nature is impossible. That is known only to God and the man himself. To testify to it is his solemn duty. This he does when he stands before the church, seeking membership upon the profession of his faith. Nothing less than this will answer our Lord's demand. But far more than this is necessary if Christians would satisfy the world that they are truly saved.

Christians must appeal to their experience and tell it in no uncertain tones. St. Paul did this, and made his enemies fairly tremble. The man born blind, to whom Christ gave sight, when he could do nothing more, fell back on his experience. Unable to answer the Scribes and Pharisees when they told him that Christ was a sinner, he triumphantly replied, "Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." We have sometimes known the simple tale of a man's conviction and conversion move a whole congregation when everything else had failed.

Christians are witnesses for Christ in another and important way. They speak by example, which never fails. Words sometimes fail, especially when it is known that behind the words is an inconsistent life. A Christian's daily walk may be such as to impress a whole community that he lives in constant communion with God. Though one of God's little ones, he may command the respect and confidence of all. This manner of life is essential. If otherwise, the man lives unesteemed, no matter how loud his profession, and the cause of God suffers. Hence said Jesus: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

MISSING THE MARK.

We once listened to a fledgling in the ministry try to preach from the words of the Psalmist: "I thought on my way." In a little while he had the good man going up and down and around the hills of Palestine thinking as he traveled. What the Psalmist's thoughts were he had to conjecture, and he guessed several things. But he was not a whit further from the sense of the words than was a certain D.D., of great fame, who took for his text Paul's exhortation: "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." This man told his hearers there were several ways of receiving Jesus. One was by faith, another by prayer, and another by reading the Scriptures, etc. Then followed his exhortations: As ye have received the Lord Jesus by faith, so continue in faith. As ye have received the Lord Jesus by prayer, so continue to pray. As ye have received the Lord Jesus by reading the Scriptures, so continue to read the Scriptures. And so on to the end. We call that missing the mark. As an application of the Word it was no nearer correct than that of a man in Arkansas who professed religion while drunk, and continued drunk, justifying himself by saying: "The Scripture says: 'As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him.' I received the Lord Jesus while drunk, and I just keep on getting drunk."

We have related no dreams or idle tales.

THE CASE OF DR. CRAPSEY.

Our readers will call to mind that several months ago we noted the trial and conviction of Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey of the Episcopal Church. The Doctor was accused of setting forth erroneous and strange things contrary to the teachings of his church. His preaching became notorious on account of its opposition, not only to the creed of the Episcopal Church, but to all evangelical Christendom. The Episcopal authorities could not stand for his teachings, as they brought the church and the Christian religion into disrepute. He was tried and convicted, and suspended from the ministry and given the usual length of time under the church law to recant. He took an appeal to a higher court. That higher court, during the last few days, rendered a decision, sustaining the lower court in every particular.

Dr. Crapsey declines to recant. Instead, he reaffirmed his position on the various points involved, and retires from the church. Entertaining such notions as he does, we are unable to see how he can call himself a Christian. His was a clear case of heresy, and the Episcopal Church not only vindicated itself, but performed a valuable service in behalf of evangelical religion when it pronounced a verdict against the Doctor.

Men who deny the essentials of our religion have no place in the church or the ministry.

PERSONALS.

We spent a delightful half hour one day last week with Dr. S. S. Keener, who was in the City for a few days. He has improved much in health during the fall, and is ready for work another year.

Dr. John A. Rice, who for four years past has been pastor of Court Street Church, Montgomery, Alabama, has been transferred to the Louisiana Conference. He will attend the session this week at Shreveport.

Mr. J. H. Keller, one of the prominent Methodists of this city, has donated one thousand dollars to the Young Men's Christian Association as a thank offering. The donation is for the benefit of the young men of the city.

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Decatur Charge, Miss., has had a good year, and will make a good report at Conference. About forty souls have been converted, and fifty added to the church. The benevolent claims will all be met in full.

Rev. B. W. Lewis, of Buckatunna, Miss., is winding up his year's work nicely. Everything will be paid in full. The good people of Buckatunna are worshipping in their new church—a beautiful house that cost them about $2,500.

Dr. J. W. Shoaff, who for some years past served St. Paul's Church, Columbus, Ga., has been transferred to the North Mississippi Conference. The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "He is a most genial gentleman and an eloquent preacher."

Rev. P. H. Howse, of Caseyville, sends us notice of the death of Rev. John B. Bowan, who for a long time was a traveling preacher in the Mississippi Conference. He passed away on the night of Nov. 9. A true, good man has entered into rest.

Rev. Q. A. Oats, for two years agent and manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, has resigned with a view to re-entering the pastorate. Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Mississippi Conference, has been elected to succeed him. He is in all respects a worthy man.

Bishop Galloway has so far recovered as to be able to travel. He spent a day or two last week with his old friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss. By this time we suppose he is in Florida, where he will remain during the winter. He is accompanied by Mrs. Galloway.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, writing from Braxton, Miss., says: "The work is moving along nicely. We have a prayer meeting at Braxton that averages fifty in attendance. I have never seen anything like it in so small a town. Our missionary rally service was crowded. I am expecting to make a full report."

Dr. W. C. Black, the efficient pastor of Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, will go to Conference with a fine report. He has had an accession to the membership of his church this year of one hundred and forty-two. We dare say every department of his church will make a showing quite as good.

On Tuesday, Nov. 22, two popular young people of Hammond, La., were united in marriage, Mr. Wm. P. Goos and Miss Lula May Willis, the editor of the ADVOCATE officiating. Mrs. Goos is the efficient president of the Woman's Home Mission Society of our church in Hammond. They have the best wishes of many friends.

Rev. M. M. Black informs us that every charge in the Seashore District reported as in the honor roll has paid up every assessment in full, and that all the charges in the district, with possibly one exception, will pay up every claim, and that there will be enough surplus to make up for said possible deficit. That is a fine record. Presiding Elder Burton may well be proud.

Rev. Richard Wilkinson, D.D., of Monroe, La., has been transferred by Bishop Ward to the North Georgia Conference, and stationed at St. Luke's Church, Augusta. We are sorry that Wilkinson has been taken from us, but he goes to a fine charge, and will doubtless be pleasantly located. We trust he may be as popular and successful in his new home as he has been in Louisiana.

Mr. C. O. Chalmers, publisher, will represent the ADVOCATE this week before the Louisiana Conference at Shreveport. Brother Chalmers will be glad to meet and make the acquaintance of all the preachers, and we feel sure they will give him a cordial greeting, and otherwise treat him kindly. The editor is attending his own Conference and finds it impossible to meet the Louisiana brethren.

The Greenville District, under the efficient leadership of the presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Meek, has organized a Church Extension Board, and provided a constitution and by-laws. Rev. J. R. Countiss is Secretary. This is a good move and might be followed with profit by all the districts. We are under obligation to Brother Meek for a copy of the constitution. We would be glad to print it, but just now we have not the space. We may do so in the future.

We ventured to guess last week that Dr. S. A. Steel, who was readmitted into the traveling connection by the Oklahoma Conference, was transferred to one of the Texas Conferences. Our guess was correct. He was transferred to the Northwest Texas, and stationed at Brownwood. Thus he gets back into the pastorate where we hope he will have a brilliant and useful career. He is but a few years beyond middle life, and with his talents and eloquent tongue is able to accomplish much.

The Fourth Quarterly meeting for Carrollton (Miss.) Charge was held at Smith's Chapel, which seems to be a famous place for big quarterly meeting dinners. It lost nothing in reputation by this year's spread. Last year the good women had chicken on the ground cooked in seven different ways. This year they added turkey, and the Carrollton Conservative says: "The turkey and chicken were served in more ways than it would be prudent to mention." Presiding Elder Dorsey paid for his dinner with good preaching. What Brother Moss, the pastor, gave in return, the Conservative does not say.

A VALUABLE BIBLE.

All Bibles are valuable, but some, by reason of the print, binding, and helps in the way of references, notes, comments, etc., are more valuable than others. The "Self-Interpreting Bible" is more valuable than many. This book, with its commentaries, references, harmony of the Gospels, and the Helps needed to understand and teach the text, together with its four hundred photographs showing the places of Bible events as they appear today," cannot be surpassed. It is a library in itself, being in four large volumes. The reader has before him on the same page with the text, the references and the comments. Besides the helps mentioned above, the book has other features valuable to every student of God's word. We cannot commend this book too highly. The volume before us is a splendid specimen of the bookmaker's art. It is a triumph in every way.

IN MEMORIAM.

In the early morning hours, before the dawn of October 18th, 1906, at Cold Water, Miss., Mrs. MARY LOUISE WIER, consort of Dr. T. C. Wier, of the North Mississippi Conference, on the shortest notice, passed away from the earthly house of this tabernacle to her home in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. The passage was without pain or fear. The sudden summons was accepted with her usual calmness and unshaken faith. Her long and devoted life as a follower of Christ, culminated in triumph over sin and death in the serene peace of glorious victory. She leaves behind her, in the sorrow of a great bereavement, a devoted husband still ministering in the offices of an itinerant preacher, six sons and two daughters. All these are following her example in the open activities of Christian life and will meet her "on the other shore." A large circle of other relatives and friends who knew the beautiful life that has passed from the associations of earth to the society of heaven, also share the sorrow of this bereavement and will extend to the family their truest sympathy and prayers.

The subject of this notice was the daughter of Col. R. A. Baker and Minerva Lampkin, and was born March 5, 1835, near Lagrange, Alabama. She was educated in Centenary Female College at Summerfield, Alabama. Col. Baker was known and honored amongst the most prominent laymen of Alabama Methodism, and as a liberal contributor to the enterprises of his church. In his home the weary itinerant always found a restful hospitality that rewarded his labors and nerved his heart for further toils. And there the usages of Methodist doctrine and discipline had consistent observance and nurture. Reared in a home of such fidelity of living and under the influences of daily spiritual culture it was a legitimate result that the daughter in the early years of her girlhood should give her heart and life to the Savior and join the company of his followers. The integrity of that espousal was maintained to the end of her pilgrimage on earth.

On May 4th, 1858, she became the bride of the Rev. T. C. Wier, M. D., then a member of the Alabama Conference, and united her life and labors with him in the work of the itinerant Methodist preacher. How well and effectively she filled her place no one but the bereaved preacher can tell. But enough appeared for all to see that it was a remarkably consistent and helpful life. She carried over the treasure she had gained in the rearing of her childhood and youth and handed it on, increased by use, to the next generation, disseminating its influence to all around her. So has she finished her course and reached the mark for the prize of her high calling of God in Christ Jesus. In all the functions of housekeeping she filled her place with conscientious fidelity and the aspirations of pure affection.

Sister Wier was a woman of remarkable composure and poise of mind. Deeply sensible of the needs of her welfare and of those for whom she lived and labored, she was yet not flurried nor confused by adverse and distressing events. Her strong and living faith seemed always ready for the occasion and she referred every case to the same divine source of grace and providence. Her rare common sense seemed to make a wise disposition of the small detail of busy life as well as of its larger and more monumental events. No murmurs, no sharp criticisms, no unkind remarks about anybody escaped her lips. She was a lover of men for the love of Christ. To her husband she was an inspiration and comfort in the aggressive labors of his itinerant life. With ardent affection and unyielding faith she shared the toils and hardships of pastoral work. Her participation in the woman's work of the church was hearty and efficient. She was ready for every good word and work. Her soft, gentle voice and manner, indicative of kindness, patience and pardon and of an abounding spiritual peace, were an example to all who came under the touch of her expression. In the home circle the gentle, patient and loving mother moulded the lives of her children into the likeness of her own Christian life. And so, they follow her as she followed Christ. One who knew her and saw much of her Christian life and work, says: "I felt like I could be a better woman if I could associate with her all the time; her life was an inspiration to me to live more Christlike." This testimony many others would gladly bear. Here then, is an example of Christian living which we may all follow with improvement in our spiritual attainment; and how great is the treasure in the Christian life of this saint, left to those who mourn her departure and who hope to share in the glorious reunion when all separation and sorrow and death shall have a triumphant end.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, according to the rules of our discipline the labors of Brother M. L. White, our beloved pastor, are coming to a close in our Circuit, and whereas he has been so faithful these four years in the performance of each and every duty devolving upon a pastor, from that requiring his utmost strength to perform to that of a kind word spoken, and whereas his family has been a model for and an inspiration to all who are trying to build Christian homes, be it resolved by this Conference

First—That we part with him, his wife and his family in sorrow, and pray God's blessings upon them all.

Second—That we, by these resolutions, show our appreciation for this great work in our Circuit, especially for the salvation of souls, and the bringing of more than four hundred souls into his fold through his preaching.

Third—If he is ever returned to our work we will gladly receive him.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas this being the fourth year of Brother M. Morse's charge of this the Forest District, and under the laws of the church his removal being necessitated, be it resolved by this the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Main Street Church, Laurel, Miss:

First—That we heartily endorse the entire administration of Brother Morse, which has been actuated solely at all times by a desire for the advancement of the church, both spiritually and temporally, and the result of which has been evidenced by the strong growth of the work under his charge.

Second—That we herewith give expression to our regret of his impending removal.

Third—That a copy of this be placed on the minutes of this Conference, one be read at the coming Annual Conference, and one be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Resolved, That this, the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Main Street Church, Laurel, Miss., hereby heartily endorse the work of our pastor, Brother J. W. Chambers, for the past year, and that we urge our presiding elder to use his influence in having him returned to us.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst to the "better land" our sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Watkins, who was for years a member of our own Cane Ridge Church, and a charter member of our Pasonage Aid Society, and who, in all of her relations to us, was always found faithful. Therefore, be it

Resolved, first, That we, the members of the Cane Ridge Aid Society, extend to her bereaved loved ones our sincere Christian sympathy in their great loss of the loving mother and grandmother.

Resolved, second, That while we mourn her loss, yet we rejoice that she was spared to a long life full of good works, and having laid earthly burdens down, hath entered into her reward.

Resolved, third, That we will endeavor so to live that when called from earth we shall receive as she has, the welcome plaudit—well done good and faithful servant, and enter with her into the joy of our Lord.

Resolved, fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved loved ones, and to the New Orleans Advocate, and also spread upon the minutes of the Cane Ridge Aid Society.

Dear Doctor Boswell:

I will give a few lines relative to this year's work. We have had a prosperous year. Increase in membership, something over thirty. All the collections were paid in March. Salary will be in full. The new church project slowly making headway. We have had many hindrances. Question of getting material has been a serious one. We have accomplished the following toward the new church: The old church has been rolled to the rear of the lot, where it will remain, to be converted into a modern Sunday School room. The ground has been prepared for the new building. The rough brick are being made, having been bought and paid for. The framing lumber is stacked on the ground. The windows are being made for us by the Kansas City Stained Glass Works. The window frames, doors and door frames are here stacked in the rear of the old building. The pressed brick, lime, cement, are all bought, and will be placed here as soon as we can get them shipped. All material will be placed on the ground before we begin operations. The building is to be of red pressed brick, laid in colored mortar, and will be old English in design. It will have a seating capacity of five hundred. The ladies are at work raising the money for a pipe organ, and the contract for the same will be signed about the 1st of December. My people are working faithfully to perfect the plans for the development of church work. They are kind, loving, and mostly true and loyal to the church. This closes our third year and it has been three delightful years of service. Our mind is made up to return, if the Bishop says so.

A MODERN MIRACLE.

Mrs. S. T. Roberts, Clinton, La., sent a postal card request for a trial bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine to Drake Co., Drake Bldg., and received it promptly by return mail without expense to her. Mrs. Roberts writes that a bottle of this wonderful Palmetto Medicine proved quite sufficient to completely cure her. She says: "One bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine has cured me after months of intense suffering. My trouble was inflammation of Bladder and serious condition of Urinary organs. Drake's Palmetto Wine gave me quick and entire relief and I have had no trouble since using the one bottle."

Drake's Palmetto Wine cures every such case to stay cured. It is a true, unfailing specific for Liver, Kidney, Bladder and Prostate Troubles caused by Inflammation, Congestion or Catarrh. One small dose a day does all this splendid work, and any reader of this paper may prove it by writing to Drake Co., 304 Drake Bldg., Wheeling, W. V., for a test bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine. A letter or postal card is your only expense.

Cottolene

Shortens your food—Lengthens your life

Cottolene is a cleanly, wholesome product. It is made from cotton seed oil, in a thoroughly modern and hygienic manner, and is just as pure as olive oil. It, moreover, makes palatable, digestible, healthful food which will agree with the most delicate stomach. Lard food on the contrary, is indigestible, and will cause trouble if its use is persisted in.

Cottolene is endorsed by the most prominent cooks and household economists of the country as well as by that portion of the medical profession who have made a study of pure food. There is no substitute for Cottolene because there is no shortening so good as Cottolene. It stands alone as everyone who has used it according to directions will verify.

COTTOLENE was granted a GRAND PRIZE (highest possible award) over all other cooking fats at the recent Louisiana Purchase Exposition; and food cooked with COTTOLENE another GRAND PRIZE.

"Home Helps" a book of 300 Choice recipes, edited by Mrs. Rorer, is yours for a 2 cent stamp, if you address The N. K. Fairbank Company, Chicago.

A NEW FEATURE—The patent air-tight top on this pail is for the purpose of keeping COTTOLENE clean, fresh and wholesome; it also prevents it from absorbing all disagreeable odors of the grocery, such as fish, oil, etc.

FAITH.

Dr. H. Clay Trumbull used to tell with keen pleasure of the glimpse he once had of the secret of Napoleon's power over his soldiers. Happening to meet a French veteran who had served under the great commander, Dr. Trumbull asked him, "Did Napoleon's soldiers like him?" "Like him?" exclaimed the old Frenchman, straightening up, his eyes snapping excitedly. "Like him! We believed in him. Napoleon says, 'Go to the moon.' Every soldier start. Napoleon find the way." And we take a Commander who is greater than Napoleon.—Ram's Horn.

JESUS RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

Matt. xxviii: 1-15.

Golden text: "He is risen, as he said." Matt. xxviii: 6.

While the disciples were overwhelmed with the apparent end of all their hopes in the death of their Lord, and through fear were helpless, the Father in heaven provided help both for the present occasion and to fulfill prophesy.

After the end came, as was announced by Jesus on the cross, in the words: "It is finished," Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus went boldly to Pilate and asked to be given the body of the Lord. Their request being granted, they took the body from the cross and prepared it for burial with care and tenderness; then they laid it in the sepulcher wherein was never man yet laid, just as Isaih had foretold: "With the rich in his death."

The dormant faith of Joseph and Nicodemus must have awakened into life. They must have believed that Jesus was verily the son of God after having witnessed the earthquake, the darkened sun and the rent veil of the temple. Not so with the eleven apostles, who had reassembled, and were overcome with grief and disappointment. It is a matter of wonder that they could not, as yet, see that Christ's kingdom must be a spiritual kingdom. The full knowledge of the spirituality of the Messiah did not come to them until the descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost.

The chief priests and the Pharisees were much disturbed, even after they had known that the crucifixion had taken place. Remembering the words of Jesus, they believed them sufficiently to make a request of Pilate that a guard be placed over the sepulcher for three days. So they even went so far as to seal the stone that served as a door to the grave wherein they had lain the Lord.

After the Sabbath was ended, and at the dawn of the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene and Mary, the mother of Jesus, and Salome, came to the sepulcher, with no idea in their minds of Christ's having risen from the dead, but to bring sweet spices to further anoint the body of the departed Master. They had never thought of seeing him again only as one dead and gone from them for all time. What gloom and utted despondence must have peryaded the hearts of all them that loved and followed him. In our lives we pass through trials that tell us of grief like theirs the long ago, that day we laid dear mother to rest, and returned to the desolate home where there was everything to remind us of the loved one we would see no more until the Father calls us hence.

When the faithful women arrived at the sepulcher an angel had rolled the stone away from the door. The appearance of the angel and the earthquake made them afraid, and the guard that had been placed there by the enemies of the Lord, were so frightened that they became as dead men. But listen, the angel speaks, "Fear not ye," the words being addressed to the women, "For I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here, for he is risen, as he said. Go quickly and tell his desciples that he will meet them in Galilee." When they heard this they went away from the sepulcher with joy to tell the glad news to the disciples, but on the way they were met by Jesus himself, who said to them: "Go tell my brethren to go into Galilee, and there shall they see me." After this Jesus appeared to others that brought word to the disciples; but the Scripture says: "They believed not."

It was hard for them to realize that which Jesus had so often told them would surely be. On the evening of the day that he arose from the dead, Jesus appeared suddenly among the disciples as they had assembled in a room with doors closed for fear of the Jews. He stood in their midst and said: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." Then he showed them his hands and his feet. From that foundation they were ready to build a gospel whose corner-stone is a risen Christ. Forty days the Lord lived and moved among the living, being the time from his resurrection to his ascension to heaven. Praise be to the Father that Jesus has shown us all things necessary to our eternal happiness. He has shown us how to live and how to die. As there was a purpose in his life and death, so can we believe that God has a purpose in ours.

Let us ever rejoice that Jesus has gone before us in the path that we must follow through life, through death. There is nothing to fear, the glory of the only begotten of the Father is a light to life's pathway, and dispels the gloom of [illegible] He is risen, as he said."

PEARLHAVEN AND BOGUE CHITTO CHARGE.

Dear Doctor Boswell:

It is truly refreshing to read the accounts of the year's work, through the columns of the Advocate, by our brethren of the Conference, as they have been winning souls for eternal life. These reports sound like "harvest songs" coming from men with a sanctified intelligence and hearts consecrated to the work of God. It makes us feel like the "old-time religion" is still among us.

We have just closed two gracious revivals on this charge, the first of which was held with the Bogue Chitto Church, embracing the second and third Sundays in October. The revival began on Wednesday night before the second Sunday, preaching by the pastor. Thursday night the preaching was done by Dr. I. W. Cooper. On Friday night the pastor again occupied the pulpit and on Saturday night the preaching was done by Rev. Milton Ferrill. These two brethren gave us most excellent sermons. On Sunday at 11 a. m. Rev. G. D. Anders of the Louisiana Conference preached and continued to preach with great power to the close of the meeting. In this meeting the church was wonderfully blessed.

Our next meeting was held at Mallalieu Chapel, where a congregation of Northern Methodists have recently come to us, as one might imagine from its name. This revival embraced the third and fourth Sundays in October, the pastor beginning the meeting on Saturday night and did the preaching till Tuesday, when Brother Anders came to our relief and did the preaching, to the delight and edification of all, till the following Sunday. Brother Anders is a good gospel preacher and preaches a pure and undefiled religion and is true in doctrinal integrity. The meeting resulted in sixty-four additions and many bright conversions, with forty-two persons promising to pray in public when called upon, and also to pray in their homes. The meeting closed at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. We then drove ten miles across the country to Cold Springs, a sawmill village two miles from Bogue Chitto, where Rev. J. A. B. Jones of Magnolia had preached on Saturday night before and Sunday at 11 a. m., giving great impetus to the revival. The revival for the year having been held in the early spring by the pastor, we remained here only a few days, but the meeting was a great blessing to the church. The church at this place has wrought well this year and will have its own pastor another year, as will also the Bogue Chitto Church. All the claims ordered by the Annual Conference will be paid in full.

Herein find a check for twenty-four more new subscribers for the Advocate, making ninety new subscribers from this charge this year. We have considerably over a hundred subscribers for the Advocate on this work. I enjoy reading the Advocate, and I enjoy working for it. My life is entirely consecrated to God and the church. I am looking forward joyfully to the coming year, and am resolved, by the help of God, to be a better and more useful servant of the Master.

In his love.

D. E. KELLY.

FROM WEST MONROE, LA.

Dear Doctor Boswell:

I have just closed a revival meeting in West Monroe, in which much good was accomplished. Every evidence of a true revival is present; the Sunday School League, prayer meeting and general attendance at church have all taken on new life and enlarged interests.

We had thirty-five bright conversions, many of them being the leading men and women of the town. Some of the leading business men of the town were converted and joined our church, greatly increasing our strength.

The Rev. Thomas M. Finley, of Abilene, Texas, did the preaching and did it well. The gospel that he preached is the old-time gospel of repentance, faith and Holy Ghost religion, preached with such power that large crowds of all classes filled the house to overflowing long before the hour for service to begin.

There is no foolishness in Brother Finley's preaching, but it is a clean, clear-cut gospel, coming from a heart of fire, and burning its way into men and women's hearts and consciences with such force that they are willing to come to the old-time bench and call on God for mercy.

Brother Finley is one evangelist that I know preaches the old-time gospel and does it in such a way that it both bring numbers and at the same time lasting, deep, heart work.

At the close of the meeting the people with liberal hearts and bright faces "pounded" the pastor with what they termed a silver pounding, to the tune of fifty dollars' worth, at the same time making Brother Finley feel that they appreciated and loved him by giving him one hundred and fifty dollars. Still they were not satisfied, so they poured into the church treasury for general expenses thirty dollars more. Thank God for a religion that will open up hearts and pocket books as well.

Dr. Wilkinson, of First Church, and Brother Barr, both gave us able assistance.

I will make a fine report at Conference. To God be all the praise.

S. W. B. COLVIN, P. C.

WASHINGTON, MISS.

Dear Doctor Boswell:

As I will not be able to attend the session of Conference, a word at this time will not be out of place.

In many respects this has been a pleasant year to us. We have had some ten or twelve conversions and eleven accessions, eight of them on profession of faith. One new appointment has been added to the work, giving us four.

The Conference collections are paid in full, and about the same amount paid to the support of ministry as in other years.

On the afternoon of Nov. 21 we were surprised by a donation party representing not only our own church, but other churches, and also the faculty and students of Jefferson College. They left us provisions and a well-filled purse.

In August I was thrown from my buggy and badly hurt in one foot. I have not been able to walk since, and will not be for some time yet. For this reason I will not be able to attend Conference or take work another year.

For sixteen years I have received an appointment, and the thought of not being able to take work next year is as great an affliction as my bodily affliction. But it seems to be the Lord's will for me to turn aside and rest a while.

These good people have been very thoughtful and considerate of us.

Trust I may have the prayers of the brethren that I may soon be restored.

COL. DAVID ZABLE.

Col. DAVID ZABLE was born in New Orleans, Sept. 13, 1832, and died there Oct. 22, 1906. In 1849 he went to California in search of gold, remaining nine years, then to Europe for four years on a visit to his mother; then, returning home, he went to war for his native South. The war ended, he engaged in mercantile business. During his long and eventful life, he was an earnest, thorough-going worker and ever true to his aim, which was always high and noble. As a man, he was a felt force among his fellows, a born leader and a live factor in every movement that promised to better civic and social conditions. The friend of the friendless and the champion of every good cause, he was a foremost temperance worker, the uncompromising foe of the Louisiana State Lottery and a live wire in the splendid work of the Y. M. C. A. In all life's relations, domestic and private as well as public, he was noted for faithfulness, bearing himself with sincerity of purpose and exactitude of duty. As husband, father and friend, none excelled him in fidelity and steadfast love. His record as a soldier of the South was giltedge. He never saw the foe that made him fear, and it is not strange that under such a leader his regiment, the 14th Louisiana, covered itself with deathless glory. He was wounded when leading his regiment at Sharpsburg. As a Christian, Col. Zable was thorough and true from first to last. On Nov. 27, 1858, during the pastorate of this writer, he joined the Felicity St. Church, of which his wife was already a member. All who knew him will attest that he kept his vows and was the same faithful soldier under the banner of Jesus Christ as under the Stars and Bars of the South. He fill positions of importance and trust in that church as also in Rayne Memorial Church, of which he was a member when his Master called him from earth to heaven. The latter years of his life showed a ripening for eternity, for he was never happier than when engaged in working for his Lord. Delighting to do God's will, no service was too arduous. A man of limited means, he gave freely and liberally, always gladly denying himself. Indeed, unselfishness was one of his beautiful traits of character, always preferring others to himself. Although through the nature of his illness unable to give any dying testimony as to his spiritual condition, there was need for none, as his daily walk was proof of his readiness to go when the Master called. He had spoken of his willingness to depart only a few days previous to his illness. In 1868 Col. Zable was married to Alice M. Dalton, daughter of William and Sarah Dalton, who were charter members of St. Mary St. M. E. Church, South, now known as Felicity St. Church. Of this marriage one child was born, who is now Mrs. George Hovey of Inda, Miss. Col. Zable leaves a precious memory behind him, one that will comfort and solace the wife and [illegible] who are so sorely bereaved. His life yielded a blessed influence over the young, and the Sunday School and Epworth League will greatly miss him. He sleeps well—under the shade of the trees—and is gathered to the bosom of the God he loved and served. His battles all fought, his useful earth-life ended, he has been found "faithful unto death" and has the crown of life."

JOHN T. SAWYER.

Mrs. LOUISA N. BARNES was born March 9, 1830, and died October 24, 1906, at her home in Port Gibson, Miss. She was married April 9, 1851. The Lord blessed this union with the gift of three children, all of whom are still living. She joined the Methodist Church when a child, and has always felt a deep interest in the progress of the kingdom of Christ in the world. She was the great granddaughter of the Rev. Tobias Gibson, the pioneer of Methodism in this section of the country, and had a personal knowledge of many of the incidents connected with his life. She loved to talk of the old days, but also took a lively interest in the happenings of the present. During the last two years of her life she was deprived the privilege of attending the services of the church, but was a close reader of the Bible and other books helpful to the development of spiritual life, among which I mention "The Christian Secret of a Happy Life," and "In the School of Prayer with Christ." She was prepared to meet her God; and the loved ones behind know where they may meet her by and by.

W. H. LEWIS

ELLENER HIPP was born in South Carolina, March 15th, 1845; was married to Mr. Andrew Wicker in South Carolina Feb. 5th, 1850; moved with him to Smith County, Miss., in 1855, of 50, where she continued to reside until October 2nd, 1906, when she departed for the "sun bright clime." Brother and Sister Wicker deposited their church certificates in the M. E. South, at Trenton, Smith County, Miss., when they first came to this vicinity in 1855 or '56, where they are still recorded, never having been removed. Brother Wicker preceded her to "glory" ten or twelve years. This writer was their pastor in '57 and '58, again in 1872-7. Sister Wicker was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early girlhood, and ever remained a faithful and devout Christian. She leaves four children, two sons and two daughters; thirty-one grandchildren, and several great grandchildren. She lived to pass her 91st birthday. Her home was the home of the weary itinerant preacher. This writer realizes a sense of bereavement. She was to him a mother in Israel. We'll meet again not long from this. Until then, rest in peace and safety at home. She was ready to depart to be with Christ.

R. A. SIBLEY, SR.

Major J. R. BELL was born near Ebenezer, Holmes County, Miss., Dec. 5, 1831. He came to Yazoo County and was married to Mrs. Causey in 1851. By this marriage he raised two sons to be grown, Robert and Rev. Martin A. Bell, late of the Mississippi Conference. Major Bell helped to organize the Safartia Rifles, the second company that left Yazoo County. He was first lieutenant and later became captain, and still later he was promoted to major of the 12th Mississippi Regiment in the Virginia army. In 1862 he was married to Miss Susan Williams, who preceded him to the better world one year. He died Feb. 12, 1906, after a long illness. He is greatly missed in his community. I have never known a more useful man. He was a brave soldier, a gallant officer and always kind and helpful to his men—no truer soldier in the Virginia army. He was wounded twice. He was in many of the great battles fought in Virginia. He was a kind, affectionate, devoted husband, father and brother, as a neighbor and friend always true and obliging; as a citizen everybody knew where to find Major Bell. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Mt. Olivet in 1871; was made a steward that year. He loved the church devotedly, was true in supporting her ministers. His house was one of the preachers' homes. We always met a cordial greeting there. He was a faithful steward for 34 years.

GROWING OLD.

Nature, never a believer in equality, has provided society with a leisure class—a class which has attained, or has ceased any longer to pursue, the various aims with which its members set out on their journey. The women have seen the generation which they brought up in its turn bringing up another. The men watch the toils of those who carry on the work that once absorbed their thoughts. In every country, under every government, the old rest and look on. Most men, and almost all women, can accept the fact that their working days are over without any bitter regret. The old are seldom pessimists. They have the calm of those who are accustomed to danger and have seen many false alarms. Besides, they can look back a long way, far enough to assure themselves that the world, in spite of all reactions, has moved forward since they were young, and does still move forward though they have ceased to push. There are, of course, a minority who chafe at their destiny, a minority in which the feminine element is very small. A man's rest comes more suddenly than a woman's. His work has been more definite, and is less satisfactory to watch from the outside. The method of doing it change radically with the years. It is often hard for an old man to see his profession carried on in quite another way than that which seemed to him to be the right one. In literature tastes change, not always for the better. In science old roads for investigation are abandoned for new. In politics, the perennial strifes of party hide from those whose falling strength forces them to leave the arena the great conflicting principles which underlie those of opposing passion. Art seems sometimes to be inspired by no more serious Muse than that of Fashion, with her short memory and contempt for fact. All that he has tried to do must often seem to an old man as though it were already forgotten.

For a woman the step into old age is fraught with fewer hardships. Woman's work never changes. Her duties have been the same since the world began, and she is born with an aptitude for them. Methods of bringing up children and ruling households and ministering to the sick, do, it is true, become kinder with every generation.

The great loss which accompanies age is, of course, the loss of energy. Many wheels have run down by the time a man or woman may rightly be called old. The power to follow new paths or arguments up to new conclusions commonly, though not always, abates with the natural force; but there are compensations, especially among women. The mind of a woman is not quite the same as that of a man. Loss of mental force is to her a less loss, and with age a woman nearly always becomes wider minded. Her strong point mentally is her power to comprehend character. This gift is permeated by experience, and has very little to do with either theories or systems. Breadth of view is as dependent upon sympathy as upon abstract thought.—The Spectator.

We copy the following "Glance" from the Northwestern Christian Advocate, Chicago:

"Apostle Joseph F. Smith, head of the Mormon Church, pleaded guilty, November 23, to the charge of practicing polygamy in defiance of the laws of the State of Utah, and was fined the maximum sum of $300. The prison penalty of from one day to six months in the county jail was omitted. The charge upon which President Smith was arrested and fined was based on the recent birth of his forty-third child, born to his fifth wife. After a statement in which he endeavored to justify his continuance of polygamous relations with his plural wives, President Smith appealed to the judge to exercise such leniency in the sentence as the law and justice will permit, and the judge did so. President Smith, in justification of his offense, used the usual argument of Mormons who have broken their pledges to the nation that they would discontinue polygamous cohabitation with their plural wives, and sought to give the impression that the American people connive at such relations. It is one thing for the American people to justify Mormons in providing for plural wives; it is another thing to justify their continuous cohabitation with them. This was never expected, and Mormons themselves understood that fact. Leaders of the church have constantly broken their pledge to the nation. Some have openly defied the law, and a few have entered into polygamous marriages since the manifesto of President Woodruff in 1890. There is no excuse for President Smith's defiance of the law. He should be punished. His action shows the spirit of the Church, and justifies the demand for the exclusion from the United States Senate of Reed Smoot, who is an official of the Mormon Church, subject to the ecclesiastical will and power of President Smith, who assumes divine authority in things temporal as well as spiritual over members of his church. The exclusion of Mr. Smoot should be one of the first acts of the Senate after the opening of congress. Thus will that body clearly show the Mormon Church that while its religious rights must be respected, the nation can not be treated by its official representatives with contempt."

The following statement, taken from one of our exchanges, will give our readers an idea of the trouble the authorities of France are having in their efforts to secure the separation of Church and State:

"The relations between Church and State in France are approaching a crisis. The law of separation goes into effect December 11, and unless the Roman Catholic Church acquiesces in the law, the government will have authority to close all cathedrals and churches throughout France, though it is not probable that it will do so. The preliminary inventory of church property was resumed last week. In many places the officers met with determined resistance, and in some places the soldiers were repulsed. Four gendarmes and several peasants were wounded, and about a dozen demonstrants were arrested, tried and sentenced to short terms in jail. In several instances the congregations remained in the churches throughout the night. Sulphur fumes were resorted to in two places. At one place the defense proved effective, and the soldiers were driven, nearly suffocated, from the church. The prefect decided to postpone the inventory. At the other burning sulphur was shoveled onto the heads of the soldiers from the roof of the church. Choking and blinded, the troops charged again and again amid a rain of flower pots from men and women without, and of smoldering sulphur from above. Finally, while an immense crowd cursed the authorities loudly, a charge of infantry cleared the church. Then firemen were summoned to flood the church, only to discover that the water mains had been plugged. The prefects at another place were balked also, although five hundred troops were on hand to assist. But the crowd was so threatening that the inventory was deferred until a force of cavalry could be secured. At St. Banzille the clericals, summoned to arms by the ringing of the church bells, successfully resisted the prefect. A trocha of chairs and barbed wire was opposed to the troops at another place. The inventory was taken while the congregation cursed and sang the Carmagnole. Firemen with ladders were required at Amiens to admit the authorities. Doors of the churches were battered down amid the imprecations of the congregations. The eleventh of December is awaited with anxiety by the authorities of the church and the government, and with interest by the people of other countries, for the struggle between Church and State is of world-wide significance."

The Inter-Ocean, of Chicago, speaks thus in regard to the reclamation and retention of our agricultural lands, and its power to sustain the population. It says:

"Doubt has been expressed as to the ability of the farmer and his land to meet the increasing demand for farm products occasioned especially by the rapidly increasing population of the country. These fears are groundless. The number of intelligent and well-equipped farmers is constantly on the increase. National and State agricultural departments are contributing in a large measure to enlighten the farmer as to the character of the soil and the most scientific methods of farming. It is a well-known fact that the national government is redeeming millions of acres of arid land in the West by irrigation. In the older States the farmer is reclaiming vast quantities of land that was formerly regarded as useless. In many instances this is done by proper drainage. In others, by the scientific application of curative elements. The intelligent use of commercial fertilizers and the practice of rotation of crops are likewise adding to the richness of the soil. Added to all this is the employment to-day of up-to-date farm machinery. By the use of such machinery crops are put into the soil at the right period. The cultivation of the plant is done thoroughly and at the right time. The crops are gathered at the proper seasons, with much less waste than in former years. The by-products, such as cornstalks, are now saved. Vastly more work is crowded into a day of shorter hours than could be performed by the farmers under the old method. More time is, therefore, given to the farmer for the study of the science of farming, and for visiting various gatherings of fellow-farmers, and coming into contact with expert agriculturists. Under these scientific methods of farming, which are destined to prevail more and more, the fertility of the soil will be increased with growing demands. We need have no fears of the future."

Congress met on Monday, December 3, and things are stirring in Washington. Matters of grave interest will come before the body, but it is not likely that much will be done, save in the matter of appropriations, until the meeting of the new Congress next March. There are some members who would like to get in their worth forthwith. Indeed, they seem to be in unseemly haste. Contrary to custom, two members of the Senate got in resolutions concerning the discharge of the negro soldiers before the reception and reading of the President's message. These members call for a full investigation of the whole affair from the beginning of the trouble to the discharge of the troops. In the meantime protests and criticisms continue. At the same time the President gets quite as much commendation as condemnation. And he stands firm. The question also of the exclusion of Japanese from California public schools will receive attention. The matter is worrying the administration no little. Mr. Smoot's case, it is said, will come up early in the session. That will attract much attention.

LETTER FROM REV. N. B. HARMON.

Doctor Boswell—After 21 years' service in the Mississippi Conference, I have been transferred by Bishop Ward to the West Texas Conference, and stationed at Prospect Hill, San Antonio. The numerous letters of sympathy and love which I have received from my brethren have been greatly appreciated.

The kindness and love of my McComb brethren who so loyally supported me, even when I could not do the work necessary to be done, I shall never forget. The memory of the last two services, when that splendid auditorium (some of us think the most beautiful in the Conference) was crowded to overflowing to hear my words of good-by, I shall hold as one of my heart-treasures.

The pastor who succeeds me at McComb will certainly have as loyal a congregation of Methodists as can be found in Mississippi. It is a pleasure to me to remember that 228 of them were added to the roll under my ministry.

The following officials of the Centenary McComb charge, who so loyally supported me during my three years' ministry and who will just as loyally support the pastor who succeeds me, I shall never forget: S. Hibbert, W. T. Denman, J. B. Alford, W. P. Bonds, D. C. Lenoir, Dr. W. W. Robertson, M. H. Godbold, Byron Lenoir, N. N. Alford, T. R. Ratliff, Archie Jones, Norman Alford, Dr. P. M. Fugler, Mayese Holmes, J. D. Fly.

My friend, Lawrence Caston, will, I am sure, take his stand with the rest. Please announce to all my friends that my address is 2105 Buena Vista street, San Antonio, Texas.

AN APPEAL TO OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

What a wonderful providential opportunity opens to us in Korea! Mr. T. H. Yun, a Korean nobleman, a man of great ability and broad culture, renouncing the large estate which he would inherit, and enticing opportunities for political preferment, has assumed the presidency of a Christian school for boys in the city of Songdo. Suitable grounds have been purchased, largely with money contributed by Mr. Yun and his father, and the school is already in operation. But money is needed to furnish adequate buildings and equipment. It will require $50,000 to do what ought to be done. I believe our church will raise it. Because I want our Sunday schools to have a part in this great work, I have issued an appeal to them to take a free-will offering for this Songdo school Christmas week. I believe they will respond generously, if superintendents and pastors will explain the situation and emphasize the opportunity. Will you kindly help me by publishing this reminder, together with the accompanying note from Bishop Candler, in your next issue? Let superintendents please note the Bishop's suggestion that if, for any reason, the offering cannot be taken Christmas, it be taken the first Sunday in the New Year.

E. B. CHAPPELL,
Sunday School Editor.

BUILDING A HOUSE ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

I trust the Sunday schools of our great church will respond generously to Dr. Chappell's appeal for a free-will offering on Christmas day for the school at Songdo, of which Brother T. H. Yun is president.

No mission work of our church presents just such an opportunity as that presented by the Songdo school.

If we use it as we ought, we will, through it, affect for good the whole Korean nation.

It presents such a situation that we must meet it and go forward, or fail to meet it and go backward. It would not be saying too much, perhaps, to say that if we do not fulfill our pledges to Songdo, we may as well come out of Korea.

I am glad the Sunday schools are going to come to the rescue in this moment of crisis. Our Sunday schools throughout Southern Methodism can raise easily $10,000 that day. I believe they will. And $10,000 would erect a beautiful and commodious building at Songdo.

What a monument it would be to the Sunday schools of the home land! What a blessing it would be to the children and youth of Korea!

Come along, boys and girls, let us build that house on Christmas day. We will build it with nickles and dimes laid in a cement of love.

W. A. CANDLER.

P. S.—If any should fail to make an offering on Christmas day, let them bring a gift on the first Sunday in January. Let every one give something.

W. H. M. S.

"When I was a child" it always helped to heal a hurt to have the offender seem sorry, even if no more was said than, "I didn't go to do it." So now, by way of apology, I say I didn't go to be sarcastic, and I didn't go to forget my name. Forgive me, please.

ENCOURAGING.

Mrs. Dan Gillman, Corresponding Secretary of the Arcadia District, writes: "For the first time on record every report in by the first of December." What a grand old world this would be if all its inhabitants were "on time" with every duty. My grandmother used to tell of a "love-feast" in New Orleans presided over by Bishop Keener, which she attended "too late, and the door was shut." When she saw the Bishop again she said, "Never mind, Brother Keener, when I get to Heaven the door will not be shut." To which the wise man replied, "It will, my sister, if you are too late." We are so apt to think that any time will do.

BOARD MEETING.

At a called meeting of the Board, Nov. 13, it was decided to merge the Japanese night school at San Francisco into a home and school for the Koreans, who are beginning to come to our country. The services of our earnest Christian Korean were secured, who will become head resident of the home. The personnel of the Japanese school is so changed since the earthquake as to make it practically a new institution.

The above item is from Mrs. McDonell, who adds: "I am glad to tell you that the Woman's Home Mission Society is to have a place on the study course of the Young People's Missionary Movement. The book they are to study is written by Dr. Grose. When a circle takes up the Home Mission study it is to report to Miss Head, the Associate Secretary, and in this way a knowledge of conditions in the home land will be spread among the young people of the church.

"Miss Head begins her itinerary of the schools in a few days. She will visit those in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee, and return to Nashville in January. Let our women follow her with prayer, that she may be able to quicken the young women of the church with a sense of responsibility concerning their own consecration to service."

A QUERY.

Ever hear anything like this? "We have so many calls for money I don't see how I can pay any more into the Missionary Societies." Ever know a woman who had too many new bonnets to buy another, or too many dresses? When the "hail" shall come and "sweep away the refuge of lies," a whole lot of women who are "too poor to pay dues," will call for the "rocks," we fear.

BREAKING HER IDOLS.

A pretty story is told of Dr. Anandabai Joshee, the first unconverted Hindu woman who left her country. She came to America in 1883, and three years later graduated from the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia. Then she returned to her own country, and was elected physician in charge of the female ward of the Albert Edward Hospital at Kolha, but died shortly after her arrival.

Yamuna, as Dr. Joshee was called in her childhood, was the daughter of a wealthy and cultured Hindu. Her father owned many villages, and for the benefit of servants and peasantry kept a household priest to offer sacrifices, instruct the people, and keep clean the shrines and sacred images.

One day, when Yamuna was very young, she was playing with her dolls near the priest, who was setting in order a shrine. The little girl watched the old man as he washed the little images of jade or metal, oiled them carefully and set them back in their places. Suddenly it flashed across her mind that there was no difference between those images and her dolls. They did not move, neither did they cry out when they were rubbed so hard. She questioned her father about it.

"Father, how can a god bear to have his face washed by a man," she asked.

"Those images are not gods," he replied. "They are made to hold the thoughts of men to God when they pray. Some represent love, some the justice of God. My little daughter, can you pray to God without looking at any of these images?"

"Yes, indeed!" exclaimed Yamuna.

"Then they will be no use to you. You need never think of them again."

"And I never did," said Anandabai Joshee, in telling the story.—Youth's Companion.

LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

On Wednesday, Dec. 5th, the Sixty-first session of the Louisiana Annual Conference convened in Shreveport, with Bishop Seth Ward in the chair.

To many of the visitors Shreveport was a decided surprise. It is a bustling city of 30,000 inhabitants. A large number of automobiles traverse its more than twenty miles of paved streets. The streets and houses are lighted with electricity. Natural gas furnishes a cheap fuel supply. The water works and sewerage systems are far ahead of much larger cities. Shreveport is a city of palatial homes and large hospitality, and a delightful place for the holding of a Conference session. The Conference was entertained royally, and many were the expressions of appreciation of the cordial manner in which Brother W. E. Boggs and the citizens of Shreveport received the delegates and visitors.

Bishop Ward captured the hearts of the Conference. He presided with ease, was quick to decide all points of order, and held the Conference steadily to its work. Only once or twice in the excitement of debate was there any confusion, and then the perfect self-control of the Bishop restored order, almost at once. His Sunday morning sermon was strong, forceful and inspiring, and so great was the attendance that even the galleries were filled.

The new connectional officers made a good impression on the Conference. Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor; Dr. W. F. McMurry, Church Extension Secretary, and Dr. John R. Nelson, each in turn made addresses, and actually held the undivided attention of their hearers, (and these were Connectional Officers!)

There was no friction over school matters on the Conference floor. The report of the "commission" locating the college, and putting an agent in the field, was adopted without comment. The "Legal Conference" reported that it now held the old Centenary buildings in "fee simple." A wealthy layman, gave $2,500 to keep an agent of the college in the field for a year.

Domestic Missions was stressed to an unusual degree. The Louisiana Conference is swinging into line to take its place in the great "Forward Movement" of Methodism. Rev. N. E. Joyner, was appointed Conference Missionary Evangelist.

Formal announcement was made of the location of the Orphan Asylum at Ruston, where the Conference meets next year.

There were two cases of discipline. While Rev. J. R. Moore was found guilty of part of the charge preferred against him, yet owing to the many mitigating circumstances, he was given as light a sentance as was practical—suspension for three months.

Rev. N. J. Roberts was expelled from the ministry and membership of the Church on a charge of gross immorality.

The report on the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE gave great satisfaction to the Conference. Everybody seemed pleased with the increased circulation and the many improvements in the ADVOCATE.

Revs. F. S. Parker, R. J. Harp and K. W. Dodson were appointed to investigate the re-establishment of a Methodist depository in the building erected in New Orleans for that purpose.

The Conference did not have a death in its ranks during the year. Several homes had been broken by the death of the preacher's wife, and several of the great leaders had fallen asleep, and for these the memorial service was held. Bishop Keener and Tigert and Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, were honored by many tributes.

Resolutions were passed calling attention to the death of Mrs. C. W. Carter, Mrs. S. S. Keener and Mrs. J. W. Lea, and ordering the memoirs printed in the Conference Annual.

The most sensational episode of the session was the petition signed by sixty members of the Conference requesting the Bishops to discontinue for a time the transfer of men from other Conferences for the stronger appointments.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The Thirty-seventh session of the North Mississippi Conference was held in Corinth, Miss., beginning December 5, 1906. The attendance was as large as at any former session, and with the exception of about half a dozen, those present answered to their names at the first roll call. The preachers were in good health and fine spirits and seemed really to enjoy the occasion. The entertainment of the Conference was more than cordial—it was royal. Preachers never fared better. The weather was ideal from the beginning until Sunday, when there was rain. It was light, and kept nobody from attending the services.

Bishop Hendrix presided. His work up to the moment of reading the appointments was eminently satisfactory. How well the appointments satisfied the preachers we are not able to say, as we were compelled to leave before adjournment. The Bishop was much at ease—quite as much so as any we ever knew, and directed the work of the body to perfection, and the business from beginning to end was transacted without friction. There was only one debate, and it was short. Fewer speeches were made than at any Conference we ever attended—leaving out the talks of connectional secretaries, editors, etc. We hope this silence on the part of the preachers will not be kept up. We like to hear the preachers and laymen talk. It develops interest. Eight presiding elders reported. All of them together did not take up more than eight minutes of time. The Bishop caught them with guile. He called the preachers to report first. When they were through the presiding elders could say but little without repeating. The plan worked well.

When we left the Conference, the statistical secretary had not made his report, but as there had been advance in all the material interests of the Church, and as so many good revivals were reported with a net increase, we feel justified in saying that the increase in membership will be considerable. Should it turn out otherwise, we will be greatly disappointed. One or two brethren located, two or three new names were added to the Supernumerary list and Superannuated list, and one preacher, Rev. T. L. Foster, a superannuate, had died. But two or three preachers were received from other Churches, and a half dozen or more were received on trial. Thus the vacancies were more than filled.

The general work of the Church was well represented. Dr. Lambuth and Dr. John R. Nelson represented the Home and Foreign Missionary Work; Dr. McMurry the Church Extension Department; Dr. DuBose the Epworth League; Dr. Hammond the Educational Board; and Dr. John M. Moore the Christian Advocate (Nashville). Dr. Chappell, the Sunday-school Secretary-Editor, was advertised to speak at the anniversary, but failed to reach the Conference. At the last moment, Rev. A. D. Borders, a young member of our body, was pressed into service. Those who mistook him for Dr. Chappell were not disappointed. Those who knew the situation were more than satisfied. We assure Dr. Chappell that not only was the cause well represented, but his place well filled. With two exceptions the connectional speakers were the best we have heard since the days when Bishop Wilson and Dr. R. A. Young were missionary secretaries, and Dr. A. F. Watkins plead the cause of the superannuates.

Great crowds flocked to the services. The Conference room was well filled from day to day. Those who preached in the afternoon had many hearers. The large church was crowded every night to hear connectional dignitaries. There was not standing room in our church Sunday morning long before Bishop Hendrix entered the pulpit. The number of people turned away was sufficient to fill any other church in the town—and to other churches they went, where they heard good preaching. It goes without saying that the Bishop's sermon Sunday morning was a masterpiece—entertaining and edifying to the great concourse of hearers. The Bishop was mightily on the brethren—he was so kind and considerate and so courteous.

The Corinth Conference will be long remembered.

NOTES.

One of the most interesting features of the North Mississippi Conference was the course of lectures delivered by Bishop Hendrix on Shrunken Ideals. He delivered one each morning except Sunday. They were models indeed, and showed great learning and research. They were timely warnings against prevalent evils of to-day. Judas Iscariot, Hot Saul, Gehazi and Solomon being the subjects chosen to illustrate his points. Every one of these lectures was full of wise suggestions. Not once did the Bishop raise a doubt as to Bible history—though he dealt exclusively with historical characters. These lectures were much more profitable than some we have heard from men less wise but far more pretentious than the Bishop.

Dr. Lambuth was sound and sensible, and convincing. Dr. McMurry pleased the people much, and raised a good sum of money to plant our church in the "Big Pasture" in Oklahoma. Dr. DuBose went beyond himself. Drs. Moore and Nelson were before us for the first time, and both made good impressions on the Conference.

Rev. G. D. French is not a connectional officer, but he represents a world-wide enterprise—the American Bible Society. He is always welcome—none the less so because his talks are short.

The Conference showed interest in two important matters—the establishment of a great hospital to be conducted by the Church in the bounds of North Mississippi and adjacent Conferences, and to be located possibly at Memphis. The other matter was that of securing homes for superannuates. Commissioners were appointed to look after both interests.

A young preacher, a stranger, whose name we did not learn, was taken very sick about the beginning of the session, and became seriously ill. His condition was made known to the Conference, and a generous contribution was made for his relief.

Mrs. Lowe, wife of our brother, Rev. J. C. Lowe, was very sick on Sunday of the Conference, suffering with tonsilitis. The services of a physician were necessary. We did not hear from her on Monday, but trust the attack was not serious.

Rev. John L. Savage is the weighty man of the Conference—about as heavy as the Secretary of War, General Taft, but he is active, and somehow succeeds in keeping ahead of the brethren in North Mississippi in securing subscribers for the ADVOCATE.

The Conference was brought under obligation to Rev. J. H. Felts for his uniform kindness to the brethren, and his untiring efforts in their behalf. He did all in his power to accommodate, and succeeded. The only complaint was from brethren who had been hurt with kindness. The principal trouble being they were overfed. Corinth is one of the centers of the chicken and turkey trade.

Bishop Hendrix was entertained at the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elgin. We feel safe in saying that the Bishop does not meet with such entertainment at every Conference over which he presides. Were we given to the free use of adjectives we could not be too lavish in their use in this instance. Dr. W. B. Murrah will join me in this, for both of us shared with the Bishop the elegant hospitality of these noble and cultured Corinthians.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESSFUL HYMNS.

The greatest poets have not always been successful as writers of hymns. A hymn is a composition so condensed, so poetical and so devout that it fitly carries the aspiration and the praise of great assemblies upward to the throne. Beyond this, a hymn must conform rigidly to certain rules of melody, so that it may be set to music without loss of harmony. The successful hymn is almost always mated with a tune which belongs to it, and if it be sung to another air, there is a loss of freedom and lack of union in the vocalization by the congregation. Not long ago, at the close of a very eloquent sermon, the minister gave out Cowper's beautiful hymn:

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

"We will sing it all," he said. Whereupon the organist, instead of choosing a familiar tune suited to the noble simplicity of the stanzas, led off in a wailing funeral air which reminded one of the keening at a wake. A hymn should never be divorced, without good reason, from its married musical mate.

Among the hymns most perfect and exquisite in form, and most successful in conveying devotional thought are: "Nearer, My God, to Thee;" "Abide With Me, Fast Falls the Eventide;" "Lead, Kindly Light;" "The Church's One Foundation;" "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus;" "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me;" "Jesus, Lover of My Soul;" and "My Faith Looks Up to Thee." Many others arise in memory fragrant with blessed associations. Every one of these, you will notice, has a single controlling motive, is concrete in form and simple in expression. Each possesses a thought which is as the keystone in an arch.

The hymn writer whose efforts seem to me most spontaneous and most like the singing of a bird is Bishop Heber. I have read that he wrote the immortal missionary hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," at white heat, to meet an immediate need for a song which should assist the service of praise at a missionary convocation. In our hymn books there is nothing more beautiful, and indeed it would be hard to match it in poetic literature anywhere, than the hymn on childish piety:

"By cool Siloam's shady rill,
How fair the lily grows;
How sweet the breath beneath the hill
Of Sharon's dewy roses!
Lo, such the child whose early feet
The paths of peace have trod,
Whose secret heart with influence sweet
Is upward drawn to God."

The whole hymn repays study as an example of consummate literary excellence, as well as of unerring discrimination in thought, and as a lyric of praise.

Many of the paraphrases are happy instances of simplicity and majesty combined. The old Scotch version of the twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd, I'll not want," is finer than "The King of Love my shepherd is," although it is hardly fair to call the latter a paraphrase.

In the whole hymnal there is nothing nobler than

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come;
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."

The church owes much to Isaac Watts, who set so many devotional thoughts, like apples of gold in pictures of silver, in frames of melody. The church owes much also to Charles Wesley, to James Montgomery, to Bernard of Clairveaux, to every singer and player, from Moses and David on through the centuries, who has led the choir of praise.

The late Doctor Matheson, whose death is a grief to some one who never saw his face or heard his voice, but to whom he has been a guide and friend wrote, among other things, a beautiful hymn beginning:

"O Love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee:
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean's depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

From early youth Doctor Matheson was blind so far as the external beauty of this world was concerned, but few men have ever had clearer spiritual insight. Notwithstanding his infirmity, he wrote and taught and preached, and there was never anywhere a hint in his work that he was not as other men.

I do not suppose that a fine and successful hymn was ever written to order. The hymn must have grown out of the writer's life, must have crystalized out of real experience. Then it must have been written by one whose nature it was to sing, and one who loved to sing the praises of the Heavenly Father.—Christian Intelligencer.

WHAT HAVE I DONE?

Jack was a real good boy, and a prime favorite with teachers and school-fellows—such a willing, good-natured fellow, and such a lot of "go" in him, never shirking his work. One day he had a difficult sum to work out, and was bending his mind to it, when "Whack!" came the cane over his back.

"Sir, sir," stammered Jack, "what's that for?"

"Nothing in particular, my boy," said the master, with another whack, and then another, while he stood smiling at Jack and began to whistle.

Jack sprang up. "Sir, it's not fair not to tell me what I have done wrong," said he.

"You've done nothing wrong," and down came another whack with the cane.

By this time the whole class were on their feet, and rebellion seemed ready, when the stern command came, "Keep your seats!" and unwillingly the boys sat down. All seemed to think the teacher had gone mad. Jack resumed his seat, with burning face and smarting shoulders. Presently the teacher said, pleasantly: "I saw you driving your father's horse and cart yesterday, Jack, and was so sorry you had such a wretched horse to drive!"

Jack blurted out, "Our Bob is the best fellow in the place, sir!"

"Ah! then he was lazy, I suppose, yesterday," said the master.

"Not he," said Jack, angrily. His shoulders were enough to bear, but to hear Bob abused was more than he would stand. "He's as splendid and willing a little fellow as there is in the district. He never shirks work."

"So, so," said the master. "Well, I saw you yesterday, Jack, and I really thought your little horse was going in fine style when you stood up and slashed him with your whip. He shook his head, when slash you went again, and I saw Bob fairly turn his head to look at you, much as you did when you asked me why I gave you the cane cut: but you gave him several more cuts with the whip, though he had a fair load and was doing his level best. You own he is a willing fellow, always doing his best; so I thought, Jack, that you might be content for me to treat you, my good, obedient pupil, who always tries to please me, in just the same way. Fair play all around, Jack, eh?"

Jack dropped his face on his hands down to the desk, and he fairly shook with restrained sobs—a big boy as he was; then he stood up.

"I understand your treatment, sir, and I deserve it. I used the whip without thinking about it, and it's quite fair that I should have a taste of what I gave our fine little Bob. I'll beg his pardon when I go home."

"Well done, Jack. Shake hands. Go on with your lessons, boys," said the teacher.

"And I'll remember my lesson, sir," said Jack, with a comical rub on his shoulders: "but it's fair play all round."—Our Four-Footed Friends.

At the battle of Williamsburg a soldier who had the artery of his right arm severed by the fragment of a shell, and was fast bleeding to death, saw a surgeon going to the front for orders, and lifting, as best he could, his bleeding arm, cried: "Doctor, please!" The doctor dismounted, tied up the artery, and gave all possible relief. As he was mounting to go, the soldier said: "Doctor, what is you name?" "No matter," replied the surgeon. "But, doctor," said the wounded man, "I want to tell my wife and children who saved me!" There is not only a fitness but a nobility in telling who saves us.—E. P. Ingelsoll, D.D.

BEAR IN MIND

Every stitch of our clothing goes to you with our prestige of nearly half a century in business and our record of past success is our pledge and promise of the future. We manufacture nearly all our clothing for men and boys, "made-to-measure," as well as "ready-to-wear," out of material of our own importation, enabling us to keep pace with the styles as well as guarantee the quality, fit and finish of every garment.

And we save you on the price—don't forget that. The warmth and dryness of the backward winter season has left us with a trifle more Overcoats, Cravenettes and Double-Breasted Suits than we care to carry longer, and for that reason we are specializing a line of these garments to an inducingly interesting extent.

AN END.

A little girl went counting on,
To one—two hundred, say.
"Is there no end to it?" she asked
In quite a puzzled way.
I told her no—she had begun,
She might go on all day.
"There is an end to it—this end,"
She cried, with laughter gay;
And back she counted, back to one,
And ended so her play.

WHAT MAKES A BOY POPULAR?

What makes a boy popular? Surely it is manliness. During the war how many schools and colleges followed popular boys? These young leaders were the manly boys whose hearts could be trusted. The boy who respects his mother has leadership in him. The boy who is careful of his sister is a knight. The boy who will never violate his word, and who will pledge his honor to his own hurt and change not, will have the confidence of his feelings. The boy who will never hurt the feelings of any one will one day find himself possessing all sympathy.

If you want to be a popular boy, be too manly and generous and unselfish to seek to be popular; be the soul of honor; love others better than yourself, and people will give you their hearts and try to make you happy. This is what makes a boy popular.—Apples of Gold.

A HAPPY BOY.

John S. Wise tells the following negro story in "Recollections of Thirteen Presidents":

"I was fourteen years old when the great Civil War broke out. Regarding my age when it ended, I was much in the condition of a little darky on a Virginia plantation. He opened the farm gate for a visitor to his master, and scrambled up behind on the vehicle to ride to the great house. The visitor, impressed by his bright face and general precocity, looked back at him, and said: 'You are a bright little chap, my boy. How old are you?' Grinning from ear to ear, the boy replied: 'I dunno, sir, 'xactly how old I is, Mammy says I can't be but fo'teen, but by the fun I is had, I must be 'bout twenty-five.'"

FALLING OF THE LEAVES.

When the storm clouds gather behind the brown autumnal woods and cold winds begin to blow, then the bright leaves come drifting down in fluttering, fast-thickening showers until it almost seems as if the wind were the active agent, and actually tore the leaves from the trees. This, of course, is not the case. The leaf-fall only becomes possible after a long preparation on the part of the tree, which forms a peculiar layer of cells in each leaf called the cleavage plate.

This cleavage plate, or separation layer, consists of a section of loosely attached, thin-walled cells with a few strands of stronger woody fiber in among them; so, in the early autumn, although the leaves appear as firmly attached as ever before, they are really only held on the tree by these few woody strands, and the outer brittle skin or epidermis of the stem. Now, only a slight shock or wind flurry is sufficient to break the fragile support and bring the leaves in showers to the ground. We can see these woody strands broken through in the leaf scar of the horse-chestnut, where they appear as little round projections on the frozen surface and are often spoken of as having a fancied resemblance to the nails of a horseshoe. The hack in rank ash among other trees have similar markings in their leaf-scars and from the same cause. On the root of the wild sarsaparilla which grows just above the ground a like series of little projections will be seen upon the ring-like scar which surrounds the bud where the leaf-stalk has just separated.

Often the leaves separate and fall even on the quietest days, for their own weight is sufficient to break the frail support. These hushed and supremely tranquil days we all remember, when our October walks are accompanied by the soft, small sounds of falling leaves, by the rustlings and dry whisperings of their showering multitudes.—St. Nicholas.

TRAINING THE CONSCIENCE.

My boarding-house was within a block of two main lines of railroad. My first night's sleep there was frequently broken by whistles, bells, the rumbling of heavy trains, and the creaking of brakes. A week later an engineer might have halted his engine opposite my window and whistled indefinitely without breaking the continuity of my dreams. After some months, a friend, a young locomotive fireman, came to visit me. One night he suddenly wakened me, and I found him sitting up in bed, greatly excited. "Listen! There's a wreck!" he exclaimed. I listened intently, and could barely hear a whistle in the distance. We found there had been a collision between two freight trains over a mile from town.

The difference between us was this: The thing I had been training myself to ignore was the thing for which he had been training himself to listen most carefully. To me, the wreck signal meant nothing; to him it meant danger, perhaps death.

It is so with our moral judgments. One may hear the call of a given duty, but if he persistently refuses it, he becomes in time utterly unable to hear it. One may be shocked at some vulgarity or indecency, but if he pass it by without resisting or forming some conviction concerning it, a few repetitions will make him callous, and perhaps vile. The man who is careless about some detail of his work, thinking that later he will be more careful, may soon lose the power even to notice the fault in his work, however apparent it may be to others. On the other hand, care and faithfulness will increase the ability to detect things that are small, but significant.—Christian Observer.

THE INDISPENSABLE DAUGHTER.

"I cried my eyes out the night I accepted Frank," said a young wife to me. "Mother simply overwhelmed me with reproaches for being selfish and ungrateful in leaving her alone. And I could not see why I should forego a happy little home of my own, such as my sisters had. It was not as if she needed me to work for her.

Hard, relentless poverty, the indisputable need of supporting helpless parents on one side or other has quenched many a bright hope, made many a life dark and lonely. The quiet tragedies of this sort that only the super-observant eye ever sees! The young fellow "rusting" in a quiet village for the sake of the old mother who has not strength nor spirit left to accompany him overseas! The [illegible] who meekly bears the reproach [illegible] because she has nursed [illegible] years that [illegible] her watch, all when [illegible] gone! you[illegible]

We must cry "Well done," to such heroic [illegible] of hard duty. But what about the [illegible] cases when such self-sacrifice is demanded [illegible] not really required? A young bird in the home nest, sees how hard her mother would be without her. Who will care up her breakfast, straighten her cap, watch for a sunshiny hour to lead her out in the garden and place her hassock comfortably in church? The thought of mother's dull days and lonely evenings weighs heavily when Romeo falls on his knees. It is no use his pleading that his days will be dull and his evenings lonely without her. "You will find someone else," says Juliet tearfully. "Nobody but me can do for mother."

Poor little heroine! She is doing only the right thing; any other attitude would be inhuman. It is the right thing, and yet it leads altogether the wrong way, and she must not be allowed to do it.

For the solution of this fateful problem lies in the hands of the mothers, not the daughters. The sacrifice so fondly offered must be tenderly refused. She who gave the child its life must not refuse it life's greatest blessings.

To soften, alas! the mother does not take that view. The old grow inert, dislike changes; she pleads: "I cannot spare you, it will not be long." And so the fated hour, the one true chance goes by.

Look at it this way, dear lady. Suppose your child died. The thought gives a shock—but the young and strong often die. Would you not have to do without her fond ministrations then? And without doubt you would get used, as many another has had to do, to alien hands and the service of strangers.—Weekly Welcome.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1906.

One who possesses the proper sense of human rights, and has a desire to accord them to his fellow-creatures, will not be swerved from his purpose on account of their lowly origin or social status. Justice and the love of mercy will rule in every instance.

Grace and a good conscience will enable Christians to bear any kind and degree of persecution, whether inflicted by wicked men, or short-sighted and ill-informed professors of religion who see no good except in themselves. Let no good man be discouraged, for so persecuted were the prophets of old.

It is not infrequently the case that good men are stimulated to good deeds by witnessing the good works of others. They provoke one another to love and good works, but if at heart there is no other motive than to equal or excel some one else in good works, the doer will rob himself of his reward. Men should do good to the best of their ability, because it is right.

It is difficult for some men to recognize the providence of God except in a general way. That God concerns himself about men as individuals, or about the details of any man's life, they cannot see. To them, the many human inequalities, differences in circumstances, and the numberless instances of suffering, are so many evidences that God leaves men to take care of themselves. They forget that Jesus says: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered."

* * *

Young converts need the counsel and help of older Christians. They are sometimes overtaken in faults, and through weakness fall away when they have no desire to give up and go back to the world. Satan takes advantage of them even when they desire to continue in the right. St. Paul's exhortation was: "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

Human selfishness, and what appears to be unholy ambition, is apparent in nothing more than in the disposition of some to keep their church and their preachers prominently before the public. A certain amount of pardonable pride may be indulged on account of notable achievements of men of consecrated talent and energy, but to be forever parading before the world as the only denomination that has ever accomplished any good, or that has any men in its ministry worthy of mention, is unpardonably ugly.

THE TEST OF FIRE.

Fire is both a purifying and testing agent. Some material substances, as gold and silver, are made the better by passing through the crucible. Other substances, as wood, hay and stubble, are consumed. St. Paul takes the effect of fire on these different materials to illustrate the value of a man's work when brought to the test of the Day of Judgment. This day shall be to men what fire is to the material world. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is."

The supposition is, that every man who entertains the hope of heaven builds that hope on Christ, who is the true foundation, and entrusts his prospects and final reward by works. This is perfectly natural, and in line with the teachings of the Scriptures. But men are cautioned how they build even on a good foundation, lest disaster overtake the superstructure. Two houses may be built on foundations of the best material possible to be procured, but the superstructure of one is of indestructible and inflammable material, called by St. Paul "wood, hay, stubble," while the other is built of solid and durable material, represented by "gold, silver, precious stones." In case of fire one crumbles to ashes, the other stands unconsumed. There is all the difference in the world between a wooden structure and a modern fireproof building.

As men, to insure safety against fire, must use imperishable material, so men who build on Christ, to insure themselves against loss at the judgment, must put into their work such material as will stand the final test before God. Not every one who professes to build on Christ builds wisely or well. Some do; they put into their structure sound doctrine, and exemplify their principles by holy living. They are as trees planted by rivers of water, never failing to bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God. Others, it may be, quite as honestly and sincerely accept Christ as the true foundation, but the principles which enter into the construction of their building reflect no honor or glory on the name of the Master, nor do they tend to build up their followers in the graces of the gospel. Under the ministry of one men are soundly converted, and nourished and brought up in the knowledge and love of God. Under the other there may be so-called conversions, but they are spurious—no gospel life is imparted, no genuine fellowship in Christ is realized, no graces are cultivated, no good works follow.

It seems inconsistent and unreasonable that an honest man should put in motion a train of causes that lead to nothing but evil. But, judging the fruit of their labors by the divine standards we see that such is sometimes the case. Mormonism is paraded before the public as Christianity; its followers as "latter-day saints." Nobody will undertake to say that every Mormon teacher is a dishonest and disreputable character, yet, outside of Mormon ranks, everybody sees in the system nothing but a corrupt form of religion, and a menace to our Christian institutions and our republican form of government. This being true, it follows, that, if there is a good man in the organization who zealously teaches its doctrines, while he may be saved, barely, or, as St. Paul says, "yet so as by fire," his work will be destroyed.

We would not sit in judgment on the moral state of any man. If he claims to be a Christian, we would not arbitrarily say that he is not. But when we understand his doctrines and see their effect on the world, we are perfectly justified in determining whether or not those doctrines represent Christianity, and authorized by the Holy Scriptures, we feel free to condemn them if found contrary to the Word of God. If we fail in judgment—as doubtless we do sometimes—God will not. He will bring every man and his works to the bar, and there before men judgment will be given and the award made. The day shall declare it, and it shall be revealed by fire, and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

Jesus Christ our Lord is the one foundation. There is no other name under heaven whereby we can be saved. We can think of him in no sense that does not suggest to us all the elements necessary to constitute a good foundation on which to build our hope of eternal life. A good man's religion built on this rock, and sustained by sound doctrines and good works that justify his faith, like gold and silver and precious stones, will stand any sort of test. It is all the better for going through afflictions and persecutions. It will stand the fire of the last day, and the man himself be approved of God, and receive his reward.

THE IRON WHEEL STILL ROLLING.

We have seen no notice of a controversy between the Roman Catholics and Methodists of Meridian, Miss., except in a paper claiming to be an organ of a large and respectable body of Christians. That paper prints nothing concerning the merits of the controversy. We get an inkling, however, of the editor's spirit or spleen from the following paragraph:

While the Kilkenny cat fight between the Catholics and Methodists in Meridian waxed sharp and hot for a family scrap, children are usually more respectful to the grandmothers. How about the stream rising above its source, anyway? Then, is there not danger of a repetition of the coon hunter's act, that of one's cutting the limb off between one's self and the tree, and all going down in the muck together?

Maybe those who are constant readers after the editor can understand what he means. We see nothing in the paragraph except a sneer. We were used to the like of it forty or more years ago, but we were wholly unprepared to meet such in this day, and in a paper printed within the sound of railroad engine whistles.

Verily the Iron Wheel has not been forgotten.

PERSONALS.

Dr. J. V. Rice, recently transfered from Montgomery, Ala., to Louisiana Conference, and appointed to Rayne Memorial Church, spent a few hours in New Orleans yesterday.

Our church in North Mississippi is greatly bereaved in the death of Mrs. Megginson, one of the "elect women," the mother of our correspondent, Miss Mary Megginson. She was true and faithful in life, and had hope in her death. A soul has entered into rest. May the bereaved children find relief in the comforts of the gospel.

In this week's issue we give our readers a picture of Rev. D. E. Kelley, pastor Bogue Chitto and Brookhaven Charge, of the Mississippi Conference, who has sent in a list of ninety-nine subscribers during the year just closing. Brother Kelley is a true friend of the ADVOCATE, and we heartily thank him for the good work he has accomplished.

Resolutions complimentary to Rev. H. G. Davis, presiding elder, and Rev. K. W. Dodson of Mansfield, were received at this office after the paper had gone to press last week. It is now too late to publish them. Brother Dodson has been returned to Mansfield, and Brother Davis will be provided for at Monroe, and we trust everybody is happy.

LETTER FROM BISHOP GALLOWAY.

Bishop and Mrs. Galloway left Jackson, Miss., for Tampa, Florida, on Monday. Just before leaving the Bishop gave out through the Evening News:

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 6, 1906.

"Unable to respond personally to the hundreds of kind messages from friends throughout the country during my recent severe illness, I take this method of expressing my grateful and sincere appreciation of every living word and anxious inquiry and earnest prayer. From all classes and creeds, and from persons of high and humble degree, expressions of tenderest solicitude have been received. Such assurances of affection and confidence are the most precious heritage of life, and intensify desire, if added years shall be my portion, to render more faithful service to my generation. I am glad to live, if I can live to high purpose.

Assurance is given that I will probably soon be restored to robust health, and hope is entertained that length of days will be granted in which to joyfully labor. Grateful to kind Providence for restored health, and to multiplied thousands of friends whose affectionate solicitude have cheered and blessed me, I hope before very long to take up again my daily tasks.

Many hundred Epworth Leagues are behind with the ten-cent assessment. It is indispensible not only to the future success of the League, but also to meet present deficits that are a personal obligation on the General Secretary. It is a small matter to each League, but a great matter to us and to the Church. We trust each League President or other officer to become a committee to urge immediate remittance of this assessment from his League.

P. S.—Please have this note read before your League next Sunday.

A DELIGHTFUL OCCASION.

On Friday of the Conference Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brown of Corinth, had the present pastor and all former pastors at Ripley, Miss., present at the Conference out to their beautiful home, "Strabane," to dinner. It was a most delightful occasion. Dr. John G. Murray, a steward of the church at Ripley for thirty-five years, was at the head of the table with his grandson, Mr. Brown, Mrs. Katherine Brown, Mrs. Andrew Brown, Miss Sallie Etter Brown and Miss Etter Murray all formerly resided at Ripley, and were workers in that church, the last named lives in Ripley now. Dr. W. R. Lambuth was an invited guest. The following pastors were seated at the table: E. B. Ramsey, J. W. Honnoll, J. A. Bowen, D. L. Cogdell, D. W. Babb, G. W. Gordon, R. G. Porter, J. M. Wyatt, J. W. Bell, K. A. Jones, J. W. Anderson and G. W. Burks, the present pastor.

After speeches of welcome by Mr. Brown and Dr. Murray each pastor in turn spoke of his delightful stay in Ripley, and then Dr. Lambuth spoke of his appreciation of this unique occasion. An elegant dinner was then served, during which some good stories were told by Rev. E. B. Ramsey, the wit, if not the wag, of the Memphis Conference. Then followed a tender religious experience meeting, each preacher telling at what time of his life and where converted—some at home, one aboard ship, but the larger number at the altar.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh.

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and it Costs Nothing to Try. Send for it and See.

Those who suffer from it well know the miseries of catarrh. There is no need of it. Why not get it cured? It can be done. The remedy that does this is the invention of Dr. J. W Blosser, an eminent Southern doctor and minister, who has for over thirty-two years been identified with the cure of catarrh in all its worst forms.

He will send you, entirely free, enough to satisfy you that it is a real, genuine, "home cure" for catarrh, scratchy throat, stopped up feeling in the nose and throat, catarrhal headaches, constant spitting, catarrhal deafness, asthma, etc.

His discovery is unlike any thing you ever had before It is not a spray, douche, atomizer, salve, cream or any such thing, but a genuine, tried-and-true cure, that clears out the head, nose, throat and lungs, so that you can again breathe the free air and sleep without that choking, spitting feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It saves the wear-and-tear of internal medicines which ruin the stomach. It will heal up the diseased membranes and thus prevent colds, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting.

If you have never tried Dr. Blosser's discovery, and want to make a trial of it without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and a good, free trial treatment and also a beautiful illustrated booklet, "How I Cure Catarrh", will be sent you at once, free, showing you how you can cure yourself privately at home.

POINT COUPEE WENT DRY.

The Prohibition election held yesterday, Nov. 30, in Ward One, Point Coupee Parish, went overwhelmingly for Prohibition. The vote went over 4 to 1 in favor of Prohibition. I praise God for our victory, and pray that the day will soon dawn when the death knell to the liquor traffic will be sounded throughout our beloved parish, and then our State. Glory to God, and peace in Ward One to all mankind. Yours for right,

LUMBERTON, MISS.

Dr. Boswell: I desire to make mention through the Advocate of our meeting held lately in Lumberton. Revival services in the Baptist Church had preceded ours and were productive of much good. There was a spirit of earnestness and prayer evident in the community. On Sunday, Nov. 11, Brother Peebles came, and continued with us five days. Members of the church and Christians generally, cooperated heartily in the meeting, and the results were most gratifying. The immediate fruits were fourteen persons added to the church on profession of faith and by baptism, while the religious life of many was deepened and strengthened.

The congregations were large both by day and by night, and listened with evident interest to the preaching of the Word. The preaching was just such as any place needs: earnest, practical, forcible, and with spiritual eloquence that held the attention of the hearers from first to last. We are sure that the effects of the meeting will abide. We greatly rejoice at what has been done, and are hopeful as to the future. Brother Peebles has won for himself a warm place in the hearts of our people.

In the spring Brother Bradford, of Poplarville, was with us for some days, when his excellent ministrations resulted in five accessions by baptism and profession of faith.

In all fifty have been added to the church here during the year. The Sunday school, under the efficient direction of Brother Yawn, assisted by Brother Miner, continues to flourish.

Lumberton has many elements of a strong and useful church with devoted people, whose names I would like to record, only for fear that I might leave out some whom I ought to mention. Improvements have just been made on the parsonage at a cost of something more than six hundred dollars. As always, the finances of the church have been faithfully and punctually met. E. H. ORANGER.

Lumberton, Miss.

CRAWFORD STREET FOR FOUR YEARS.

The closing of a pastorate, long or short, always brings with it feelings of sadness and regret. Sadness because of separation from friends and fellow-workers, and regret because of failure to accomplish more.

Every community has, so far as the ministry is concerned, three classes of people: those who hold him in esteem; those who condemn him because of offenses, real or imaginary, and those who are utterly indifferent; and the writer claims no exception from his brethren in this regard.

Four, four years we have had all the experiences incident to a pastor's life—some regrettable, and much that has been pleasing; some reverses and some successes; some sorrows, more joys.

In the four years we have seen the disappearance of an indebtedness of nearly $6,000, and improvements amounting to more than $2,000 on the inside of the church; an addition of two hundred and fifteen to the roll, and nearly a doubling of the attendance upon Sunday school. He who shall have the good fortune to be appointed to this charge will find a sympathetic, willing membership to help him, and also a great deal awaiting his energies. Any man who will come ready to do his best work I believe will be satisfactory to the congregation. Certainly there is no demand for greater talent than can be found within our own Conference ranks, by a people who have so kindly and patiently endured this scribe for four years. With books all packed, and ready for tags, we are awaiting the marching orders of Bishop Ward.

The Sweet-Toned Epworth Piano

A Piano good enough for these musicians, is good enough for any one.

Dr. WILLIAM WADE HINSHAW,
President Chicago Conservatory of Music.

"For the last ten years I have used an Epworth piano in my home, and a portion of that time also, have one in my studio, where it was subjected to the severest strain and test. Both these instruments have stood the test in a surprising way. The tone of the Epworth is languid and sympathetic, making it a splendid piano to sing with. I can vouch for the durability, sweetness of tone, and general excellence of these pianos, and I gladly give them my unqualified recommendation."

Prof. E. O. EXCELL, whose music is sung around the globe.

"The Epworth piano I bought of you for my home is a superior instrument. There is a clearness, depth and richness in its tone which is particularly pleasing. I can safely recommend the Epworth to my friends."

Prof. CHARLES H. GABRIEL,
well-known composer of Sunday School music.

"For years I have used the Epworth in my studio, and now I have bought another for my home; they are exceptionally sweet-toned instruments. I feel that I can strongly recommend these pianos, because I know them to be good and believe them to be the best obtainable for the price."

Prof. GEORGE D. ELDERKIN,
Publisher Sunday School song books.

"The Epworth is a sweet-toned piano. I can say this without reserve, for I have used one in my studio for over three years. I can also recommend the Williams firm."

How to get a satisfactory piano at a satisfactory price

THIS pleasing picture was painted by a young lady from a photograph.

It is a beautiful home scene, but no picture can show the rich finish or the real beauty of the Epworth piano.

And no description can make clear to you the sweetness of the Epworth tone.

But place the Epworth in your home and the distinguished beauty of the design and the rich, mellow sweetness of the tone will not only delight you but will explain the popularity of the Epworth among musicians and music lovers.

It will pay you to read carefully every word of this advertisement, and then to send for our free Epworth piano book which tells how to get a satisfactory piano at a satisfactory price.

Our business was established in 1856 by our president, Mr. J. W. Williams, and we want to celebrate this our fiftieth or Jubilee year by making and selling more Epworth pianos and organs than in any one previous year.

We own and operate two well equipped factories here in Chicago, one for making the artistic Epworth pianos, and the other for making the sweet-toned Epworth organs.

We invite you to go through our factories so you can see the fine quality of the material we use and how our pianos and organs are made.

We think you understand that we do not sell our musical instruments through piano dealers or agents, but that we sell them all to homes and churches direct from our factory and at the factory price.

This direct-from-factory plan enables you to get a sweet-toned Epworth piano at a saving of about $100.00 and an Epworth organ at a saving of from $10.00 to $50.00.

Now, it is easy for us to make fine pianos, and it is easy to sell them, too, when we know who are wanting to buy, and to whom we ought to send our catalog.

It is still easier for us to sell an Epworth piano after we get a nice one in some home where we can refer to it as a sample of our work.

The Epworth is so beautiful in design and so sweet in tone that it sells itself—all it needs is an introduction to the prospective buyer.

There are people in every community who are thinking of buying pianos, but who, for both security and economy, prefer not to deal with middlemen, agents, dealers or supply houses.

These people would be glad to see an Epworth in the home of some neighbor and to learn from him about the satisfaction and the saving of dealing direct with us, the makers.

Now, here is where you can help us and we can help you.

We can help you by giving you a special reduction on a fine Sample Epworth Piano for your home and to which we can refer prospective buyers.

You can help us by showing your beautiful Epworth piano to your friends and neighbors, and by sending us the names of those who would like to receive our catalogs.

Now, if you would like to know what we are willing to do for you on a fine Epworth piano as a sample of our work, fill out the coupon at bottom of this page and send it to us at once.

We will then send our beautiful piano book and our Special Sample Piano Offer.

If you like our generous offer then you may select one of our fine pianos and have it sent on trial.

When the piano arrives you can give it a thorough trial to see if we have made a happy selection and have sent you the very piano you yourself would have chosen. And if you wish, you may have your friends "take a hand" in helping you to decide the question.

Then, if after a good trial you find the beautiful sample piano to be a nicer, sweeter toned piano than you can possibly get anywhere else for one half more, you may buy the piano on your own terms.

You may pay monthly, quarterly, annually, part cash or all cash or on any other reasonable terms. We like to accommodate our customers, and especially those who help us introduce our pianos. After you become the owner of an Epworth piano, we will pay you generously for sending names of piano buyers.

Now, if you would like a free copy of our beautiful piano book, with factory prices and our Special Sample Piano Offer, fill out the coupon and send it to us at once. Do not wait, but send the coupon in next mail or soon as you can.

CHRISTMAS LESSON.

John 1: 1-14.

Golden text: "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." John 1: 14.

We have been made sad by the study of the last days of our Lord's earthly life, and now the world calls on us to rejoice that the Christmas time is coming. Our thoughts linger still with the little company of disciples gathered on the Mount of Olives, gathered there for what they know not, for had they not asked Jesus: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" which shows that even after Jesus lived and moved among them in a transfigured body, they yet looked for a worldly kingdom. So with the parting promise of Power from the Holy Ghost, the Lord was taken up from them into a cloud from their sight. As they silently gazed after their departing Lord, it seems that they were not aware of the presence of two in white apparel, supposed to be angels, who said: "This same Jesus, which is taken up, shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Thus we are told of the last day of Jesus on earth. It is our privilege, yea a blessing that we leave the record of the prophets, their prophesies fulfilled, the life and works of the Savior, all revealed unto us, complete in all their sacred fullness. As we have meditated on the last days, we can, with readiness of mind, turn to the first days—the great advent of the Savior of the world.

It was a winter's night, on the hill-side near to Bethlehem, that shepherds watched the sheep, presumably intended for the temple service. The deep gloom of the hour before dawn was made bright by the glory of the Lord that shown about them, for an angel stood near and the shepherds were afraid. "Fear not," said the angel, "for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord—and this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall see the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger." The angel ceased to speak, the signal to the heavenly choir to burst into singing the song of threefold blessing to the world:

"Glory to God in the highest,
On earth peace,
Good will toward men."

Thus came the Prince of Peace to the world announced and attended by angels, and all through his life these heavenly attendants were ever near. Let us have the pleasing thought that they were the messengers from and to his Father. It is of a living Christ that we love to think, and to hope that of his divine nature we may partake. So at this time when the world, with loud acclamations, express joy at the coming of its King, our lesson calls us to study the Christ as the Word, the Light, and the Life.

John wrote the words in the text of this lesson, and they are deeply spiritual, because John learned them through loving and being loved. To learn of the deep things of God, love must be our teacher, for God is love. These words seem to us the preface of the Divine gospel written by the apostle that was closer to the Lord than any of the twelve.

Christ as the word was with God in the beginning, that is what is to us the beginning, the creation of the world. He was at the time when all things were made the same as he will be at the time when all things shall be destroyed, and when we shall have "new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

In him is life, for he is the gift of God. He is the light of men, for he has revealed to us by his life and teaching, that to follow him is the light shining in the darkness of our sinful nature. The darkness that doth not comprehend this shining light are those to whom he said: "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life."

This light was not to come suddenly, unheralded, in all its glory. The way was to be prepared. The people made ready. Hence, "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John." The same came for a witness. The voice crying in the darkness that comprehended not the true Light. Let not men think this voice was that Light when it was only sent to bear witness of that Light. The witness pointed to him as the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." The world of that day did not, and the world of to-day does not know him. But as many as do know him and have received him, to them he has given the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.

They are not born into grace by the will of man, but by the will of God. "No man can come to me except the Father, which hath sent me, draw him."

Now the world is filled with joy and gladness, because "The Word was made flesh," and dwells among us, and we behold his glory "From Greenland's icy mountains, to India's coral strand," where the everlasting gospel is preached and lived. So we join in the song as angels sang in Bethlehem, having the hope set before us that we will at last be with them around the heavenly throne, singing the new song of Moses and the Lamb.

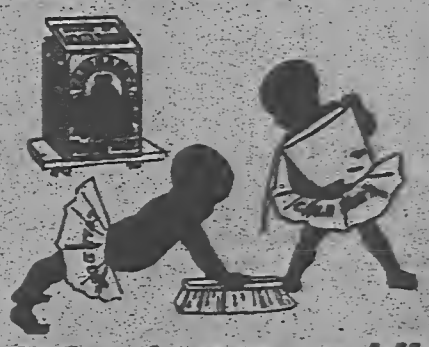
Shave a Bar of Soap, Dissolve in Hot Water

STRIKE those words from all recipes for household cleansing, for they call for waste work and useless bother.

Soap, you know, is not a bit of cleansing good until it's in solution (mixed with water), and made into suds. And then it's still of no use without the rub-rub-rub of human muscle.

Now, Gold Dust works in an entirely different way—instantly and totally dissolves in hot or cold, hard or soft water—and, without any aid from you, starts to cleanse.



GOLD DUST

is more than soap—better and more economical than any mere soap. It is a powder of power—but rightly directed power, that leaves the wash white, sweet and wholesome. With Gold Dust you can and should discard soap from wash tub, dish pan, sink and scrubbing kit.

No soap, borax, soda, ammonia, naphtha, kerosene or other foreign ingredient needed with GOLD DUST

For washing clothes and dishes, scrubbing floors, cleaning woodwork, oil cloth, silverware and tinware, polishing brasswork, cleaning bath room pipes, refrigerators, etc., softening hard water and making the finest soft soap.

AN AUTUMN OVERFLOW.

Dear Brother Boswell:—My people on the Crenshaw charge are now undergoing the experiences of an overflow. Crenshaw is a beautiful little town on the Yazoo Delta road, fifty miles south of Memphis, and at the foot of the valley hills. It is above the high-water mark, but the rest of the charge, which lies west and south of Crenshaw, has been under water for the last ten days. It will be at least ten days longer before travel can be resumed.

The cause of the overflow is the recent heavy rains on the upper Coldwater river. This river rises far up in the hills, and when the swollen stream from the recent rains reached the Delta, it overflowed its banks and spread over the country for miles. The cotton that was in the fields and in the pens has been swept away by the flood. Horses, cows and hogs have perished in considerable numbers. Timber camps were flooded, and in some instances the log teams of the same perished. Human life was preserved by the people outside overflowed districts, hastily providing boats, and going to the rescue. The high water forced some families out of their homes.

Some of the farmers will have to restock their farms, and all of them will have considerable repairs to make before they can begin a new crop. The older citizens say this is the worst calamity that has fallen on this section in years.

FRANCIS HARRIET ROBERT (nee Harris) was born Oct. 17, 1843, at Centenary College, died at Centreville, Miss., Nov. 15, 1906. She was the eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Harris, and was married to Dr. J. C. Robert, of Centreville, Jan. 28, 1879. Born of Christian parents, reared in an atmosphere breathing ever of God's love and mercy, she early became imbued with religion, and since childhood led a consistent Christian life. As an earnest, true member of the M. E. Church, South, as she lived so she died—in sight of glory. After long years of suffering with that dread disease, consumption, she fell asleep in Jesus, surrounded by her husband and six children, two sisters and many kind friends. Out of this life she crossed the borderland into eternity, leaving us the sweet comfort, "All is well." For several days before her death she would at times call all her loved ones around her bed and tell them of heaven, and of what they must be and do till they, too, shall cross the river. We can scarcely make her dead, so beautiful was her trust in Jesus, her visions of the welcome when she should reach the city of God. We think of her as just gone on a little while before to watch and wait for us. We almost fancy we can see her looking this way." So we kiss the chastening rod, whispering softly, "Thy will be done."

Into the bright beyond,
Gone from the home,
Heard the Savior's call,
"Weary one, come."

Out of life's shadows,
Into the light,
Into the endless day—
No fear of night.

Tired of the pain and strife,
Longing for rest,
She laid life's burden down—
God knoweth best.

Sad are our hearts and
Tears dim our eyes,
But God has made his own
In glory rise.

After the warfare o'er,
We, too, shall sleep,
Never to sorrow more,
Never to weep.

Oh, Father, hear our cry!
Hush every moan!
In our deep sorrow
Leave us not alone!

Good-bye, sweet sister, mine,
Wait for us there,
In the glad light divine,
Some day we'll share.

—Her Sister.

Mrs. ELIZABETH (Graves) PRICE was born in Alabama, September 26th 1836. She was married to John W. Price in 1860. There were born to them eight children, and of these three sons and two daughters are living. Her husband died twenty-two years ago, leaving the responsibility of rearing the children to her. She had seen some poverty, but before her death she and the children had been enjoying a degree of prosperity. Her interest in the church increased with her circumstances. At the last camp meeting at Lake she was a tenter, and some of the older preachers were nicely cared for by her. She lived for the last thirty or [illegible] in Smith and Scott counties, Miss. A member of the Methodist Church from her early life, she was always consistent. The end came Nov. 20, 1906, and very suddenly. There was no time to call in a physician or the children, who lived near by. But she was ready, she lived ready for death. We buried the remains beside the sleeping dust of the husband. May the loved ones follow on and meet her in the better land.

C. McDONALD.

On the evening of Sept. 14, 1906, the death angel visited the home of W. R. and Lula McCall, and took from them little Johnnie L., their son, who, had he lived until the 13th day of December, would have been 13 years old. Little Johnnie was a bright, intelligent boy; he joined the Methodist Church at Greenleaf on the Cockrum Circuit of the Sardis District of the North Mississippi Conference in the year 1905. It fell to his lot to suffer much before death came to his relief, in spite of all that loving hands and the best of medical skill could do. God saw fit to call him home. He left a father and mother, one sister and three brothers to mourn their loss. Weep not, dear friends, as those who have no hope, but try to live in a way that you may be able to meet little Johnnie in that upper and better world, where there will be no more parting and no more heart aches to endure.

A FRIEND.

Little LILLIAN ELSIE RAWLS, the only child of Bourbon D. and Arle J. Rawls, was born Jan. 18, 1901, and departed this life on the morning of Nov. 9, 1906. The sweet, pretty little girl with many beautiful curls flowing about her neck, is not dead, but she lives. She not only lives in the mind of her devoted father and mother, and all others who knew her here below, but she has gone up to live with Jesus and the saints and angels in our Father's home. This pure little, sweet girl was truly devoted to her mother, and she was loved and honored by her school-mates and all who knew her. She will be greatly missed in the home, but our loss is heaven's gain. We may not see it now, but God's way is best. Let his will be done! We trust that the bereaved parents will so live and pass this life as to meet God in peace, and see their darling little Lillian and her little brother, who preceded her to that bright world, and be with them in eternal happiness.

J. J. GOLDEN, Pastor.

MRS. LOU EMMA HUGHES was born in Smith County, Miss., Oct. 18, 1860; died Nov. 25, 1906. She was married to Brother J. W. Hughes, of Daleville, Miss., Oct. 2, 1879. God blessed their union with ten children—eight boys and two girls. She was preceded to the grave by two of her sons in 1897, and her husband on Feb. 24, 1904. Sister Hughes joined the Methodist Church at the age of fifteen years, and has lived a faithful member of the same. She was sick for quite a while, but was contented. Amid all her suffering she admonished her children to keep up family prayer, and at last to meet her in heaven. Just before the end came she prayed for her neighbors and for her pastor. May the consoling grace of God constrain the children in their bereavement, and help them to meet their loved ones in heaven! Her pastor,

COPPER IS KING

THOS W. LAWSON	JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER	H. H. ROGERS	SENATOR CLARK.
Says: "Copper stocks offer the biggest opportunity for money making in the world today."	Says nothing but puts millions of dollars into Amalgamated and other Copper stocks.	Says: "Lawson, we have verified your conclusions as to the value of Copper stocks as an investment."	Does not talk but draws $6,000,000 a year in dividends from one Copper mine, the United Verde.

The world's greatest financiers have seen the possibilities of Copper; they are pouring their millions into Copper Stocks; they are piling up their dollars mountain high with dividends from Copper Stocks; gold mines no longer interest them; the cry is—"Copper!"

Copper is the Safest--the Most Profitable--the Most Permanent Investment in the World Today

COPPER IS A SAFE INVESTMENT

The uses of Copper are extending every year. The demand is far ahead of the supply. All the present production of Copper in the world cannot supply the demands of electricity alone. All scientists agree that we are just beginning to learn the uses of electricity. As these uses multiply, so will the demands for Copper increase. The price is steadily going up. In the last few years it has risen from 11c to 19c a pound.

Thomas W. Lawson says: "A good Copper mine is really a safe-deposit vault of stored up dividends which cannot be stolen or destroyed by fire, flood or famine."

The Copper Mine is the Mine of To-Day.

COPPER IS A PERMANENT INVESTMENT

No man can tell how long a Copper mine will last because no man has ever seen one exhausted. The Rio Tinto mines in Spain have been worked for over two thousand years, and last year they were the third largest producer in the world. The Mansfield'sche mines in Germany have been worked for 700 years and last year they were the sixth largest producer. Copper was discovered in this country in 1845, and in the Lake Superior district the levels are a mile below the lake, yet last year they produced more Copper than ever before in their history. The famous Anaconda mine is steadily increasing its production. The United Verde in Arizona is turning out more and more Copper every year. No real Copper mine in this country has yet been exhausted.

COPPER IS A PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

One Copper mine that cost $1,200,000 paid in one year eight million dollars in dividends, while four of the largest Western trunk line railroads, with 17,000 miles of track, paid only $9,750,000 dividends. Thirty-two of the leading Copper mines in this country on a paid-in capital of $72,000,000, have paid over $230,000,000 in dividends, while no railroad in the United States has ever paid back its original cost.

The Steel Trust, with a capitalization of $1,400,000,000, netted only $74,000,000 profit last year.

Of the seven largest dividend-paying mines in the United States today, six are Copper mines.

No wonder the shrewd investors are hunting for good Copper stocks.

Investment in Copper Stocks Offers the Safety of a Government Bond with the Speculative Element of a Gold Mine.

OUR PROPERTY IS FAVORABLY LOCATED IN THE HEART OF A GREAT COPPER DISTRICT.

The Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company's property is located in Yavapai County fifty miles southeast of Prescott and twenty-four miles South of Jerome, Arizona, and in the same range with the great United Verde mine, which has paid over $18,000,000 in dividends to its stockholders. The Crown King mine, a great producer, just West, has produced hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Richenbar, which pays good dividends, is near us. North, South and West of our property are located mines of unlimited value, as well as the smelter plants to handle their output. At Jerome and Mayer are located three independent smelters, with a capacity to handle the entire output of the district. Cordes, our railroad station, is but 20 miles west of us, and it is from that point, when connected by the completion of a good wagon road, we will deliver our output and receive freight.

We have 280 acres with copper ore sticking out on every claim, and a 10-foot shaft has been sunk on Copper lodes on each claim. All this shows the presence of an enormous Copper deposit. In short, beyond the possibility of a doubt, there is Copper ore on the Company's land sufficient to keep an enormous plant running for generations to come. We do not believe there is any such showing of Copper as this property and this district exhibit anywhere else on the American continent. The great United Verde, the mine of Senator Clark, is some 24 miles North of us and in the same range; its main workings consist of only 40 acres; it did not begin to have the surface showing our property has; and it is turning out over 3,000,000 pounds of copper a month.

More than that—Copper Creek, the greatest unfailing water supply in the district, runs through our property for 1800 feet, and as water is absolutely essential, its value cannot be estimated.

We offer you a ground-floor proposition. With the ore actually exposed we can run a concentrator of 300 tons capacity as quickly as it can be erected, for an indefinite period. Unless every geological sign fails, within two years, with ample capital, we should be mining ore enough to supply a 5000-ton concentrator for generations.

We have had assays from four of these ledges with the following results of pure copper: 14 4-10 per cent, 17 7-10 per cent, 23 1-10 per cent, 20 6-10 per cent.

These were selected samples, and we are frank to say that no such ore exists in the deep workings of copper mines. On the property adjoining, however, on a vein which is traceable in ours, at a depth of 97 feet, ore was taken out which cannot be distinguished from the ore at the 400 and 500 feet levels in the United Verde Copper mine, which runs 6 per cent in Copper. This is above the average of the ore of the world's greatest producers, the famous Anaconda producing ore which averages only a little over 3 per cent.

300 tons daily of 6 per cent ore will produce $6,120.00 per day net profit, but our intention is to erect a concentrator of 1000 tons capacity. Such a plant would produce a daily profit of over $20,000, a yearly profit of over $7,500,000!

This will give you dividends on your stock of 500 per cent on your investment.

Think of it! 5 times your money back in each year! Does this startle you? Our neighbor, Senator Clark, is clearing over $6,000,000 each year, working 40 acres, 24 miles away, right on the same range.

Dividend paying Copper stock sells on the market at about 10 times the amount it pays in yearly dividends. This stock, therefore, on the above estimate, which you can get today at ONLY 15 CENTS A SHARE, should sell on the market at about $1.50 a share—at 50 times what you can buy it for today.

$45 invested now would be worth 2,250
$90 invested now would be worth 4,500
$300 invested now would be worth 15,000
$600 invested now would be worth 30,000
$1,200 invested now would be worth 60,000

Do these figures startle you? Read history.

$100 invested in Greene Consolidated in 1901 is now worth $8,700.
$100 invested in United Verde in 1897 is now worth $30,000.
$100 invested in Wolverine in 1893 is now worth $5,000.
$100 invested in Calumet and Pittsburg in 1903 is now worth $5,000.
$100 invested in Calumet and Arizona in 1902 is now worth $10,000.

ARIZINA LEADS THE WORLD IN COPPER MINES.

Beyond a doubt, Arizona has underneath her soil larger, richer deposits of Copper than any other section of the world. The ancient Spaniards and the Indians were known to mine the metal, while there is evidence that prehistoric races knew how to utilize Copper, and in their crude way mined and smelted it.

Today this territory is dotted here and there with working mines which produce millions upon millions of dollars worth of Copper, and in many places prospecting has revealed many more veins which are still undeveloped. At some points the ore crops out at the roots of the grass, widening out as it goes downward.

The mountains and valleys of this district are underlaid with such a wealth of Copper ore as exists nowhere else in the world.

OUR BIG ADVANTAGES OVER OTHER GREAT COPPER MINES.

All the large copper mines that we have quoted have had to expend from one to four million dollars in smelting plants. There are THREE large independent smelters within hauling distance of our property, obviating all necessity on our part of this tremendous outlay of money. Therefore, all we need to do is to concentrate our ore, an inexpensive process, haul the concentrates to the smelter, and there receive our money. This puts us practically in the same position that these other large Copper mines attained only after the expenditure of millions.

The executive and finance committee of the Consolidated Copper Mining Company has authorized the sale of a limited amount of treasury stock at 15c a share. Par value of this stock is $1.00 a share, and we believe that within one year it will be worth a dollar a share on the markets of the world; nor will it stop there. A good Copper stock will rise and rise till the owners become dizzy; there seems hardly any limit to its valuation. As our shafts go down, this stock will go up in value. We, therefore, reserve the right to advance the price without notice. If you are wise, buy stock now and thus secure the benefit of the future advances in price.

Why We Sell Stock

We have a great property, but we need money to develop it. If a farmer owned a quarter section of land and had only a spade to cultivate it with, it would take years of toil for him to get money enough to buy proper machinery to work it to advantage. So it is with a mine. If we went to a capitalist he would demand the lion's share; but we believe the American people will be glad to come in with us and help us to make this property the greatest Copper mine on the continent. So we go to YOU, relying on your judgment and sound common sense, and ask YOU to join with us, man to man, share and share alike, in this great enterprise. With YOUR aid, we should make a second United Verde of this property. With unity there is hardly any limit to what can be accomplished. The day will come when you will be proud to be a stockholder in the Consolidated Copper Creek Mining Company.

WRITE TODAY—OR, BETTER, TELEGRAPH—ORDERING NUMBER OF SHARES YOU DESIRE.

At the rate subscriptions are coming in the present allotment will not last long. The price will then advance, and its rise should be rapid and permanent. THE METHODIST REVIEW—A PLAIN TALK.

By Dr. Gross Alexander, the Editor.

All our preachers and leading and reading laymen, as well as our bright women, ought to have it and need to read it:

1. Because it is devoted to careful and thorough study, first, of the great events of the time, such as the Russo-Japanese War, the future of the Far East, the crisis in France, etc.; secondly, the great tendencies of the day, such as the tendency toward Church federation and Church union, the general movement toward the disestablishment of State Churches and the separation of Church and State, the growing movement toward city evangelization, etc.; thirdly, the pressing problems of the times, such as the immigration problem, the labor problem, the race problem—all of which are burning problems in the South at this moment; fourthly, current thought on great subjects, such as philosophical theories, science, evolution, biblical criticism, education. It will not wholly neglect studies of academic interest—in history, in literature, in art—but it will be a forum rather than a museum.

2. Because we all need, especially our preachers, and most especially those who are in places removed from the advantages of great schools and of city life—we need the stimulus and stir that come only from the excitement of actual contact with current movements and current thought. Without something to keep us going we are all apt to stagnate. Many have got into that bad fix already. We get into ruts that sometimes wear so deep that we get completely out of sight of the stirring, rushing world around us. The reading of our standard old books, though they are of primary value, is not sufficient. But there are many who cannot afford to buy the new books, even if they knew what books to buy. Moreover, a book treats, as a rule, of only one subject. The Review treats of a dozen or more living subjects in each number, and it keeps its readers interested in, as well as informed about, the great subjects that are stirring men's blood today. It will give live articles by live writers on live subjects for live readers. If it does not find live readers, it will try to make them. We hear the complaint from different quarters that many of our preachers do not read, and consequently they do not keep up with the procession. They drowse and shrivel, we are told. If there ever was a day when, in order to be effective, men needed to be awake and alert, it is now, now, now.

3. Because the Review, by means of its book review department, keps its readers in touch with the important books of the day—a matter of necessity. This department is, for some of our able and wide-awake readers, the best part of the Review. Dr. C. M. Bishop, of Missouri, writes to that effect. Then it serves as a guide in the selection and purchase of books for one's own library. A preacher of the Tennessee Conference said to the writer that he had bought two hundred and fifty or three hundred dollars' worth of books that turned out to be worthless, and his hard-earned money was thrown away because he did not know what books to buy. The book reviews are not all written by the editor. The majority of them are written by leading scholars of the day, selected by the editor because of their special knowledge of the subjects treated. Each book review is signed by the writer, and the review is not a mere expression of opinion, as in some journals; it gives a synopsis of the contents, or a statement of the drift and gist of the book, from which one can get a good impression, even if he does not get and read the book itself.

4. Because the ablest and best men, not only in our own Church but in other Churches, and in all parts of the country, are secured to contribute to our quarterly feast of good things.

5. Because a Review of our own furnishes a medium for the broad discussion of matters pertaining to our Church such as no other periodical could admit, as, for example, the New Statement of Faith. On this one subject alone we have had elaborate articles by Dr. Tillett and Dr. Denny, and shall have articles in the next two numbers, one by Bishop Hoss and one by Bishop Hendrix.

6. Because the Review supplies a means for the development of writers among our own people. We have gifted men and women who have ability to write well. The Review furnishes them both the opportunity and the incentive for the exercise and development of their talent.

7. It is the purpose of the editor to devote a liberal space to the study of biblical subjects and to Bible exposition. In other words, the Review will be, in part, an expository journal.

8. The editor will furnish, in each issue, editorial paragraphs, giving a synopsis or statement of the gist of each contributed article, serving for the convenience of the reader as a sort of pathfinder and help in reading.

In short, the Review is intended to be, and will be made, one of the most important educative agencies in our Church, working with and supplementing other agencies now in use. It will be a sort of portable institute, a circulating university, furnishing a course of study on carefully selected subjects by choice and able writers, which one can carry about in his saddlebags or take along in his suit case. The January number will be out in a short time. In this number there will be articles on "The Church and Social Discontent," on "The Russo-Japanese War," on "The Union of the Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches," on "Modern Reform Judaism," on "Browning's Poetry," on "The Italian Renaissance," on "The Work of the Small College," on "Methodism in Continental Europe," on "The New Statement of Faith," and on "The Dictionary of Christ and the Gospels;" and by the following writers: Bishop Hoss, Bishop John H. Vincent, Prof. Shailer Mathews, Dr. S. H. Wainright, Dr. Ira Landrith, Dr. J. A. Kern, Rabbi Enelow, W. P. Lovejoy, Prof. Walmsley and Dr. James Hastings, of Scotland, the editor of the great "Hastings Dictionary of the Bible." The January number will contain a tribute to Bishop Tigert by the editor, who was his lifelong friend. The number will be enriched with a speaking picture of the Bishop, which his friends will want to preserve. There will be book-reviews of Winchester's "Life of Wesley," "The Ideas That Have Influenced Civilization," Ladd's "Philosophy of the Christian Religion," Prof. Briggs' "Commentary on the Psalms" (in the International Critical Series), "The Bible as English Literature" (by Prof. Gardner of Harvard), "The Apostolic Church," Gordon's "Quiet talks about Jesus," "The Christian Movement in Japan," Murphy's "Problems of the Recent South," and recent books on New Testament Greek. In the Round Table is a graphic account of Bryan's visit to Japan by W. F. Towson; a strong arraignment of the liquor business by Bishop Fitzgerald; and a thoughtful and practical paper on "The Defect in Present-Day Education," by Miss Mary Helm.

About five hundred new subscriptions have been added in the last few months. Why may we not have five hundred more to begin with the January number?

TO THE YOUNG WOMEN OF THE CHURCH.

As I begin this message to you, I have a vision of the multitude of young women who are included in the class to whom I write: the young women of our beloved church. It is nearing Christmas time and the light from Bethlehem's star shines on you as in my vision I see you with upturned faces waiting for my message. I would speak to your intellects and to your hearts today, for I want you to weigh your talents and your privileges and to answer the questions which I ask: How much do you owe to Jesus Christ? What have you done to discharge your obligation?

I heard a story the other day which might well be called a spontaneous answer to the revelation of a divine sacrifice. A poor Bedouin woman came a three days' journey to visit a missionary. She had never heard there was a Christ and she was so overpowered that when she heard of his death she exclaimed: "I will have blood sacrificed; the choicest of my flock are his." She was much puzzled to hear that Christ had done it all and required nothing of her; that the perfect sacrifice had been offered once for all. She replied, "But I must show my love. I will sew a robe for the poorest of my tribe and tell him, 'Master, I do this for thee, for thou didst so much for me.'"

For two thousand years we have known of our blessed Christ and yet three quarters of the world have never heard of him. Can any effort be more worthy of a young woman's powers than to make him known to women like this poor Bedouin whose gratitude puts ours to shame?

God is calling to you, young woman, because he loves you and needs you in his work. Some of you graduated last May—you have had gracious opportunities for developing every talent which God has given you and now he asks your interest in that which is nearest to his heart—the extension of his kingdom. A young woman exclaimed after attending a missionary meeting planned and conducted by young women, "I wish I could set this meeting down in some auxiliaries in the churches that I know to give the women an object lesson." In many societies the officers and active members are the same women who bore the responsibilities ten or fifteen years ago. God calls you to get ready to assume these responsibilities when he summons your mothers to their reward. Some young women whom I have met, though graduated with distinction from Christian schools, have been distressingly ignorant of missions and their administration. When the women who are now in charge die, shall the race of missionary workers become extinct?

God calls you for your own sake. There is a law governing every living organism in God's kingdom, viz.: every thing that lives must grow. Those of you who love flowers and wish to have your rooms filled with their fragrance in winter have often noticed the plant begin to droop and the leaves to look lifeless. What is wrong? The plant has not room for its energies. The flower-pot which contains it is too small. The law of life, which is growth, demands both sustenance and space. Pent up, the plant which should blossom in rich beauty, remains stunted and dwarfed, a mere skeleton of what it might have been.

The same law of life demands that you grow and no subject can engage your thoughts that will expand your mental and spiritual powers so fully as that which engaged the thought of the Son of God, viz.: the redemption of the world lost in sin. Your soul is too great to be cramped in the narrow dwelling of selfish aims.

God calls some of you to separation from home and loved ones. He calls you to separation unto himself. Are you resisting his call? God forbid. He has great need of you in heathen lands. Dr. Margaret Polk, in charge of our hospital in Soochow, China, is in great need of a medical missionary to share her grave responsibilities. She ought to be appointed at the next session of our board. Added to medical skill, the candidate must be a missionary in purpose. Young woman who has had medical training—does not this need speak to you as a call from the Great Physician?

Every missionary in every field is overburdened. In the work of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions the forces in China and Korea are decreasing in the face of unprecedented opportunities. The same is true in every other field. Has the hopeless despair of the heathen world ever caused you a groan or a heart ache or one act of real self-denial? O, young woman, to whom God has committed the trust of talents and opportunities for their development—would you give pleasure to our God—would you know the highest joy known to woman? Surrender yourselves to God for service and ask him to show you where you can serve him best.

Give your Lord a Christmas gift that will bless the world and cause joy in heaven—the gift of yourself. I send this message to you with the prayer that you will write to me the joyful news of your surrender, and that before the New Year dawns you will have told him, "Master, I do this for thee, for thou didst so much for me." Yours in hope and love,

MARIA LAVNG GIBSON,
President Woman's Board Foreign Missions,
M. E. Church, South.

IS INFANT BAPTISM AN EVIL?

NO. 3.

Not long since the writer was told by a Baptist minister that Dr. Graves is the standard for doctrine and authority in his church. After reading a little book by Dr. Graves, "The Ministry of John The Baptist," I pointed out some contradictions to this Baptist brother, and he reminded me that Dr. Graves wrote the book while in his dotage, sitting in an invalid's chair. Yet this book was placed in my hands as a sample of their doctrine and theology. In the first chapter of this book the author takes the position that there was no church in existence for some centuries after the days of the apostles but the Baptist Church.

Now we are in a position to see something of what this Baptist (?) Church believed in and practiced in the early centuries. We begin with Justin Martyr, who wrote A. D. 140. He says: "We have not received that circumcision according to the flesh, but that which is spiritual, and we have received it by baptism, and it is enjoined on all to receive it in like manner." It is plain that he here takes the position that water baptism was instituted in lieu of circumcision. Again he says: "Then we bring them to some place where there is water and they are regenerated by the same way of regeneration by which we were regenerated for they are washed with water in the name of the Trinity." In another place we hear him saying: "And many, both men and women, who have been Christ's disciples from childhood (baptized in infancy, of course) remain pure at the age of sixty or seventy years."

Now when we remember that Justin Martyr was born eleven years before St. John died, we must conclude that he was in a position to know something of the mind of the apostles as to the place of children in the church.

Next we have Irenæus, who wrote A.D. 184. This is forty-four years after Justin Martyr wrote. He was born A. D. 97, four years before the death of St. John. He wrote: "For he (Christ) came to save all persons by himself: all, I mean, who were regenerated (bear in mind they used the word regenerate, and sometimes other words, to mean baptism) unto God, infants and little ones, and children and youths and elder persons." No one will dare deny that he means baptism by the word regenerate. First, because as water baptism was understood to be the exponant of the true spiritual regeneration it was often spoken of as the thing itself. The word expressed the idea and was so used. When James said, "Ye are saved by works," he did not mean that works are in virtue for cleansing the soul from sin, but that the works are outward manifestations of some inward heaving grace. So, if the early writers understood that water baptism would regenerate the soul it was only in a secondary sense. Viewing it as associated with the saving grace, they thus spoke of it as if it were the grace itself. In the second place, it cannot be supposed that the early writers believed that infants were actually regenerated by the operation of an intelligent faith. So they must have meant water baptism when they spoke of little children and infants being "regenerated unto God." As St. James expressed the idea that if there is really an saving grace in the heart it will be shown in the life by works (hence saved by works), so the ancient Christian writers spoke of the state of saving grace in which children are from birth, and express it by outward sign—the idea of water regeneration for both infants and adults. Perhaps others held to this view, but, as a whole, the prominent teachers of theology were with Cox.

So the statement of Irenæus is agreeable to that of Justin Martyr already given. "Then we bring them to some place where there is water and they are regenerated in the name of the Trinity." Irenæus was trained in the school of Polycarp. This Polycarp was Bishop (it seems they had Bishops in the Baptist Church in those days) of Smyrna in all probability receiving his appointment there from the Apostle John. Indeed, he was a disciple of St. John the divine, so declares Irenæus, who was his pupil. We learn that Polycarp was martyred after eighty-six years in the Christian faith and service. When he was executed, his enemies being impressed with his venerable appearance, desired to save his life, and rather entreated him to revile Christ. He replied: "Eighty-six years have I served him and he never did me wrong: and how can I now blaspheme my King that has saved me?" He was burned alive. He was held in such profound reverence by the other Christians that the enemies burned his body lest his friends should begin to worship him.

Now, Irenæus positively and distinctly states that "Polycarp was taught the doctrine of Christianity by the apostles, particularly by John, with whom he had familiar association." The testimony of Irenæus, therefore, in this point is of immense value as it furnishes an unmistakable historical link uniting the apostolic age with the rising church of the second century immediately after the death of the apostles. Irenæus further says: "I can tell also the very place where the blessed Polycarp was accustomed to sit and discourse; and also his entrances, his walk, the complexion of his life, and the form of his body, and his conversation with the people, and his familiar intercourse with John, as he was accustomed to tell, and also his familiarity with those that had seen the Lord." Also his miracles, his doctrines, all these were told by Polycarp in consistency with the Holy Scriptures as he had received them from the eye-witnesses of the doctrine of salvation." Now, after hearing these most illustrious writers right back in the shadow of the inspired apostles, can we not have a clear idea of the mind of Christ as to the place of infants in the church?

Here we introduce the testimony of another great teacher of the early church. We give a quotation from Origen. History tells us that his father and grandfather were Christians before him. His father was a teacher in a literary center—Alexandria. The Christian faith of this family then began in the apostolic age. His grandfather, no doubt, heard the apostles preach. Now remembering what Irenæus said about Polycarp having conversations with John and hearing the testimony of those that had seen the Lord, listen at what this famous Origen says: "The church had from the apostles a tradition to give baptism to infants." Here is direct testimony of one whose father and grandfather had been taught from the time of the apostles, and he [illegible] people [illegible] the sanctum seasonal certain melancholy lowering of spirits in [illegible] toward winter, and dreading the time of [illegible] snow and leafless trees. Together [illegible] with its thought of fulfillment, with its [illegible] harvests, and pageantry of colors and [illegible] quiet and peace, brings only a sense of emptiness. A peculiar felicity of choice has given [illegible] our period of annual Thanksgiving in late November, almost in the gateway of winter, when the household arrangements for cold weather are completed, the children are settled at school and the men [illegible] engaged in business. Bright fires are on the hearth, bright lamplight covers the evening, a circle of dear ones [illegible] the table. The home gathers its [illegible] group night after night; father, mother, little folk and perhaps beloved old people, are there in kindly fellowship; and the cold weather outside does not matter, for there is blessedness and heart-warmth within the doors. Spring and summer, with all their [illegible] beauty, give the note for scattering forces, for travel here and there, [illegible] abroad; autumn sounds the rally of the kindred and at Thanksgiving sounds far afield a summons for the trooping homeward of the family clans, the return, with their children, of grown up sons and daughters to the old homehead and the mother's knee, and the united acknowledgment of our dependence as God's children upon our heavenly Father.—American Messenger.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The ninety-third session of the Mississippi Conference convened in the Main Street Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., Dec. 12, 1906, Bishop Seth Ward presiding. The devotional exercises were led by the Bishop, and joined in heartily by the members of the Conference. The Scripture lesson was from Second Corinthians, fourth chapter.

The roll was called and one hundred and thirty preachers answered to their names, twenty-five not responding. The roll of lay delegates was called, and very few were present. Many of those came in later.

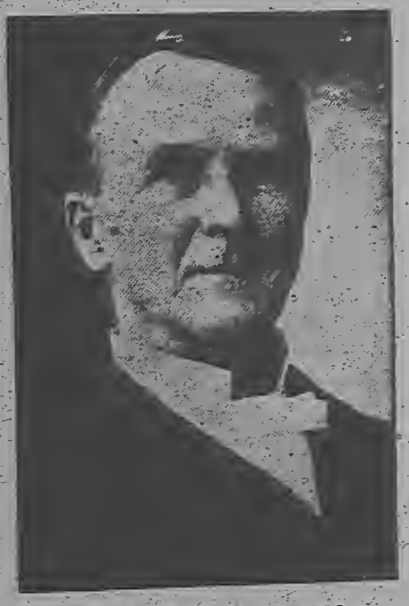
The names of the presiding elders were called, and each was passed in examination of character and reported briefly on the status of his district. These reports all showed a marked advance along all lines. Many thousands were converted, a large increase in membership and many new churches and parsonages have been built.

The names of the following preachers were called, and they passed in examination of character and were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation: R. A. Sibley, J. H. Evans, D. G. W. Ellis, R. B. Downer, H. R. Caldwell, H. D. Howell, N. B. Young, P. Howard, W. G. Backus, Ira B. Robertson, R. L. Phillips, L. J. Jones, R. D. Norseworthy, J. A. B. Jones, J. W. Brown, W. W. Cammack, G. R. Ellis, J. W. Sandell, J. L. Sells, H. R. Singleton, W. W. Simmons, F. A. Grimes and J. T. Nicholson.



The following were passed in examination of character and were referred to the committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation: W. L. C. Hunnicutt, J. W. McLaurin and J. G. Cammack.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, secretary of the Board of Church Extension; Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday school editor; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Colporter; Rev. R. S. Clarke, of the Montana Conference, and Rev. J. W. Atwood, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Laurel, were introduced to the Conference. Other connectional officers and visitors were introduced later.

Reports from the Board of Missions, Church Extension, Publishing House, Whitworth College, Edward McGehee College, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Sunday school Board, Epworth League Board, Board of Education, the trustees of the Endowment fund, Correspondence School, Port Gibson Female College and Millsaps College were presented. These reports were referred to appropriate committees.

Rev. G. D. French represented the American Bible Society, and Dr. J. R. Nelson the Home Department of the Board of Missions. Dr. Murrah of Millsaps College plead earnestly for the endowment of the college, asking as the goal, $500,000. At the conclusion of his speech, on motion of Dr. J. M. Weems, the Conference unanimously joined the North Mississippi Conference in requesting that a financial agent for Millsaps College be put in the field.

The following brethren were announced as having been received by transfer: H. C. Brown, Columbia Conference; J. W. Ramsey and W. H. Mounger, from North Mississippi Conference; B. H. Rawls, South Carolina Conference; L. T.

REV. T. W. ADAMS.

Roberts and G. D. Anders, from the Louisiana Conference; Felix R. Hill, Jr., and W. O. Sadler from the Kentucky Conference; D. R. Hardin, from the Oklahoma Conference.

There were thirteen applicants for admission on trial into the traveling connection, viz: Joseph B. King, Charles T. Stepp, and Charles H. Herring from the Brookhaven District; Ethel C. McGilvray from the Jackson District; Henry H. Griffin, from the Vicksburg District; Benjamin E. Meggs and John F. McClellan from the Forest District; Robert A. Allums from the Meridian District; Matthew R. Jones, Eason L. Widdon, Arthur A. Phillips, and Charles T. Nobles from the Seashore District. All were received.

John A. McBryde, from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and James T. McVeigh, from the General Baptist Church, were received into the Conference in the class of the first year. Matthew J. Miller was readmitted.

The following were ordained: John H. Grice, T. M. Bradley, E. W. Lipscomb, J. V. Bennett, Charles O. Miller, Matthew R. Jones, Joseph B. King, Charles T. Stepp and C. H. Herring to deacons orders: William B. Jones, James W. Thompson, Shadrac N. Young, James L. Red, Claiborne C. Gibson, John E. Gray and John R. Hays to elders orders: W. W. Murray, J. M. Carley, R. P. Fikes, J. H Grice, T. M. Bradley and James M. Lewis were received into full connection.

The report of Rev. Waldo W. Moore, the President of the Montrose High School, was presented. From this school is being evolved the Mississippi Conference training school. During the year the dilapidated old building has been replaced by a handsome two-story brick building, valued at $10,000.00. While the school is a training school, it has a literary course also, and prepares boys and girls for the sophomore classes of the Methodist colleges of Mississippi.

A proposition was made to relegate Whitworth, Port Gibson and Edward McGehee Colleges to the class of intermediate schools, as feeders to Millsaps College. The motion was vigorously opposed by Dr. Cooper, president of Whitworth College. He declared that such a course would be an act of injustice.

Report No. 1 from the committee on Publishing Interests contained a section protesting in plain language against some deliverances in recent issues of our connectional organ, the Christian Advocate, published at Nashville. Action was taken under the following preamble and resolution:

"Whereas, the Nashville Christian Advocate, in its issue of Sept. 7, contained an editorial in the following language: 'Is immortality an essential endowment of the human soul? Must the soul live always, though it would choose strangling rather than life? Are the lost, the finally impenitent, as surely immortal as the saved in heaven? Is consciousness of the pains of hell as surely eternal as enjoyment of the bliss of paradise? We do not know. That man is essentially immortal is thought to be the teachings of the Bible, but our opinion is it is silent on this point. We are ready, moreover, to concede that it would be a relief to us if a closer study of the Bible and the facts of human consciousness should bring the conviction that the unhappy dead will sooner or later lapse into absolute and final unconsciousness.'

"And, whereas, the above quoted language expresses doubt concerning the Scriptural doctrine that the wicked shall go away into everlasting punishment;

"And, whereas, this is one of the fundamental doctrines of our holy religion;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That we enter our earnest protest against the use of our great connectional organ for the dissemination of such skeptical notions."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Bishop Seth Ward mightily pleased the Mississippi brethren. His preaching on Sunday was strong, edifying, comforting. He is making reputation as a man of sound judgment.

The good people of Laurel entertained the Conference delightfully. They would have done just as well had the membership been twice as large as it is. And Laurel is a new town.

Rev. J. W. Chambers, the Conference host, brought the brethren under obligation to him for his untiring efforts to make them comfortable. His "right hand man" was his little son, Sam, who seemed never to get weary, except when some dignitary preached too long. Then Sam got sleepy. Who blames him?

The Conference paid loving tribute to our departed Senior Bishop Keener. Unfortunately the tribute was not forwarded for publication as was the resolution in reference to the death of Bishop Tigert. We hope Dr. Watkins will yet furnish it.

Rev. R. S. Clark, once a member of the body, but now of the Montana Conference, was an honored and interested visitor, though there were but few faces familiar to him, as he had been absent about thirty-five years. He is patriarchal in appearance, and after long years of service occupies a place on the honor roll. It was a pleasure to the brethren to do the old man honor.

On the first day of the session the death of the venerable L. N. Dantzler, of Moss Point, was announced. He was a prince among laymen—one of the most useful and liberal. He contributed, it is said, more to the cause of Christ annually than any man in Mississippi. The Conference honored itself by passing suitable resolutions acknowledging his great worth.

Up to this writing, Dec. 18, we have seen no statistics presented to the Conference, but we feel safe in saying that, as one of the Districts went beyond last year, the Church has been blessed with great prosperity, both in temporal and spiritual things. Many souls have been added to the Lord, and the net increase in membership will be large.

In making up a report of the Conference we followed three daily papers. They did not always agree among themselves, and doubtless we have made some mistakes—as we often do—for instance, last week, when we put Rev. D. E. Kelley down at Biggs Chitto and Brookhaven, instead of Pearlhaven and Biggs Chitto. But the picture, which was a good likeness, was all right.

REV. W. H. HUNTLEY.

We thank the brethren for dealing so kindly with our Publisher, Brother C. C. Chalmers, who represented the ADVOCATE. He is beginning to think the preachers are his friends, and that going to Conference is a great thing. He is right. The Editor has been going for forty-seven years, and he is as much in love to-day as ever. He never gets tired. The last one attended proved to be the best of all.

We print the appointments as we find them in the daily papers, save a few names and initials which we have corrected. We recall three names which we have corrected to find in the list. We will hear from them after a while. The name of Rev. I. L. Peebles occurs in connection with Utica, but after the announcement he called for a location, and his request was granted.

CHRISTMAS.

What a flood-tide of memories is evoked by the talismanic monosyllable, "Christmas?" Sunshine or shadow will fall upon the homes of our "Christian land" on Dec. 25. The prosperity of the rich is shadowed by the poverty of the poor. Life in its childhood inquires, "What shall I get?" while life in maturity, "What shall I give?" The intrinsic value of gifts may be justly appreciated, but more highly prized is the fact of remembrance. Might it not be an appropriate time to remember the debt of gratitude that we owe to the aged, infirm workers, who have consecrated their lives to create the world's peace and happiness, but now youth and vigor are denied to them, and with many, now, life is a struggle for a piece of bread? Solomon said: "Thine own friend, and thy father's friend forsake not."

One of the severest tests of consecration to Christ of the itinerant ministry is to be superannuated, taken from the midst of life's activities and almost buried alive in oblivion. Some are so sensitive of their apparent misfortune, that they seldom, if ever, again attend the Conference's annual sessions, and in their seclusion brood over the past. One of the sorest pangs endured is, out of sight, out of mind."

Now, friends of youth and prosperity, December 25 try and cheer the heart of some "veteran of the cross" that at some time in the past brought sunshine into your soul or home. Write and send a cheering letter, expressing in what way you have been benefited by his ministry. If able send a tangible token—a helpful book, a subscription to some periodical—that you think will brighten the retired, lonely life. Don't forget the veteran's widow. A new dress may be needed to be suitably gowned when she is worshiping in God's sanctuary. Have you ever realized that there are souls called of God to preach the gospel, now struggling with great self-denial, who would highly appreciate a little financial help to secure an education? Consult the college presidents. Don't forget the Christmas box for our Orphans' Home.

KEEPING CHRISTMAS.

Before marking of times and seasons, which men have agreed upon to serve and make merry together, and wisely and charitably use, it is good to consider of the common disposition of the general kind. It rejoiceth a man to see his own little watch, now and then, by the great clock of humanity. But there is a better thing than the observance of Christmas day, and that is really keeping Christmas.

Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people and to remember what other people have done for you; to ignore what the world owes you and to think what you owe the world; to put your rights in the background and your duties in the middle distance, and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellow-men are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to their hearts, hungry for love; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to it; to cease your warfare against the mainstream of the universe and let it float you for a place where you can work for a few years for a few friends—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to stop, down at the bottom of the needs and the desires of little children, to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the burdens that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want, without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to believe that love is the strongest thing in the world—stronger than hate, stronger than evil, stronger than death—and that the blessed life which began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image and brightness of the Eternal Love? Then you can keep Christmas.

And if you keep it for a day, why not always? But you can never keep it alone.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolution was unanimously passed at the recent session of the Louisiana Annual Conference:

Whereas, There has been an unprecedented increase in the cost of living during the last few years; and

Whereas, The great majority of our preachers, including the Presiding Elders, also wives of carpenters, painters, bricklayers, mail carriers, and others whose salaries have already shown a decided increase; and

Whereas, Many of our ministers have large families to maintain, and in many cases have not increased at all; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the members of the Louisiana Annual Conference, respectfully call the attention of the presiding elders and boards of stewards to the fact that the purchasing power has decreased at least twenty-five per cent during the past two years; that the preacher's not receiving a meager support, his unpaid bills are a hindrance to the cause, that the preacher who is unable to buy books for his library, and is driven to secular labor to support his family, cannot properly represent the glorious Gospel of the Son of God; that the paralysis of poverty is already resting like a blight upon many pastoral charges; and that, while the preachers may continue to enjoy religion in spite of these discouragements, it is doubtful if the laymen, who have the remedy in their hands, can continue to enjoy religion in its fullness, unless they do all in their power to increase contributions for ministerial support.

PAPER ADOPTED BY THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, DEC. 10.

To the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

We, the undersigned members of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, respectfully beg leave to present the following statement for your consideration, viz:

Recognizing, as we do, the importance of the transferring power invested in your high office, and the great advantage it affords for strengthening the weak places in our connection, do nevertheless believe that the said power has been exercised in the transfer of preachers from other Conferences to our own for the purpose of supplying our more important charges, and in many instances charges of much more importance than those served by them in the Conferences from which they come, greatly to the discouragement of the young men of our own Conference.

In consideration of the above premises, we, the signers hereto, respectfully pray you, and in the most loyal spirit to your authority, present this our earnest request, that said custom of transfer for our better appointments be discontinued until there exists, on account of scarcity of laborers, a real necessity for exercising the transfer power.

We remain your most humble servants in the kingdom of our Lord.

(Signed by over sixty members of the Conference, including such leaders as S. S. Keener, C. W. Carter, J. D. Harper, etc., and passed with but six dissenting votes, and those, I believe, were of transfers.—F. S. Parker.)

BEAR IN MIND

Every stitch of our clothing goes to you with our prestige of nearly half a century in business and our record of past success is our pledge and promise of the future. We manufacture nearly all our clothing for men and boys, "made-to-measure," as well as "ready-to-wear," out of material of our own importation, enabling us to keep pace with the styles as well as guarantee the quality, fit and finish of every garment.

And we save you on the price—don't forget that. The warmth and dryness of the backward winter season has left us with a trifle more Overcoats, Cravenettes and Double-Breasted Suits than we care to carry longer, and for that reason we are specializing a line of these garments to an inducingly interesting extent.

CHRISTMAS MUSINGS; OR, FIRESIDE PICTURES.

By Miss Eddie Bentley.

The house was quiet this Christmas Eve, for even the little mother was away on the city's busy streets buying presents for her children and grandchildren. Bessie Fairfield sat alone in her large, pleasant bedroom with only a cheerful grate fire and her own thoughts to keep her company. In the morning she, too, had been making purchases, but in the afternoon she had beguiled the hours by reading "Nellie's Memories," one of Rosa Nouchette Carey's pretty stories. Both laughter and tears had been provoked by the narrative, but now her eyes were weary, so Bessie leaned back comfortably in her rocking chair and fell to musing.

Memory lent pictures of what a happy, care-free time Christmas was when grandma was living. So vivid and realistic were the girl's thoughts that, as with half-closed eyes she looked into the embers of the fire, pictures of the home life there arose and she gently murmured:

"I see grandma's cottage now—Rose cottage—well, it deserves the name, for there on the fence to the right are climbing rose trees—the Marechal Neil and the La Mark, the Malmaison, blushing Marie Henrietta and the sweet La France. Near the gate stands a myrtle orange tree with its heritage of red and yellow fruit while a bit further in is a Mispeh plum tree into which sister and I used to climb and play. It was our home. I'll go around the house, for grandma is sure to be in the dining-room making the last of her Christmas goodies. I pass the Cape Jessamine bush and the neatly-kept flower beds, where, summer and winter, violets, sweet olives, lemon-scented verbena and lavender shed their perfume and where something bright ever blooms. Further to the rear towers the dear old mulberry tree, to a limb of which is our much-loved swing. And see! On there, to the left, is an orchard of plum and fig and orange trees. It does seem incredible how grandma, living in the city and with what would seem to one used to broad acres, a limited plot of ground, can have so many desirable homey things about her.

But I have passed the dining-room and such savory odors of things cooking and things cooked proceed therefrom that I retrace my steps and enter the lattice room..... Dear grandma! I see you now—slight, yet erect—bright of eye—elastic of step—those busy hands ministering to others..... I bound up the steps and cry, "Grandma, I'm just hungry for one of your nice lovely crab-lanterns." She laughs merrily and says, "Here, dearie, take one." So I help myself to the toothsome sweet—apples stewed and then baked in a brown crust. Between the bites I hug and kiss grandma, and tell her, "you know gramsie, I have already hung up my stocking, but for fear it was not quite big enough for what Santa Claus had for me, I hung up my school-bag, too." She tells me I am a greedy girl, but smiles indulgently.

At twilight, auntie lights the lamp in the front bedroom, and she and grandma and mother sit up by the fireside, planning for us children. Charles, Laura, [illegible] and I stand on the front gallery whispering [illegible] tery of it all. Ever and anon we make mischief, but stealthily raise a [illegible] down. For once grandma's knitting has fallen into her lap and she rests [illegible] and auntie talk in undertones. Suddenly Charlie calls out "Santa Claus is in there." A general scamper [illegible] stumbles and [illegible] rolls down the front steps. Charlie and I [illegible] the top step to the last one, while cousin Laura brings up the rear, [illegible] partly by fear and partly by laughter, fall [illegible] on the gallery. So John and Charlie have [illegible] and come up to my rescue. We now decide that "discretion is the better part of valor," and securing a lamp and two candles, we start toward our bedrooms. The boys call this "The Charge of the Light Brigade." We were soon fast asleep and dreaming that St. Nicholas was coming down the chimney flue and filling our stockings. Suddenly a coal falls in the grate and Bessie's picture vanishes.

Yet, again a friendly blaze flickers and Bessie is once more at Rose cottage, and it is Christmas Day. White berries and red berries, roses and evergreens decorate the simple home. Auntie! My auntie! Your slender white fingers twined ivy wreath and holly and mistletoe so deftly and lovingly. "The grown folks must stop their dinner preparations for a little while and look at our toys which it is possible, but not probable, they are looking at for the first time. Then they show us what they have received a few days before Christmas. Charlie and I had gone to grandma and asked her what she wanted us to get her for a present. She thought gravely for a minute, and then said, "I need a hearth broom and a kitchen spoon." Every year for four years we had asked the same question, and received the same answer—for did not grandma know that we had only thirty cents apiece to spend? Great would have been our despair had she given any other answer.

The morning hours pass happily and at two o'clock a bell rings. We all go to the dining-room, and we are eating Christmas dinner at grandma's. She presides and asks [illegible] ing. The serving [illegible] is followed by baked turkey, [illegible] vegetables in abundance, but the eyes of Charlie, Laura, Cousin John and I are centering largely at a side table where repose [illegible] silver cake and fruit cake custard, [illegible] and candy. Grandma sees this, and [illegible] "those who eat the most [illegible] have the most dessert." Thereupon the boys ply knife and fork assiduously, but Cousin Laura and I eat [illegible] our eyes see the point and [illegible] Ninth and [illegible] The coals in the grate are black [illegible] now and [illegible] with the dear, intimates is seemingly [illegible] Oh, grandma, the lapse of years are many dear, since we closed your beautiful eyes and folded those patient hands, but the memory of thee lingers still, as fragrant as the leaves in yonder rose jar.

Bessie is weeping now, but hearken, my girl! Evening bells are chiming joyously, mother, and your niece and nephews are tapping at the door—up and open to them! And, then, the baby of the family awaits your kisses and smiles to [illegible] into soft clingings and glad [illegible] innocence and beauty remind you that [illegible] Bessie, revive the smouldering embers [illegible] Rose cottage once more—but, behold! [illegible] transformed into a heavenly home. [illegible] shall the good stand in immortal bloom [illegible] the fair gardens of that second birth. [illegible] each bright bloss m mingle its perfume [illegible] With that of flowers which never bloomed on earth.

A GUEST'S DUTY.

There are always many little things a guest can do in her own room that will prove a help to her hostess and make her an always welcome visitor. If you are in a position as a guest, think how much help it would be to you, were your hostess, instead of finding the bed had been made, the bureau straightened, clothes hung up, washstand wiped off, everything dusted—and proceed to do all these little things yourself in your friend's house.

If you find that objection is made try to make it appear a pleasure, and if there is any favor conferred at all it is in the being allowed to do these things. It will never do, you know, to show that you dislike such work, make it just the contrary.

Where a visit is to be of any duration, a guest should try to identify herself with the usual life of the family as much as possible. Above all, avoid delay at meals or hinder the work by late rising, staying out after meal-time, coming late to lunch or dinner, or in any way inconveniencing the hostess for the one.—Union Gospel News.

CHRISTMAS GREETING.

By Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

To Dr. Boswell, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, first of all I would send a personal Christmas greeting in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. I greet him as an old friend, a former fellow laborer for the Master's cause, and servant of the church. All my memories of him are pleasant at this Christmas season. We are older than we were when we first met. We have more mercies to remember. God has led us, and has been patient in his dealings with us, during all these years that have come and gone. The trials we have had have been channels for his grace. We are drawing nearer to the end; this Christmas season brings closer to us the fulfillment of our hopes that center in the living Christ who loved us and gave himself for us. I speak confidently, my dear brother. To feel or speak otherwise would be irrational and ungrateful. We will keep on trusting and striving and the Lord will continue his help; this means the victory of faith and the crowning day that is coming, coming, coming! Permit me to offer a word of Christmas greeting to the readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in this connection.

First, let me suggest to them that they make their Christmas meditations thankful. The Christmas season is a glad festival for all. Let us think of the good things that have come into our past lives.

Let us, as far as we can, believe that all things work together for our good. Let us follow the good Christmas custom of drawing closer the bonds of affection in our homes and in all the circles touched by our sympathies at the return of the season that reminds us of the promise of peace on earth and good will to men. Read Matthew v. 23, 24—and carry no enmities or grudges into the coming year.

Next, let me suggest to your Christian readers that they make their Christmas meditations hopeful. The kingdom and the power and the glory belong to the Lord Jesus Christ. Other things come and go; institutions and organizations rise and fall as the world rolls on its way. But the Bible holds its ground and more and more demonstrates that it is the book of books. Organized Christianity is stronger at this Christmas season than it ever was before. The resources of the church are larger, its hope is brighter, the day of its final triumph surely nigher.

A BRANCH OF THE LIVING VINE.

Methodism had its beginning with the Christian religion, not in its organic form, but in its principles and polity. As to these, Methodism ranks in age with any system for gospel propagation now in existence. Age, in an organization, counts for nothing. Scriptural principles, backed by an aggressive evangelism, count for everything. These things being true, the claims of Methodism are modest. She makes no claims she does not willingly grant to others who believe and preach and practice the truth. She claims nothing that cannot be made good.

Methodism claims to be a branch of the living vine. This is all that any man or any organization can claim. The apostles, as charter members of the new dispensation, were only branches. So said Jesus: "I am the vine, ye are the branches." If this be true, it follows that all who ever sprang from the apostles directly, or who succeeded them in later days, not as apostles, for, as such, they had no succession, are nothing more than branches. No set of men can claim more than was ascribed to the apostles.

The branches of a vine may differ in general particulars—in size, shape, and outward appearance. The fruit itself may be varied, but in all essential particulars the branches and the fruit are identical. One lone man with faith in Christ, and bringing forth fruit unto holiness, is a branch. Where two or three unite for mutual help, and to systematically promote the cause of Christ, they are recognized as living branches. Nothing more can be said of a multitude, though it may have taken shape in the days of the apostles, and filled the world. Methodism is such a branch.

If Jesus had built the Church on the apostles, and had given them specific instructions as to the form of government, holding them and all future believers to that particular form, the case would be different, for then he would have indicated that the Church, in its organic existence, is a unit, and that all who would be partakers of its blessings, or have part in its government, must be in connection with the one visible organization. But such are not the facts. The Church is built on Christ, and no such requirements as suggested are made of believers. As a matter of fact, the functions of the Church are exercised by many bodies of Christians. The ordinance of baptism is administered by men of different orders, each claiming to be a representative of the true vine. It is administered in good faith, and received in good faith by believers. If there is anything invalid in the proceeding, whether administered by one mode or another, it is found, not in the faith of the administrator or the subject, but in the lack of authority on the part of the administrator. This is the position of high churchmen—Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, and several orders of Baptists. According to these, baptism is nothing unless administered by men in the succession—Church or Apostolic. The burden of proof rests on those who entertain this notion. Up to this good day the proof has not been produced. Others equally as honest, and fully as capable of understanding and judging, declare that the validity of the ordinance does not depend on Church relations, but on the faith and sincerity of the administrator and the subject.

What is said of baptism applies also to the administration of the Lord's Supper, and the ordination of men to the gospel ministry. For these functions no denomination of Christians has a monopoly or authority derived directly from the Lord. To declare that divine authority, oral or written, is necessary, is equivalent to saying that churches, as they exist to-day, are usurpers and deceivers, for the reason that no organization of any kind holds such a charter from the head of the Church. Churches, as they are, come into existence in the order of Providence, and without exclusive prerogatives. The Church of England, out of which sprang the Protestant Episcopal Church, is the outgrowth of the Lutheran reformation. Methodism, the fruit of Wesley's zeal, which found no favor or footing in the established Church, was thrust out to raise a holy people. Roger Williams, dissatisfied with the formalism of his Church, as well as his baptism, submitted to immersion at the hands of a layman, who in turn, with ten others, was baptized by Williams. This was the beginning of the Baptist denomination in the United States. These are living, active, and successful churches. Are they usurpers? Are they deceivers and anti-Christ? Who will affirm it? They are branches of the living vine, and daily bear fruits to the honor and glory of God. Methodism claims to be nothing more.

No "thus saith the Lord" other than that already expressed in the Word is necessary to the existence of a true Church. To come together in the name of Christ, to preach the pure word of God, and in all things to do his will, are the things required, and Jesus says: "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

Fruit-bearing is an evidence of life. Dead branches bear no fruit. Methodism, as a living branch, brings forth fruit. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

PERSONALS.

Rev. J. A. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, enters hopefully upon another round of work. He confidently expects a good year.

Dr. Jno. A. Rice began his ministry with the Rayne Memorial Church last Sunday. His sermon greatly pleased the members, and they gave him a most cordial welcome.

The First Church pulpit, to which Rev. J. E. Wray has been returned for the third year, was filled Sunday evening last by Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, who instructed and edified the congregation.

Rev. Inman Townsley is at his post, Second Church (the old Burgundy), and feels that he has before him an open door. Pastoral work and looking after the new building will keep him busy.

Rev. J. W. Brown, passing through the city on his way from Laurel, remembered the ADVOCATE office, as did also Rev. R. O. Weir of the Louisiana Conference. These brethren always find a hearty welcome in this office.

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting was reorganized last Monday. Dr. F. N. Parker, Presiding Elder, was elected president, and Rev. Inman Townsley, secretary. The preachers were all in good humor, and hopeful of success.

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, a veteran superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, accompanied by his granddaughter, Mrs. L. A. Davilla, Jr., gave us a pleasant call on Tuesday. Brother Robertson is in fairly good health, and strong in the faith.

Dr. W. C. Black, transferred to the North Mississippi Conference, will go to Tupelo in place of Rev. T. W. Lewis, who, we just learn, has been appointed agent for Millsaps College—a man qualified by nature, and cultivation, and grace for the position.

Rev. J. W. Shoall, transferred from the South Georgia Conference and appointed to Columbus, Miss., in a private note, tells us that he greatly enjoyed the session of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Shoall preached twice, and delighted the brethren.

Dr. S. S. Keener, who has been in the city a few days, preached at Carrollton Avenue last Sunday evening. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, spoke in the highest of the discourse. Dr. Keener was born and reared almost within a stone's throw of the church.

A card from Rev. E. L. Cargill, dated Grapps Bluff, La., Dec. 12, says: "It is with sadness that I have to report the death of my father, Rev. D. B. Cargill. He died Dec. 11, at one o'clock." Brother Cargill will have the sympathy of many friends in this hour of bereavement.

Rev. John N. Randolph, chaplain, in a card from Fort Harrison, Mont., says: "I am called to Baldwyn, Miss., by the death of Mr. Walter McDonald, our son-in-law. I shall be there for several weeks." Mr. McDonald had been married but a few months. We sympathize with the afflicted family.

Rev. and Mrs. R. F. Witt, of the Mississippi Conference, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage—their silver wedding—on the evening of Dec. 22, at their home, Gallman, Miss. We are thankful for an invitation to be present. May they live to celebrate their "golden wedding."

The Mansfield Journal speaks in highest terms of Rev. K. W. Dodson, who by his courteous manners and Christian bearing made a large number of friends among those who do not belong to his denomination. His return to Mansfield gives great satisfaction not only to his flock but to the community at large.

Mr. and Mrs. Tudor Beach Carre, whose marriage we noticed a few weeks since, have reached home, after a pleasant tour of Europe. Mrs. W. W. Carre has issued an invitation to friends to meet them on the evening of Friday, December 28, at 1022 State Street, New Orleans. We acknowledge a card to the reception.

In our notes concerning the North Mississippi Conference we omitted to mention the work of the secretaries, F. R. Countiss, principal, and L. S. Spragins, W. L. Duren, W. F. M. Brogan and L. D. Borders, assistants. They were punctual, courteous and efficient. We thank Brother Countiss for furnishing us with reports of the various committees.

We give our readers this week a picture of Rev. R. P. Nolen, pastor last year at Tront on Circuit, Mississippi Conference. He has always been a true friend of the ADVOCATE. This year he threw his whole soul into the canvass for the paper, and succeeded in securing one hundred and fifteen subscribers. If any pastor in Southern Methodism has done better than this for the paper, we do not know him. All honor to Brother Nolen.

Mr. E. P. Mackie, after a long and painful illness, died at his home in this city on Saturday, the 15th. Brother Mackie was one of the faithful and efficient members of our Church, an official for many years in the old Carondelet Street Church, and devoted to the cause of the Master. Our Church in the city is greatly bereaved. We tender the disconsolate widow our sincere sympathy.

Rev. I. M. Morse, after serving as presiding elder of the Forest District for a quadrennium, goes again into the pastorate, and fortunately falls into Gulfport, one of the new and fast growing cities on the coast. Appreciative officials of the Neshoba Charge forwarded to this office complimentary resolutions concerning Bro. Morse and his efficient work on the District, but the document did not reach us in time for last week's issue. It is now too late.

The Crockett Times-Commonwealth expresses the gratification of the good citizens of that town over the return of Rev. J. C. Park to serve them for another year. The editor says: "Mr. Park is one of the ablest and most popular members of the North Mississippi Conference, he is a model pastor and a perfect Christian gentleman, and The Commonwealth rejoices with his congregation and our people generally that he is to reside with us at least another year."

In noting the transfer and appointment of Dr. Richard Wilkinson, we put him down for St. Luke's, Augusta, Ga. This is an error. He is at St. James' Church. Brother Wilkinson had an auspicious beginning—a royal welcome by a warm-hearted people. He opened his commission on Sunday the 9th, and both morning and evening had a full house. He is much pleased and believes he is going to have a great year.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE ARCADIA DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: The year just closed was one of the most prosperous for the district for many years. No small praise is due you for the result. What has been done is prophetic of what can be. With the membership and resources at our command we ought to set the step for the Conference in its work of evangelizing this State. We have taken an important forward step, viz: the employment of a district missionary evangelist, whose territory will be limited to our district, and whose support will be borne by the district. This will mean much every way for the Church in our bounds. It will enable me to provide efficient help for those of you who by reason of isolation, and other hindering causes, are spared by the peripatetic evangelist. It will also give these places the result of the study and experience of one of our best men. As soon as Bishop Ward and I can settle on the man, he will be announced.

A few figures will set our work in bold relief:

	1905	1906
Accessions	490	734
Net gain	281	523
Infants baptized	60	108
Adults baptized	89	289
Sunday schools	43	52
Officers and teachers	273	320
Sunday school scholars	2,740	3,452
Paid for all purposes	$24,530	$41,610
Increase		17,084
Paid pastors-in-charge	11383	13000
Increase		1,617
Increase in amount paid the five principal collections this year		700

Surely this ought to be gratifying alike to preachers and people to you in seeing the response of your people to the apostolic injunction, "Be ye also enlarged," and to the people of your pasture in having shepherds of large vision. Cultivate the gift of faith, for what a man believes he sees; sight cometh in many things by faith. The characteristic of the old guard, as given by the Apostle to the Hebrews, was the ability to faith a thing into sight. Never cease to impress the people given into your care to make mine the people given into your care to make mine in their love for the Church and God. You will be rewarded by seeing the work of the Lord prospering in your hands and the love of your people widening and deepening. Be large in your affections—a little preacher means a little people.

To the new preachers in the district I bring this greeting. You have a goodly heritage, capable of much fruitage; intensive cultivation pays better than extensive. Some of you are strangers to us. We welcome you as brethren beloved in the Lord, and pray that your presence with us will do you good and that you may prove a blessing to us. Let us all join hands and hearts to do better and greater work for God this year than ever before, bearing this in mind: "Cursed is every one that doeth the work of the Lord negligently." Your pastor, BRISCOE CARTER.

REV. J. W. BLOSSER, M. D.

A Noted Minister and Doctor of Atlanta, Ga., is Meeting with Wonderful Success.

Those who have long doubted whether there really is a permanent cure for catarrh will be glad to learn that a southern physician, Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., of Atlanta, Ga., has discovered a method whereby catarrh can be cured to the very last symptom without regard to climate or condition. So that there may be no misgivings about it, he will send a free sample to any man or woman without expecting payment. The regular price of the remedy is $1.00 for a box containing one month's treatment.

The Doctor's remedy is radically different from all others, and the results he has achieved seem to mark a new era in the scientific cure of catarrh, foul breath, hawking and spitting, stopped-up feeling in nose and throat, coughing spells, difficult breathing, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis and the many other symptoms of a bad case of catarrh.

If you wish to see for yourself what this remarkable remedy will do, send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and you will receive the free package and an illustrated book.

MRS. K. A. JONES. The great, unbid, whose echoing foot-falls has recently sounded in our home mission society, has laid a gaunt finger upon our beloved sister, Mrs. K. A. Jones, and pressed down her tired eye-lids into dreamless slumber and eternal rest. In the presence of death, after it had touched the marble face of our beloved, and given to the cold brow its seal of majesty and peace, the human heart shrinks back in terror, and loving words fall palsied from human lips. In the irremediable darkness of this gloom we can only look back upon the pathway of our departed dead and see the reflected beauty of kindly deeds, and acts of gracious charity and gentleness, which makes us believe that all is well with "her who is away." The life of Sister Jones was filled with the tenderest love of all. She exalted in every triumph of right over wrong; she was generous in every impulse in defending the unfortunate, the friendless, and the poor; she was true to every trust committed to her keeping, a friend loyal and loving, a wife and mother who worshipped her family with a love idolatrous, a woman, indeed, of signal ability. This is a short and simple annal of her who a few short hours ago stepped into that "swift, flowing river that flows ever onward to the silent sea."

Resolved, First, That in the death of Sister Jones, the Home Mission Society of Paines Chapel has lost one of its ablest members; the church, a daughter who dedicated all the years of her life and consecrated all her splendid talent to its service.

Resolved, Second, That we tender to her family our deepest sympathy, and invoke upon them the loving care of him who hears in pity the husband's sob, and the orphan's cry.

Resolved, Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Home Mission minutes, and a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate.

MRS. T. J. DUKEMINIER.

NELLIE MAY DENHAM, daughter of J. M. and Bertha Denham, was born in Scott County, Miss., June 2, 1888. She was married to Cecil H. Platt, June 9, 1905. She died Nov. 29, 1906. She was stricken with typhoid fever, and from the first her case seemed a serious one. There was the best medical talent, a trained nurse, but the hand of death could not be stayed. The kind husband and an infant daughter, and a host of kindred and friends, are left to mourn the loss of this bright and promising young woman. She was a great-granddaughter of Rev. G. W. Chesterfield, formerly of the Mississippi Conference. She had been a consistent member of the Methodist Church for four years, and spoke in the last hours of her expected home in heaven. May God comfort the sorrowing ones!

C. McDONALD.

Lake, Miss.

Mrs. BETTIE C. DENNIS was born March 17, 1869, at Raymond, Miss., and died at Jackson, Miss., Oct. 21, 1906. She was the daughter of Mr. V. J. and Mrs. T. E. Waddill, joined the Methodist church in early childhood and remained a true and loyal member the remainder of her life. Was married to Mr. Walter S. Dennis November 25, 1891, as a result of which union they were blessed with three children—Ragan C., Walter S., Jr., and Claude, all of whom survive her. A nobler type of Christian womanhood I have never known. Her love for her husband was perfect. Her devotion to her children could not have been surpassed. Though for several years in feeble health, Sister Dennis made her home attractive and pleasant, in which the pastor always found a warm welcome. And oh, how we miss her! When the summons came she was ready and prepared, but we were hardly prepared to give her up. God knew best and had a crown waiting for her. She had gone to Jackson, where she underwent an operation which caused her death, and there Rev. H. M. Ellis, assisted by the writer, laid her to rest, surrounded by a large number of sorrowing loved ones and friends. In the sweet bye and bye, among the ransomed of the Lord we confidently expect to see her sweet face now glorified. Her heart-broken husband and precious little boys and other dear ones have our profoundest sympathies. To the grace of our loving heavenly Father (her Father) we commend them and pray that they may so live that some day they will reach her side in heaven. Her pastor,

J. E. GRAY.

"Seeing the Southwest" EXCURSIONS

Doubtless you have heard of the Bumper Crops which have been raised this year in Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Texas and New Mexico. Have you compared them with results obtained in your section? Is your work where you are bringing you adequate returns for the capital invested and the labor expended? If not, a change would be beneficial perhaps. A visit to the Southwest will open your eyes. Out in Oklahoma the last big land opening is soon to take place; farms are still very cheap in Western Arkansas, Northern Louisiana and the Gulf Coast of Texas. Let us give you full information about these sections. You will want to see them after you have examined our illustrated literature.

GEORGE W. LEIGHTON was born in Jefferson County, Miss., July 20th, 1831, and died at Lorman, Jefferson County, Miss., November 3rd, 1906. He was brought up in the home of Christian parents, but never joined the church until late in life. About five years ago, during a protracted meeting at Cane Ridge, Harriston Circuit he gave his heart to God, and united with the Methodist Church. Since that time he had led a Christian life, taking a lively interest in the church. Mr. Leighton was educated at Oakland College, and spent his life as a farmer, except the four years of the civil war. He was, I think, a member of Darden's Battery during that struggle. He made a gallant soldier. After the war he resumed his former occupation. His last illness was short and severe, but his end was peaceful. All who knew him respected him as a high-toned, honorable gentleman. He never married. He leaves four sisters and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. W. B. LEWIS.

IN MEMORIAM.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 28, 1906.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Stewards of Rayne Memorial M. E. Church, South, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Almighty God has been pleased to call from useful labor to eternal rest our beloved associate COL. DAVID ZABLE, who during the long period that he was a member of this body so endeared himself by his earnestness and faithfulness and Christian courtesy that his memory will ever be cherished in our hearts:

Resolved, That in this bereavement this church has lost one of its best friends, who was always an active, zealous, prompt, painstaking member. His integrity, uprightness and courage presented not only to his associates but to the community an example and inspiration to lofty deeds.

Resolved, That bowing as we do in humble submission to God's will, we mourn the loss of a brave soldier of the cross, who was a wise counsellor and beloved associate. The Epworth League and Sunday school will sadly miss his godly influence.

Resolved, That we share deeply with the afflicted family their sorrow, reminding them that our Heavenly Father makes no mistakes, and that he who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb looks down with infinite compassion upon them in the hour of their desolation.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the Nashville and New Orleans Advocates, sent to the family of our deceased associate and spread upon the minutes. Respectfully,

E. L. McGEHEE.
JAMES R. WESTERFIELD.
M. W. TODD.

MRS. J. C. ROBERT.

Resolutions of sympathy, condolence and respect passed by the Woman's Home Mission Society of Centreville Miss.) Church on the death of Mrs. J. C. Robert.

Whereas, Our heavenly Father has removed from our midst, church and society Sister J. C. Robert, and carried her to her reward,

Resolved, first, That the community has lost one of its most shining lights, the church a most faithful and devout member, and our Home Mission Society one of its most exemplary and earnest members.

Resolved, second, That we, the members of the Home Mission Society extend to the family our sympathy and confidence in their great bereavement in her departure.

Resolved, third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our society, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication and a copy sent to the family.

"ONLY A CLOD."

An epitaph was inscribed on the frail memorial of a peasant in the country churchyard: "Only a clod." Whether dictated in a pathetic or cynical temper, that epitath is really grand. What wonderful things are shut in a clod! All possibilities of form, color, music, light, fragrance, and fruitfulness, are there. Exquisite shapes, ravishing hues, ears of gold, purple clusters, bread to strengthen man's heart, and oil to make his face shine, dropping honey, budding roses, pure lilies, and a thousand other miracles of grace and glory spring out of the dust.—Rev. W. L. Watkinson.

AN INMOST FIGHT.

Not in his circumstances; not in his habits, not in his hereditary station, but in himself, in a heart ready to give itself up to the worst instead of the better powers of the world, in a soul that loves baseness, frivolity and falseness—there lies the real enemy. Of the great strength which comes when that discovery is made! And, feeling that now at last the real battle has begun, the man solemnly, solidly settles himself down to the conquest of himself. The army which has carried by storm one fortification after another and found that it has only gained possession of an outpost, more or less significant, now sits down before the central citadel and the real siege begins. Then comes the true calling up of all the powers. Then comes humility, and by humility self-understanding; and in self-understanding strength. Then comes that earnest cry for God's help which always brings its answer. Then comes the giving of the soul's own weakness into the abundant strength of Christ. Then comes the great reality of prayer. All of these, when the man has at last got to the center of his sin and his own soul.

My friends, do you know the meaning of all this? Are you fighting that battle for self-conquest? If you are, you know with what a true exhilaration that which seems such a cruel and unnatural necessity of life may occupy and inspire the soul. Almost with a shout the man exclaims: "I will subdue myself for goodness and for God." And though no shout is heard, though men beside him do not hear a sound, though the battle-field is in some inmost secret chamber of his most secluded life, though the fairest flowers of his own self-content are being torn to pieces by the wrestlers' feet, yet still there is joy. You not know it, many of you, a deep, strong, solemn joy as the night draws nearer to the day, and the self with which we fight grows weaker and the self for which we fight grows freer—a joy deep and strong and solemn, with which no other pleasure in human living can compare.

And also there grows up a great charity and hope for every other man who is fighting the good fight with his sins—a charity and hope which is alone reward enough for all our pain!

May God lead all of us speedily in, through all the outer struggles, to this inmost fight of all! May we begin it now and never end it till our sin is dead! May the Captain of our salvation be our leader and our strength! May we be full of courage because the battle which we fight is not our own alone, but God's! And at the last may we be conquerors in him! — Phillips Brooks.

We hear a great deal about the discipline of pain. Perhaps the soul of man is chiefly polished and chastened by affliction. But there is a discipline of joy also. Feelings of pleasure which are pure make the heart better. Not only is the joy of the Lord the strength of his saints, it is their beauty also.—Exchange.

It is only by thinking about great and good things that we come to love them, and it is only by loving them that we are impelled to seek after them that they become ours, and we enter into vital experience of their beauty and blessedness.—Henry Van Dyke.

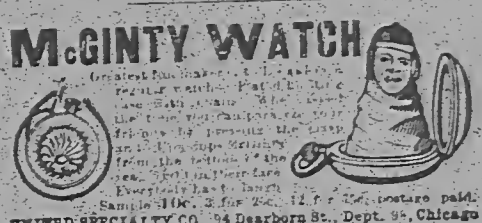
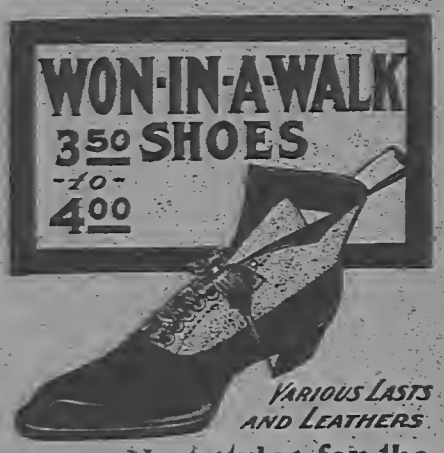
NEWSPAPER READING.

A Columbia University professor declares that the habit of reading daily newspapers leads to mental deterioration. The habit of scanning headlines, hit or miss, and superficially reading a bit here and a bit there, wears out the facility of the brain tissues for permanent registration.



There may be some truth in the professor's contentions, and yet it would seem that there is more danger of stagnation than over-exercise. And beside, no wise man curtails his reading to the newspapers alone. He reads history, philosophy and science. He reads these things to broaden his mind and his understanding, but to deny himself the newspapers would be to place himself in a position of ignorance and ignominy.



History is being made to-day as it never has been made before. The newspapers are the chroniclers of the present-day history. The history of the past is a storehouse of knowledge, but the history of to-day is of more value to the man who is living to-day. A knowledge of the living present is better than a history of the dead past. Fortunately, we may have the knowledge of both. The man who reads history reads what he believes will benefit him. Why should not the man who reads newspapers read with the same discretion? He need not devour the reports of crime, or the superficial articles that appeal to the man on the dump. There is plenty in the newspaper of to-day, to inspire and instruct. He should get the best from the great mass of matter daily and weekly presented. Such a reader need have no fear of injuring his brain or feeding a morbid habit. Selected.

HAVE LOST A FRIEND.

The newsboys of Chicago are mourning the death of Isaac Woolf, the merchant-prince of Chicago who for years gave the paper-lads a Christmas dinner. Away back in 1874 he began this charity offering and each Christmas he has many of the boys as would accept his hospitality. At the first of these dinners 100 boys were regaled, but for the last few years the number has approximated 10,000, the annual cost to Mr. Woolf being about $5,000 a dinner. One of the last acts of the merchant's life was to arrange for the dinner to be given this year at the Brooks' Casino in Wabash Avenue.

Mr. Woolf was himself a newsboy coming from England, when a youth. Beginning as a lowly vender of news, he arose to wealth and affluence. Several thousand newsboys attended the funeral and did sincere homage to the memory of their practical benefactor.—Exchange.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

LESSON DEC. 30th, 1906.

THE NAME OF JESUS.

Golden Text: "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."—Isaiah ix. 6.

Our lesson for today is more than a review, for at the close of the year, the whole twelve months' study is to be considered, and in its completeness it is well for us to follow the line of thought set for us in the golden text. From the time when God spoke to the patriarchs on down to the coming of the Savior there was always a significance in the name given to men and to women. It is recorded that when God called men into a closer relationship to him, or when a covenant was entered into between God and man, man received a new name, and that name signified an especial grace as a reason for its being given.

So in the various names by which we know the Lord Jesus each one sets forth an attribute of the many he possesses. The devout thinking men of olden times, in the times of Isaiah, when he was writing his prophecy of the Kingdom of Christ, looked forward to that great event, and compared the condition of Israel as to one groping in darkness and vexation, the prophet's words were written that they might find comfort in the coming of the Messiah, which was a great light seen by them that walked in darkness, yea shining even on them that walked in the land of the shadow of death. How well do we see this figure that refers to a sinful world gladly receiving the light of a pardoning Christ.

As well can we apply the names given to the coming Messiah, to our own Saviour, the Lord Jesus. "His name shall be called wonderful" saith the prophet. He is wonderful, wonderful in his life, from his wonderful birth to his wonderful sacrifice on the cross. Wonderful that he, the king of kings, and lord of lords should come on earth, not to be ministered unto, but to minister. See him girded with the girdle of a towel and in his hands a basin, performing the lowliest service that can be rendered to man. His disciples did not know the import of that service, but the Spirit hath revealed it to us.

"Counsellor." He spoke as never man spake," insomuch that the people marveled and were astonished at his doctrine. Even those learned in the law were astonished by his words. The grand sermon on the Mount was to them who heard and is to us the greatest and most powerful part of the gospel message. It was not the human, but the voice of God, speaking words, not of judgment, but of mercy, to a flock that seemingly had no shepherd.

"The Mighty God." He who had the power even on earth to forgive sins, and the same that thought he and the father were one. He who called back from a four days' grave one he loved, with a double motive, showing a doubting world his power, and reuniting a sorrowing brother and sisters. The mighty God whose attendants were angels, and to whom the unclean spirits rendered obedience.

"The Everlasting Father." Jesus often made use of the words "your Father." His teachings were full of the tender care the Father, our Father and his Father ever gave to us. He gave us the love we have for our own children to show us how he loves us. Everlasting: "Yesterday, today and forever," "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," when we will be with him forever.

"The Prince of Peace." A pride the Christian can be pardoned for will be the pride he feels when he thinks of the Prince whose subject he is. What a peace we have when our Prince gives his to us. "My peace I give unto you, let not your heart be touched." All these names and all they each signify are our Lord's, but there is a name above every name, the sweetest name that falls on the believer's ear. The name brought from heaven by an angel. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." Since that time the name and the power of the name has been given among men as the way of salvation and eternal life. It is our password, our watchword, with loving tenderness we teach it in all its sweetness to the little eager learners, as we lead them, as lambs, to the flock of the great Shepherd.

"His name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all."—Acts 3-16.

WHAT WE DRINK AND SMOKE.

Beer, whisky and tobacco have been consumed so freely that the internal revenue for the last fiscal year ran about $15,000,000 above that of the year before and $8,000,000 above the estimates made last fall, when one-third of the year had passed. During the first quarter of the current fiscal year the receipts went more than $4,500,000 above those of the corresponding quarter in the last year, and the Commissioner estimates that, although the tax is about to be removed from alcohol used in the arts, the total internal revenue collections in the present year will rise to $260,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 over the last year. — Philadelphia Record.

THE WORLD IS GETTING BETTER.

Less than twenty years ago the United Staes Marshal of Kansas, lay a half-day drunk and half-naked in the Secretary of State's office, and the whole Statehouse and all the reporters in town came to look at him and laugh. Less than twenty years ago Kansas politicians kept their mistresses on the pay-roll and it was considered good morals. Less than twenty years ago a man lost no standing in Kansas politics by being known as a railroad man in the Legislature. Less than twenty years ago the Legislature adjourned drunk and disorderly and took home its own desks and carpets, and the writer hereof tried in vain to get one of them. Times have changed and we change with them. The world is edging along. The things that seem like larceny to this generation will seem like larceny to the next. The world is growing better, and if you don't get better with it—the fault is yours. —Emporia (Kan.) Gazette.

A MAGIC MIRROR.

A pretty experiment can be made with a hand mirror any night when there is a full moon. Hold the mirror so that the moon's image will be seen in it, and you will be surprised to see four moons instead of one. One moon will be very bright, but the other three will be in a straight line, and quite dull, one dull image on the side of the bright moon, and the other two on the other side. Turn the mirror round slowly, still holding its face to the moon, and the reflections will seem to revolve roundetoa lfi?fwyp seem ot revolve round a common center.

You can make the same experiment with any one of the very bright stars, such as Sirius, Venus, or Jupiter, but with these there will be three images instead of four, as the number seen depends on the breadth of the object. The explanation is quite simple. There are two surfaces in a mirror, one in front and the other where the quicksilver is, says Home Notes. The brightest reflection comes from the objection itself, the others are what is known as "secondary images" back of the mirror, and thence to the eye. The magic mirror never fails to excite a good deal of wonder, and is an interesting experiment as well.— Exchange.

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

Dear Dr. Boswell: I send you by this mail a copy of the minutes of the fifteenth session of our Japan Annual Conference, held Sept. 6-10, in Hiroshima, Bishop Candler presiding.

The reports presented to the Conference show encouraging success in all departments of work. There were 354 accessions during the year, bringing our present membership to 1573, a net increase of 156, or 11 per cent. For pastoral support 2545 yen was collected, an increase of 597 yen, or 30 per cent. The number of Sunday-school scholars enrolled during the year is 4924, an increase of 457. This is, according to the report of the Sunday School Board, the largest enrollment per capita of church membership of any Conference in Southern Methodism.

The Conference was a memorable one from the fact that it is probably the last session of the Japan Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, that will ever be held, for we elected this year delegates—eight lay and eight clerical (four of whom were Japanese and four missionaries)—to the first General Conference of the Japan Methodist Church, which is to meet in Tokio next May. So our next session will probably be under the new regime, as an Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church of Japan.

In this we are following a strong tendency toward union among related churches in Japan. For many years six missions of the Presbyterian family have been united in one Japanese church. Two Baptist bodies are practically united. All the Episcopal bodies have united in the Nihon Seikokwai. It is thought probable that the Methodist Protestants and United Brethren will unite with the Congregationalists. If they do, and if the Methodist union is consummated, the five groups—Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Methodist, Episcopal, Baptist, in the order of their membership—will comprise a total number of communicants of over 45,000, out of a total Protestant membership of about 50,000.

Of the three uniting bodies, we are the youngest, having begun our work in Japan only twenty years ago, thirteen years later than the other two churches. Our membership is only 1573; but in the last three years there has been a net increase of 573, or over 50 per cent. In the same time contributions for pastoral support have almost doubled. In these and other facts there is much encouragement for our work here. I have never known a more favorable time for pushing our work in Japan than the present.

Here in Nakatsu, we are beginning the new Conference year with much encouragement. We have just held a series of meetings at which the attendance was the best we have had up to this time; and sixteen have given their names as enquirers and probationers. In a few days we expect to conclude the purchase of a well located church lot; and we hope to proceed with the building just as soon as funds for that purpose can be secured.

With a suitable church building, our work here will have a very much better prospect than ever before. Our present chapel will accommodate about seventy-five people seated on the floor. It is a small, uninviting place; and it is very difficult to get the better class of people to go there. A neat and convenient church building will give a new impetus and a wider opportunity to our work here. We are hoping before long to be able to go ahead with the building.

E. W. WATERS.

Nakatsu, Japan.

NOTES FROM GREENVILLE.

The Greenville Auxiliary of the W. F. M. S. was organized in 1878. A few years afterwards Mrs. A. B. Finlay succeeded the first president, and served continuously till about five years ago. She insisted on retiring and giving the work into younger hands. In spite of her eighty-two years, her interest is unabated, and she keeps in touch with the work. Her presence is a benediction, her part an inspiration to faithfulness. She planned wisely, labored incessantly, presided with dignity, made the meetings interesting, and never forgot the spiritual element necessary to success. Her lovely face, charming personality and sympathetic manner gave her a wonderful influence over those with whom she came in contact. All their gifts and graces were consecrated to her master's use, so the society flourished under her leadership. Mrs. Archer, our president to-day, is her daughter. Like her mother, she is giving herself to build up the work. Another daughter, Helen Finlay, a consecrated Christian girl, who died of yellow fever in 1878, made the first bequest ($100) to W. F. M. S.

The treasurer, Miss McCanley, elected at the organization, held the office till a few years ago. An accident stopped the willing feet on their tireless round. She knew a good treasurer must collect, not merely hold the funds paid her. No pledge of the society ever went unredeemed, no matter how great the labor necessary to collect it. She is succeeded by a young woman, Mrs. Ransom, who is carrying out her methods. We hope for many years of faithful service from her.

Our recording secretary, Miss Sue Trigg, also corresponding secretary of the district, succeeded her mother, who gave up the office on account of failing health. Both are enthusiastic in the cause of missions, and the many necessary duties in Miss Trigg's busy life as a teacher never cause her to neglect this work.

Turly the society has been most fortunate in their officers, and unique in the long term of service and family succession. We observed the week of prayer, and carried out the programme furnished in the ADVOCATE. The meetings were held at the different homes with a large attendance every day. A feature of the evening in China was the introduction of a Chinese lady of rank, accompanied by her two daughters. She made an impassioned appeal for her country, graphically depicting the condition of women there. The characters were well impersonated by our minister's wife, Mrs. Countiss, and Misses Somerville and Finch, all in full Chinese dress. Each day's programme was complete within itself, but all together presented the work of the society in such an interesting and forcible manner that great enthusiasm was created. A mite box sat on the table every evening, and at the closing meeting a nice sum was taken from it. After the rendering of each day's programme, a social half-hour was enjoyed, during which the hostess served dainty refreshments, tea of China, coffee of Brazil, and so on, typical of the country studied.

Loving greetings were sent to our honored ex-president, Mrs. Finlay, with regrets that feeble health prevented her being with us, after which we sang, "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow," our hearts full of gratitude for the profitable week, and strengthened to go on in the blessed work.

MRS. ROBERT KEMP,
Corresponding Secretary.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES.

Dr. John Mathews of St. Louis, Mo., sends five dollars to be applied to the fund for the building of a church at Uruguayana, Brazil, of which the Rev. E. E. Joiner is pastor.

In a private note to the Church Extension Secretary, he says: "My health since cold weather set in has somewhat improved. I rarely get out of the house. I am abiding my time in hope." The whole church will be delighted to hear this word from this venerable and saintly man.

The Oklahoma Conference at its late session subscribed $2,500 in response to the offer of the corresponding secretary for special work within its boundaries.

The Memphis Conference gave $324 to the Oklahoma special fund for the purchase of lots in the "Big Pasture." This has since been followed by the Arkansas Conference giving $300; the South Carolina Conference $300, and the North Georgia Conference $500.

The South Georgia Conference has given $1000 towards the erection of a "Bishop Tigert Memorial Church," which is to be located in the "Big Pasture" at a point to be decided later.

Since the last notes were published the following Conferences have sent in their report on assessment account: Virginia, $6,426.44, being an increase of $223.96 over last year; Northwest Texas, $7,809.58, which is an increase of $2,356.46; North Georgia, $6,091.34, an increase of $126.08; Arkansas, $1,358.14, representing an increase of $113.80. THE TEMPLE OF TIME.

The spiritual builders of the ages have laid the broad granite bases for the alabaster pillars which support the crystal arch of the coming new year. It will soon be discerned as its massive form breaks through the parting clouds of the future.

It will be the sixty-nine hundred and tenth of the colonade which they will have erected under the direction of the great Architect, the infinite Jehovah.

Each of these immense, broad central arches are supported by twelve groined arches of jasper, chrysolite, jacinth, beryel, topaz, chrysepasus and amethyst with architraves of gold resting on capitals of pearl. These arches span a floor of silver bordered with diamonds, over which have marched the generations of the past and on which countless throngs will surge in the ages to come. Its amplitude will be sufficient for all the peoples, nations and kingdoms of men.

The glorious light of God irradiates with the beauty of his magnificent holiness. His wisdom is graven in lines of living fire from top to base of its lofty columns. The guard of legions of the angelic host encircle it, and wing their way among the children of men, ministering to their need and enjoyment every moment, ever seeking to lift man to the highest realms of holy service to their fellows.

All that the multitudes of people privileged to dwell within this grand edifice are required to do in order to receive the fullest benefits granted by its owners is to accept with faith the messages of love borne to them by countless means and agencies from its King.

God's design is that all the years spent by his creatures in their progressive march within his splendid temple is to fill each hour of life to overflowing with his own transcendant joy and splendor. To this end Christ, the master-builder of this grand structure, has in his own personal love and wisdom made amplest provision for all that soul and body shall ever need in present or future life. Even in this birth-hour of this new year, which is so full of that which is sublimely enticing, while his large host are raising this new arch to its towering position, hear Christ, the kingliest of men, the royal manifestation of holy love, bidding all men quaff the wine of pure and blessed wisdom which he has in store for them. He cries, "Come for all things are now ready." ..... "Ho every one that thirsteth." ..... "Let your soul delight itself in fatness." His banquet halls in this glorious temple are sumptuously provided with all that is rich, rare, appetizing and delighting. No one is excluded from participating in the amplitude of his abundance, for his voice swells out in loftiest strain, saying, "Whosoever will may come."

This temple of time emerges from eternity past and extends into eternity future. Only a few of its arches span the present generation; within it is all there is of life for us; soon all its fruitional blessings will pass from us into the great silence of the past. Our fleeting present enfolds momentous matters demanding our thoughtful and prompt attention. The solemn and portentious question for each of us is, What can we do with the crowding possibilities of this temple ere we pass into our eternal and unchangable accountability so as to be ready for the oncoming ages?

To meet and gladly enjoy this immortal destiny, let us take a broad and high survey of each opportunity, and make it a grand possibility for the permanent profit and enrichment of life, and, by becoming the Christliest of men, be ready for each upward step into our celestial existance.

HYPOCRITES: OR LIGHTS?

In the Nashville Advocate, of Nov. 9, occurs the following suggestion to the Home Mission Society:

"And really as to this matter of counting old clothes and personal visits (we do not know how general it has become) may we venture to suggest that there are some verses that seem to bear upon it in the beginning of the sixth chapter of Matthew.

Matt. xi, 1. "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven." The plain meaning of this is that the moral quality of alms-giving depends upon the motive behind it. Not the mere fact of being seen, but the fact of desiring to be seen of giving in order to be seen would be displeasing to the Father in heaven. To say otherwise is to place the ban of hypocrisy upon all the noble benefactions whose donors are known from the time of Joses, surnamed Barnabas, to the present.

Matt. v, 16. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." This verse might be set up against the one quoted above. It is given as a reminder that the Christian life is to be founded, not upon verse or chapter of the Bible, but on the whole Book. Good deeds done in the spirit of Christ will be without ostentation and with due regard to the feelings of those who are the recipients.

We think the work of the Home Mission Society meets those conditions. Organized benevolence means regularity, method, system. A necessary part of the system must always be reports of work done.

It is expected that at meetings of the H. M. S. cases of need will be mentioned, plans for relief made, reports given of work done. That such reports should develope into hypocritical self-laudation is a remote contingency.

The work of the society accords with Methodist tradition. Dr. Thomas Carter uses the following from Wesley: "I reminded the United Society that many of our brethren and sisters had not needful food, many were destitute of convenient clothing, many were out of business (and that without their own fault), many were sick and ready to perish; that I had done what in me lay, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, to employ the poor, and to visit the sick, but that I alone was not sufficient for these things, and, therefore, I desired all whose hearts were as my heart: 1. To bring what clothes each could afford. 2. To give weekly a penny or what they could.

Twelve persons were appointed to have charge of this work. Each was to visit the sick of his district every other day, and all met on Tuesday evening to give an account of what they had done and could further do.

The Home Mission Society has been (and is) giving the church a much needed education on the subject of home missions. Modestly, it may be doubted that there would now be a secretary of Home Missions but for the work of the Home Mission Society.

Among the names of Southern Methodism let that of Lucinda B. Helm be enrolled as the inspirer of a great forward movement in home mission work, the crowning effort of a spirit-filled life.

The society reported last year, garments distributed, 96,522; visits to sick and strangers, 263,621; papers and leaflets distributed, 204,301; cottage prayer meetings, 5,024. Would that the figures might be doubled in the next annual report.

MRS. CLARA L. CARTER.

On Tuesday night, Oct. 30, 1906, there passed away, in Arcadia, La., Mrs. Clara L. Carter, wife of Rev. C. W. Carter, D.D., an honored member of the Louisiana Conference. In her going our Church in that State loses one of her most faithful and consistent members. For nearly forty-eight years she lived as helpmeet and companion to her husband, sharing with him the joys and labors incident to the Methodist itinerancy. While always taking an active part in the work of the Church, she considered that her chief sphere was in the preacher's home, conducting its affairs with energy and fidelity, caring for and training the children, and seeking in every way to set before them by precept and example a high ideal of Christian character. Of the eleven children committed to her care, five passed on before in infancy and early youth to await her coming. The remaining six—three sons and three daughters—she lived to see grow up active Christian men and women; and these to-day rise up and call her blessed for the constancy and courage with which she held to her ideal of true motherhood. At the time of her death she had completed by a few months her sixty-sixth year. A vigorous constitution, a clear and strong mind, a loyal and loving heart—these were the elements that nature kindly mixed. To these were added the gifts of grace. Her religious experience was clear and constant. Her Bible was her daily guide, prayer was her supreme delight, and her confidence in God was unshakable. Her illness was long and trying to one whose life had been so active; but as it continued for weary weeks and months, those who sat by her side and ministered to her wants could see that it was doing its part in rounding out to perfect symmetry her character. The finer and purer graces of patience and submission, of humility and childlike trustfulness, shone all the brighter when limned upon a background of suffering and pain. Like the Savior she loved and served, she realized that she, too, was being made perfect through suffering. Her last days were days of calm serenity and of ardent longing to depart and be with Christ; for in his presence she felt was fullness of joy, and at his right hand there were for her pleasures forevermore. — Nashville Christian Advocate.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE REPORTS.

BOARD OF MISSIONS.

To the Bishop and Members of the North Mississippi Conference:

During the year now closing your Board of Missions has had under its care thirty-one mission charges, to which we have made appropriations of $3,850.

Some of our pastors on missions have had very inadequate support, who have yet done faithful and efficient work. These mission charges are, in many instances, the fields from which we draw some of our best men. They must not be neglected. In some portions of our territory our rural population is moving into the towns, thus making the maintenance of our rural charges more and more the care of your Board. New fields are being opened and our church must immediately enter them. Especially is this true of the rapidly growing Yazoo Delta. We are pleased to note that in the Greenville District there is being enterprised the establishment of five new mission charges, and not less than twenty new preaching places. While we are not yet confronted with the conditions of a large foreign immigration, or of city and factory problems to a great extent, we do have the problem of a rapidly depleting rural church. It is but right that our growing towns should assist our ever weakening country charges. It has, therefore, been necessary to increase the assessment for Domestic Missions.

There was never a time when the work in our foreign fields was so inviting and promising as now. The obligation of the church increases with its multiplying opportunities. While the church at large is enterprising greater things for our Lord, it is not to our credit as a Conference that our activities are so feeble and our increase in collections so small. As pastors we need quickening to a sense of our responsibility as leaders and teachers in this high calling.

The movement for the individual support of missionary pastors, and the building of missionary chapels is growing rapidly. We are glad to know that one of our churches, Greenwood, has taken the support of a missionary, and another, West Point, has undertaken the building of a mission chapel in Japan. We confidently look forward to the time when this movement will be much larger in our Conference.

We rejoice that this year two of our districts, the Winona and the Greenville, have paid their entire missionary assessments. In others earnest efforts have been made to that end. But why may not our well-organized charges refuse to be content with paying the bare assessment? A large percent of our charges have fallen far below their assessments.

The Board of Missions has entered again with other Boards of the Conference into an arrangement for the Mid-Year Conference. The one held last June was gratifying in its results. We confidently anticipate a much better Conference this year. J. A. Bowen, E. M. Broyles and J. T. Lewis will represent the Board of Missions in arranging for this Conference.

We have enterprised the establishment of a Missionary Circulating Library, and have appropriated $200 for the purchase of books. These books will be at the call of our people, who will pay a membership fee sufficient to cover the cost of administration.

The following are the officers of the Board for the ensuing quadrennium: W. W. Woollard, president and Conference missionary secretary; J. A. Hall, vice president; W. E. M. Brogan, S. T. Harkey, treasurer.

We are glad to review a communication from the corresponding secretary of the W. F. M. S., indicating the splendid work and growing interest among our women.

W. W. WOOLLARD, President.

ON SUPPORT OF THE MINISTRY.

Whereas the ministry of the Methodist Church has always stood for the best in our civilization, the pioneers in temperance reform, the leaders in every battle for righteousness; and whereas the ministry has never received adequate remuneration for the service which it so unselfishly rendered; and whereas the cost of living has advanced very much in the last few years, and experience teaches us that the best service cannot be obtained if a parsimonious policy of support is adopted; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned laymen, representing a membership of nearly 50,000, urge upon all our official members the necessity and propriety of increasing the salaries of all our preachers.

"The laborer is worthy of his hire."

TEMPERANCE.

With joy and pride, we note the continued growth in prohibition sentiment. The saloon in our state is very nearly a thing of the past. We have reason to believe also that the rum traffic carried on in what are generally known as "blind tigers" has been materially lessened, and in many towns and communities driven out entirely. Our moral, educational, social and legal restrictions have very greatly discouraged and hindered the whisky venders in their nefarious and destructive work. But these restrictions are not yet as closely drawn as our interests demand. Not until intoxicants of every kind cease to be used as a beverage; not until interstate commerce laws cease to recognize them as commodities of trade and prohibit their transportation as such; not until they have been classed by legislative enactment with strychnine and other poisonous drugs and placed entirely in the hands of wise and discriminating physicians, can we afford to slacken our efforts. No evil is doing more to counteract the influence of the Gospel, to undermine the character of our youth, bring our women to sorrow and humiliation, our churches to financial embarrassment and render their efforts ineffective.

In view of these facts, we offer the following for your adoption:

First—That we pledge ourselves to do all we can to discourage the use of intoxicants as a beverage, and to encourage the officers in bringing to justice illicit distillers and venders and in prohibiting the jug trade by express.

Second—That we petition the Congress of the United States and the Legislature of the State to do all they can within constitutional limits to restrict and, if possible, to prohibit the transportation of intoxicants into prohibition territory.

Third—That we call the attention of railroad and express companies to the fact that in allowing their agents to deliver jugs and other express packages to consignees on Sunday under the pretext that they are interstate commerce goods in transit, and in allowing drinking and drunkenness at their depots and express offices, they are causing said agents to violate the laws of our commonwealth, as well as trampling upon the civil and moral rights of our best citizenship, and desecrating the holy Sabbath, whose observance is divinely commanded.

And believing, as we do, that the old-time gospel of Jesus Christ has in it the moral potency requisite to the transformation of human sentiment and human character, we call upon the ministry of this Annual Conference to wage warfare against this evil, to destroy it, and with it social, domestic and religious peace.

(Signed by Walter G. Hughes, Daniel M. Goldie, I. W. Hickham, J. T. Lewis, D. L. Langford, John J. Beck, J. Y. Price.)

The following were adopted:

Resolved, first, That we most heartily approve the action of the last Legislature in passing a bill providing that any person found in possession of half a gallon or more of unlawful liquor is liable to arrest, and in case he fails to prove that he is not a whisky dealer is subject to a fine and imprisonment.

Resolved, second, That the thanks of this Conference be extended to Rev. J. W. Raper, a member of our Conference, for going in person before the Legislature and helping to secure this action.

H. S. STRONG,
D. M. GOLDIE.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Invaluable results have come to our Church from the organization of her scholastic work under the direction of the General Board of Education. Under the enlightened policy we now possess, we have systematic order and co-operative adjustment, which, if pursued with wisdom and energy, will secure to us sound investment of funds and the best results of Christian education.

We are greatly gratified at the report from the General Board. It only needs that the several Annual Conferences in the creation and conduct of their schools shall give hearty co-operation with the plans and purposes of the General Board to secure the largest results. We have special cause for congratulation and thanksgiving to God for the encouraging results shown in the following statistics taken from the reports of the General Board of Education: "The school statistics for 1905-06 show an increase over 1904-05 as follows: Value of grounds and buildings, $6,789,728, an increase of $1,351,729; new buildings erected, increase, 22; cost of such new buildings, $812,074; increase, $377,516. Total endowment, $3,516,173; increase, $115,711. Total income $1,768,108; increase, $680,993. Value of gifts and legacies, $357,541; increase, $266,165. Improvements (excluding new buildings) $245,555; increase, $48,820. Total teachers 1849; increase 255. Total students 34,446; increase 5,368. Students looking to the University 658; increase 32. "A notable feature in our educational development is the fact that an increasing number of our people are contributing regularly, in small amounts, to educational support." It is worthy of comment, however, that the increase in annual Conference collections has during the quadrennium outstripped that of the gifts and legacies."

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

In Vanderbilt University we have a scholastic institution of invaluable worth to Southern Methodism. Her halls are attended by increasing numbers of young men seeking there the equipment they need for the Methodist itinerant ministry. More than 600 of these young men from home and foreign territory of the church came for instruction to this University during the quadrennium just closed. This great school, in her Correspondence Department, is now "offering courses for undergraduates in all the subjects contained in the four years' Conference course of study, besides twenty-one graduate courses. The enrollment of Conference undergraduates the present year is 660. With this constant stream of young manhood endowed with the gifts of the Holy Spirit and equipped with such scholastic annament, what may we not hope for in the conquest of the world for Christ in the first half of the twentieth century? We again urge our young preachers to take up this work and pursue the correspondence course to the utmost of their advantage.

Your Board believes that this great school challenges our confidence in the value of its efficient service and in the fidelity of the men who render this service.

Resolved, That we recognize the very great value of the work done by Vanderbilt University, and we accord to the trustees of that institution and to the faculties of instruction our confidence and support.

Resolved, second, That we commend Vanderbilt University to our young men who seek for a thorough education.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

EPWORTH LEAGUE BOARD.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

One of the duties of the Church of our Lord is to care for the young people. The Epworth League is an organized effort to give proper direction to the energies of young life, and to some extent it is succeeding in this work. We have gone beyond the experimental stage of this work, and yet it is entirely too soon to pass harsh judgment upon it because it has not succeeded in some localities. We have passed the day of great mass meetings and conventions, and it may be well that we have, but we are coming face to face with the real work which the League has set its hand to do. The necessity of the League appears more imperative to-day than ever before. The religious home training of the past generation is largely unknown to-day, and multitudes of our young people must depend upon the Sunday school for instruction in childhood, and the Epworth League for training in youth.

Every faithful pastor must feel the necessity of doing this work but his hands and heart are full of work every Sunday, and he may feel unable to give it his special care. Certainly there is no more needful or promising field of service than that in which the Epworth League is now toiling.

Your Board is pleased to report that a successful Mid-Year Meeting was held at Grenada last June, in which the League had a fair share of attention.

It is gratifying to report that there are 27 Senior Leagues and 24 Junior Leagues, with an increase of 200 members.

The Epworth Era has grown in size, beauty and circulation during the past year, and we heartily commend it to all our people as worthy of their patronage.

This report closes the quadrennium of our work, and we record our gratitude to God for his favor upon us. We urge our preachers-in-charge to give the League a chance to organize mission study classes, and request our young people to observe the quiet hour.

We call special attention of all our preachers to Young People's Day, which is to be observed in the spring, and we hope that all of them will observe it.

G. M. Hull and W. L. Clifton are appointed representatives from this Board to co-operate with the representatives of other boards in providing for a mid-year meeting.

T. W. LEWIS, President.

The financial report of Treasurer Ben P. Jaco shows: Balance on hand Jan. 1, 1906, $26.59; collected from Leagues during year $52.25; total, $83.84; out of which $48.91 was expended, leaving a balance on hand of $34.93.

JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We find that Rev. J. W. Raper, who, upon recommendation of this Board, was directed by a vote of the last Conference to visit all the district conferences during the year, present this cause, and, when practical, take collections, secured subscriptions to the amount of $1,197. $257 of that amount has been collected to date, and placed in the hands of the treasurer of this Board to be forwarded to Rev. J. R. Stewart, secretary and treasurer of the Fund, less $42.50 expended by Brother Raper in traveling from place to place. The remaining list of $940 is placed in the hands of the secretary of this Board to be collected as it falls due. There was also given Brother Raper voluntary subscriptions to the amount of $360 for the "North Mississippi Conference Superannuates' Endowment Fund," $27.50 of which has been paid.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Your Board would express its very great gratification at the presence and efficient service of our secretary of Church Extension, Dr. W. F. McMurray. His able address has placed this cause before the people in an intelligent and impressive manner, and we look for large results. A house of worship conserves the fruits of our labors. A good house represents the liberality of a people; a beautiful house types their piety.

There are more than twenty societies in our Conference that are without buildings. We hope soon to see all these homeless spiritual families well sheltered in respectable houses of worship.

During the past year we have raised for Church Extension $3,025.80, half of which, $1,512.90, is retained for use in our own bounds. The applications for aid always exceed our means. Our rapidly growing territory, especially along the M. J. & K. C. Railroad, and in the great Delta, which is fast filling with a white population, put additional responsibilities upon this Board. We hope, therefore, to have the co-operation of all the preachers in doing the work.

We call attention to the new department of the General Board known as "the Department of Savings Fund for Church Building." Any church, society, or individual may send to the corresponding secretary any funds which are to be used for church building, and thus accumulate a fund sufficient to build creditably, meantime helping others to do likewise.

We also call attention to the recent disciplinary provision for the organization of District Boards of Church Extension. When the presiding elder so desires he may concentrate the forces of his whole district upon one point to build a church. The Greenville District has organized such a Board, from which we hope for large results.

Through Mrs. L. C. Short, corresponding secretary, we learn that the Conference Woman's Home Mission Society has 121 auxiliaries, and has raised $2,326 for connectional purposes, besides a large amount of work done locally for the Orphans' Home and other home enterprises. We commend their work most heartily.

We offer for adoption the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that the presiding elders be requested to give an hour of their district conference sessions to the consideration of Church Extension.

T. W. LEWIS, Chairman.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Sunday School Board recommends the following appropriations for the ensuing year: To needy Sunday schools, to be used at the discretion of the agent of the Board on the recommendation of the pastors of the schools, $75. For the purchase of Children's Day programmes, the same to be purchased and distributed under the supervision of the agent of the Board, $100. For the expenses of district Sunday school institutes, to be arranged for by the Executive Committee after consultation with the presiding elder as to time and place, $100. For the clerical work of the Board, to be used at the discretion of the Executive Committee, $50.

We ask that R. H. B. Gladney, J. D. Borders and R. P. Neblett be appointed a committee to confer with a like committee from the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board as to the advisability of a superannuates' rally for both Conferences.

The work has been carefully looked into by the Board and found to be deepening in interest. The Mid-Year Conference held at Grenada in June in connection with the other Boards of the Conference was a great success. Dr. H. M. Hamill and wife were with us in a highly successful institute at Cleveland in November.

We ask the hearty and sympathetic co-operation of the presiding elders, pastors and superintendents that a forward movement may mark the efforts of next year. The Bible Teachers' Study Circle is commended to the consideration of the adult workers in our schools.

We ask an appropriation of $100 to pay the expense of this Board in participating in the Mid-Year Conference, to be held under the direction of the several Conference boards.

We ask the reappointment of R. P. Neblett as agent of the Board to look after the clerical work in connection with his pastoral charge.

W. O. Harris, treasurer, submits the following statement:

To balance on hand Dec. 10, 1905	$217.79
From Columbus District	150.75
From Greenville District	142.38
From Sardis District	111.18
From Winona District	252.32
From Corinth District	97.21
From Aberdeen District	81.95
From Grenada District	83.88

SPIRITUAL STATE OF THE CHURCH.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The proofs of a good spiritual condition are not of necessity difficult to understand, and they are fittingly indicated by the Savior when he says, "By their fruits ye shall know them"—not by genealogy, not by succession, not by correct theology, not by appropriate ceremonials, important as all these are,—but by their fruits. James gives another statement of the same truth when he says, "I will show you my faith by my works." Bishop Hendrix has well said, "Vital communion with Christ has no substitute."

The fruits of the Spirit appear also in consecrated gifts and resources invested for the cause of Christ and the good of humanity. Gambling in futures, fondness for cards and for the theatre do not class among the evidences of an excellent spiritual condition. On the contrary, these should cause grave apprehension wherever they exist, even to a small extent. The light of such church members may be said to be under a bushel and their slat to be in serious danger of losing its savor.

The diminished number of family altars is a sign of the times, indicative of no good to the cause of Christ. A spiritual church will always be a prosperous and successful church. "Christ formed in us the hope of glory," is a proof of triumph achieved and a prophecy of an eternal salvation. The essentials of religion have been the same from the first, and shall so remain to the very end. "One Lord, one faith, one baptism"—of the Holy Ghost—has been the happy heritage of God's own through all the ages, and must ever remain as the richest legacy and provision for human good. "By one Spirit we are all baptized into one body," and "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Gifts may differ, ceremonials vary, methods be many and diverse, but everywhere the Spirit of Christ is the same.

Sound conversion and earnest doctrinal preaching cannot be too strongly emphasized as essentials to the development of true spirituality, and of the finest graces, and the highest efficiency in that service which perpetuates the victories of the kingdom. Paul's injunction is "take heed unto thyself" and "unto the doctrine." Unmistakable evidences of divine approbation are seen throughout our Church. Large contributions for educational purposes, increased gifts for the cause of missions, and the unusual number of conversions and accessions to the Church this year, all attest the fact of ministerial efficiency and verify the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world."

At no time in the history of the North Mississippi Conference have the preachers wrought more sincerely in keeping the apostolic injunction to do the work of an evangelist, and the large investments for elegant churches and parsonages, and the earnest personal work for souls demonstrate the consecration and piety of the great body of our membership. It is believed that there have been in the bounds of our Conference this year at least three thousand conversions. About this number have been added to the church on profession of faith. There has been a net gain of 2,222 in our membership. The contributions for various benevolences were probably never larger than the present year.

In conclusion, we insist that the children shall not only attend Sunday school, but the preaching of the Word; that the General Rules shall be faithfully read in every congregation; that our people shall not neglect to kneel or at least bow their heads when prayer is made in the congregations; that while the class-meeting, in its original form, is well-nigh extinct, testimony services are still helpful, in order that "those who love the Lord may speak often to one another."

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are profoundly impressed with the importance of this interest of the Church. We know that all arms of the Church exist for the purpose of holding forth the Word of Truth. How true it is that in our own borders there is increased demand for the liberal distribution and teaching of the Word of God! We are pleased to note that our Conference ranks as among the most loyal supporters of the American Bible Society. There is a marked increase in receipts of the board this year over last. On our assessment of $1200 we have paid this year $1018.50, as against $912 the previous year, an increase of $106.50. We recommend an assessment of $1200 for the ensuing year, distributed to the districts the same as last year.

EDUCATION.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Grenada College is moving forward to perfection. As in the case of an individual, the character of an institution is that which determines its reason for being. Grenada College is dominated by a high ideal, and this seed-thought has passed the stage of germination, has made branch, foliage, flower, and even a wealth of fruitage can be seen all about us. We are gratified that this proof of worth is wining more and more the attention of the informed and thoughtful of our territory. The student body each year is becoming more intelligent in aspiration, and more efficient in execution. The graduates are, in their home communities, centers of influence that make for righteousness.

Intelligent devotion to the Church woven into the College life becomes devotion to the Church in the home-life of the Grenada College graduate.

We commend Grenada College, an institution controlled by the idea of making a life for God and the giving of this life back to God. We are grateful to learn that an endowment has been inaugurated for the College and that $10,000 has been subscribed.

It is highly gratifying to the Board to be able to report Millsaps College in a most prosperous condition. Two hundred and seventy students have been enrolled so far this session, indicating that there will be more than three hundred enrolled before the close of the session. There are twenty young men preparing for the ministry, seven of these being from our territory. Twenty-eight are the sons of our preachers. The moral and religious atmosphere of the College is excellent and the most favorable conditions for the growth and development of character are supplied. It is gratifying to note the generous gift of $15,000 from Mr. Carnegie to build a library upon our campus and a like gift from Major Millsaps for its endowment.

During the past eighteen months $8,000 have been added to our resources, $3,000 of which goes into the endowment, $3,000 to the library and $2,000 is in cash and subscriptions. Yet, there is a pressing need for a larger endowment and increased resources to meet the ever enlarging opportunities before us. We commend the college and its interests to our people as worthy in every way to receive our most loyal support.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Extracts from Report of Board of Trustees.

To the Mississippi Annual Conference: The session of 1906-07 has a larger attendance of boarding students than the school has had since the civil war, being double that of the preceding session. There is also a fair attendance of local students. We consider that the faculty is competent and they are devoting themselves assiduously to their work.

The standard of study has been raised and students who did at one time expect to take M. E. L. in 1908 are studying now for A.B., 1909.

RELIGIOUS WORK.

There is a well organized Epworth League within the College, which, besides holding meetings at the College and doing missionary reading, sometimes holds a public meeting at the church. The College is also organized into a Sunday school, which meets in the College chapel as a branch of the Port Gibson Sunday School. The Bible has a regular place in the curriculum. Everything is being done to give the girls a high standard of morals and true religious instincts.

The iron fence put around the front campus during the fall of 1905 has been paid for by collections raised by the president of the School.

Improvements.—Since the last Annual Conference the chapel and office have been repainted and other improvements and repairs have been done upon the buildings and grounds. The funds for this purpose have been furnished to the amount of $661 by the friends of the School within and without Port Gibson. Though the improvement was planned by the president of the School and had his personal oversight, the treasurer of our Board has made all disbursements.

Needs.—The chief needs of the School, from a material standpoint, at present seem to be a steam-heating plant and additional dormitory and recitation rooms. The present brick dormitory ought to be enlarged so as to have an addition of eight rooms up-stairs for dormitory purposes and four large recitation down-stairs. This would make the building large enough to meet the demands that seem to be upon it at this point.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE REPORTS.

TO THE BISHOP AND MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:

Dear brethren: Your committee on District Conference Records beg leave to submit the following report:

We have had before us the records of all the districts, and find that all of them are neatly and correctly kept with the exception that the following errors occur in the Seashore record: "A motion to expunge from the record a certain action of the Conference, also the record of the action to be expunged appears in the minutes."

The suggestion of your last committee as to the marginal indexing of the minutes has been observed by all of the secretaries.

REPORT OF THE BIBLE SOCIETY BOARD.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear brethren: We your Board, to whom has been committed for the last four years the interest of the American Bible Society, are delighted to report that it has made very gratifying progress. The assessment has advanced from $1,000 to $1,500 for the last Conference year. Of that assessment we paid $1,396.78.

The American Bible Society has published about two million copies of the Word of God and portions thereof. These books are published in about 108 different tongues. About two-thirds of these books go to foreign mission work. A colored agent in the South, Rev. Wragg, with a company of colporteurs is rapidly putting a Bible in every negro home. We reaffirm our fealty to the Society, and recommend an advance movement.

We recommend an assessment of $1,800 for the Conference year 1907, and apportion it as follows:

Meridian District	$300
Forest District	235
Seashore District	330
Jackson District	265
Brookhaven District	250
Natchez District	210
Vicksburg District	210
Total	$1,800

Respectfully submitted,

R. BRADLEY, President.

REPORT OF BOARD OF MISSIONS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear brethren: Your Conference Board of Missions joins with the Church at large in gratitude to God for that increase of missionary spirit manifested by large contributions to this vitally important cause, for the large number of Conferences, districts and charges paying this claim in full and for the increase in the number of individuals and churches supporting individual missionaries. In our Conference we report a gratifying advance: We have raised this year for foreign missions, $11,154.92, as against $—— for 1905, and for domestic missions, $8,379.95, as against $..... This is on assessment only, and is a total increase for missions on assessment of $——.

In addition to this, several of our Sabbath schools are engaged in raising money for the education of young Japanese ministers; there has been an increase in the number of individuals supporting missionaries, and several mission study classes have been organized. In these, as well as in many other ways brought to the attention of the board, a missionary conscience is being created and quickened.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is in a healthier condition than for some years past, and report that during the year Miss Watkins has gone to China and Miss Drake is at the Scarritt Bible and Training School preparing for the foreign field. With these additions to our honor-roll the Mississippi Conference counts missionaries as having gone from us to the foreign field. We have been glad to have with us Dr. J. R. Nelson, one of the missionary secretaries, and now in charge of the Home Department work being enterprised by the General Board of Missions. We most cordially endorse the movement and promise all needful help and co-operation within our power.

The board is also in receipt of a communication from Dr. Ed. E. Cook, in charge of the Young People's Department, and we request our pastors to put themselves in communication with Dr. Cook at once, and the organization of mission study classes among the young people of the Church. Every available means is offered us, and we can no longer fail to take this available step.

We are glad, also, to learn that the Training School at Nashville is now being operated on a thoroughly substantial basis, and can declare our confidence in it in no better way than by stating that while we sent one man to the Training School last year, the board has taken steps looking to the sending of four this year.

The board would again urge and plead with the pastors to put Go Forward in the homes of our people. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," is as true to-day as when uttered by the prophet, and in no way can we give better, fresher, more reliable and more stimulating information to our churches than is found in the columns of this paper.

The assessment for domestic missions for 1907 is fixed at $10,000, and we request the Conference to permit the assessment of $11,000 for foreign missions to remain. The apportionment of this assessment to the several districts is as follows:

District:	F. M.	D. M.
Brookhaven	$1,750	$1,525
Forest	1,510	1,350
Jackson	1,725	1,550
Meridian	1,550	1,425
Natchez	1,250	1,050
Seashore	2,000	2,050
Vicksburg	1,215	1,050
	$11,000	$10,000

The apportionment to the several mission charges for 1907 are as follows:

Summit	200
Monticello	100

REPORT NUMBER TWO. BOARD OF MISSIONS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear brethren: We have had under consideration for some time the advisability of putting in the field a missionary evangelist as provided for in the discipline of 1900, and respectfully recommend for nomination by this Conference and Episcopal appointment Rev. H. M. Ellis. The board has combined the office of Conference missionary secretary and that of evangelist, and has made ample provision for the support of the appointee. Respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear fathers and brethren: It becomes our pleasant duty to bring to you at the close of the quadrennium of earnest effort the report that never before was our Sunday school work in so prosperous a condition. There has been a healthy growth in numbers and an increased circulation of our literature. During the four years we have seen the passing away of much that was objectionable, and the introduction of new and more excellent methods.

Four very successful institutes have been held, and have been most instructive and helpful to all who took part, conducted as they were by Dr. Hamill, assisted by his gifted wife. The last one held at Columbia in May was perhaps the very best of the series, though not so largely attended as some others.

The superb work of Dr. and Mrs. Hamill has given impetus and stimulus to the work never before realized. If it be true, as some one has said, that the Sunday school is the noblest development of the 19th century, then it deserves the very best efforts of preachers and laymen. One of its latest and most important developments is the teachers' training, and the times absolutely demand progress in this great work. The crude work done in the past by many teachers has been a bar to intelligent progress on the part of the Sunday school scholar. In order that the teacher may get the Word of God into the minds and hearts of the Sunday school scholars, he must know the Book. We are not to take it for granted that the teachers are perfectly familiar with the lessons, for many of them are not. The preparation of the lesson is all important in our Sunday school work. We would urge with special emphasis that teachers' meetings be held in all our Sunday schools, in order to secure a more intelligent knowledge of the lesson on the part of the teacher. John R. Pepper has said that the teaching function of the Sunday school must ever be recognized as the chief foundation-stone of the structure.

The debt that encumbered the board at the beginning of the quadrennium has been entirely wiped out, and we have been able to supply all the demands for literature that have been made

BEAR IN MIND

Every stitch of our clothing goes to you with our prestige of nearly half a century in business and our record of past success is our pledge and promise of the future. We manufacture nearly all our clothing for men and boys, "made-to-measure," as well as "ready-to-wear," out of material of our own importation, enabling us to keep pace with the styles as well as guarantee the quality, fit and finish of every garment.

And we save you on the price—don't forget that.

The warmth and dryness of the backward winter season has left us with a trifle more Overcoats, Cravenettes and Double-Breasted Suits than we care to carry longer, and for that reason we are specializing a line of these garments to an inducingly interesting extent.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON THE STATE OF THE CHURCH.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear brethren: We give thanks to God for the great favor he has shown us this year in that he has blessed our labors with large returns and bestowed upon us peace throughout our Conference.

Gracious revivals of religion have been general; the Church is seeking and finding more indisputable evidence of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit in her work; higher and more Scriptural views of the Christ-life prevail, and the spirit of harmonious co-operation among Christian workers prevails. "Brotherly love continues," and reciprocal confidence marks the relation of member to member.

We note with gladness the large number of conversions and additions to the Church membership during the year, and the very evident increase of missionary spirit, which is the spirit of Christ. We also give thanks to God for calling more of our young men to the ministry of the Word, and of our maidens to the missionary work of the Church.

The increase of interest in Christian literature and Christian education not only indicates healthy sentiment, and increasing appreciation of both duty and advantage, but is a prophecy of still better work and great accomplishments in the days to come.

The work of our Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues prospers. Methods of instruction are constantly improving and higher ideals of life are being urged upon our young people. Here also is hopeful prophecy for the morrow.

The larger liberality of our people is expressed in the effort, generally successful, to meet fully the demands for ministerial support and benevolent outlay; the institutions of the Church are being supported as never before in our history.

For all these things we give humble praise and thanksgiving to our gracious Lord and provident Head of the Church. We would be blind to facts or untrue to obligations were we to fail to give warning of dangers to be shunned and influences to be fought. The spirit of the age is one of irreverence and levity. The meditative habit without which there can be no sustained church-life of high reach or deep experiences is in danger of being destroyed by restless rush for gain and feverish thirst for pleasure, and the circle of worshippers about the hearthstone less frequently proclaims the consciousness of God in the home. We need to emphasize the duty and blessedness of household piety, and the morning and evening family prayer, the gathering of the family, as such, at the place of public worship, and the cultivation of the spirit of reverence for sacred things. And these things will be done by the help of God.

Respectfully submitted.

WM. H. LAPRADE, Chairman.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

Dear brethren: We your committee on Publishing interests respectfully submit the following report:

Publishing House: The Church is to be congratulated on the successful administration of the affairs of its Publishing House. A half million dollar increase of sales and an increase of assets amounting to more than fifty-one thousand dollars is a noteworthy evidence of prosperity.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE—With profound gratification we chronicle the fact that there has been a very large increase in the circulation of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. A year ago the number of subscribers was only 4,472; at present the subscription list contains more than seven thousand names. We are pleased to note a decided improvement in the mechanical make-up and general appearance of the paper. Its editorial conduct merits high commendation. The paper is worthy of a place in every Methodist home in our bounds. Let us give it a still larger subscription list and thus extend its sphere of influence.

The Review measures up to the same high standard attained under the former administration. We most cordially commend it to our preachers and reading laymen as worthy of their patronage.

The Epworth Era: The Epworth Era is doing excellent work as the organ of the Epworth League. We are pleased to note a continued increase in its circulation, as well as decided improvement in its general appearance.

Sunday School Literature: The several periodicals published in the interest of the Sunday school are without exception of a high order.

The Nashville Advocate. The Nashville Christian Advocate, in its form and appearance is above criticism. Its editorial management is in many respects praiseworthy. Candor, however, compels us to say that in our opinion the editorial conduct of the paper deserves censure in one respect. We, therefore, offer for adoption the following resolution:

Whereas, the Nashville Advocate in its issue of Sept. 7 contained an editorial in the following language: "Is immortality an essential endowment of the human soul? Must the soul live always, even though it would choose strangling rather than life? Are the lost, the finally impenitent, as surely immortal as the saved in heaven? Is conscience of the pains of hell as surely eternal as enjoyment of the bliss of paradise? We do not know. That man is essentially immortal is thought to be the teachings of the Bible, but our opinion is that the Bible is silent on this point. We are ready, more ver. to concede that it would be a relief to us if a closer study of the Bible and of the facts of human consciousness should bring the conviction that the unhappy dead will sooner or later lapse into absolute and final unconsciousness."

Whereas, the above quoted language expresses doubt concerning the Scriptural doctrine that "the wicked shall go away into everlasting punishment."

Whereas, this is one of the fundamental doctrines of our holy religion, therefore, be it

MANAGER.

When churches become so cold and formal as to be characterized as "sacred refrigerators" and "dispensers of the gospel on ice," it is time to put a warming pan in the pulpit, and to throw a few fire-brands among the people. We cannot imagine for what purpose such churches hold together.

Preaching that stirs the consciences of men and brings them to repentance is likewise apt to stir the wicked one and put him to work to save his followers. We have known men to sit with respectful silence under the appeals of the gospel, and then leave the church-yard yelling like wild Indians. The spirit of evil was doing his work.

There are some who determine the validity of a preacher's ministry by the stamp of his parchment. If this bears the seal of St. Peter, or the signature of one who has come down the line of succession, he is hailed as a brother and fellow-laborer. No account is taken of the souls he has saved or the hearts he has comforted. Our Lord's test is ignored: "By their fruits ye shall know them."

* * *

When one of Wesley's helpers was arrested and brought before an English magistrate as a disturber, the only witness against him was the husband of an ill-tempered woman. He testified that before his wife heard the prisoner's preaching and was converted "she was a great scold. Now she is so quiet." "Turn the man lo se," said the magistrate, "and let him convert every scold in town." Such is the power of the gospel.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

The commissioners appointed by the General Conference to determine the ownership of Vanderbilt University, and the relation of our Bishops to the Board of Trust, have rendered their decision. It is worth shouting over.

Ever since Central University (the original name of the Vanderbilt) was established early in the seventies, those who assisted in organizing and maintaining the institution have labored under the impression that the University was the property of the Church. Certainly this was the view of Dr. William C. Johnson, in whose brain the University was conceived, and at whose call the first company of representative men—composed of Bishops and others—met at his home to discuss the project. The ownership, as far as we ever heard, was never doubted or disputed as long as Bishop McTyeire, first president of the Board of Trust, was alive. In the original charter the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were incorporated as "visitors," empowered with duties usually belonging to such official position. Not until recently was this denied.

The original charter, recognizing the Church as owner, and our Bishops as ex-officio visitors, was too narrow in the estimation of some, and hampered the University, and a move was put on foot to make a change. The Board of Trust, as we understand, assuming to be a self-perpetuating body, and having absolute control, filed an application for a new charter. This charter, filed with the Secretary of State of Tennessee in 1905, was drawn up in accordance with the contention of Chancellor Kirkland, and some members of the Board of Trust, whose names we do not know. They contended that the University "was a corporation brought into existence by the State of Tennessee, and amenable to the State; that the Board of Trust was self-perpetuating, with absolute authority to hold the property of Vanderbilt University in trust, and to administer upon it for the benefit of the youth of the South; that the original provision in the charter gave to the Bishops supervisory powers, and directed them to act conjointly with the Board of Trust in certain matters, was mere surplusage, and that the Bishops had no rights in the administration of the affairs of Vanderbilt University, except such as were granted by the sufferance or the courtesy of the Board of Trust."

When Bishop Hoss, who was in Brazil at the time the new charter was filed, learned what had been done, he immediately took the necessary steps to arrest the movement. In the meantime, the General Conference of 1906 convened and the whole matter went before that body. The result was the appointment of a commission to investigate and settle the points at issue. Bishop Hoss, with his counsel, Mr. A. W. Biggs, of Memphis, went before the commission with the following contention:

"That Vanderbilt University was a corporation created by the Methodsit Episcopal Church, South, and for the purpose of legally holding the University in trust for the benefit of the Church.

"That the Board of Trust was elective by the Church, and subject to the control and regulation of the Church.

"That nothing but the naked title to the property vested in the Board, and whatever powers the Board exercised, were conferred by the Church.

"That the College of Bishops was, by its charter rights, the visitor of Vanderbilt University, and that, as such visitor the College of Bishops had all the rights of direction and management that inhered in the founder."

The contention of Bishop Hoss was sustained by the commission in every important particular, the point of difference being, that, while "the Bishops do sustain the relation of visitors to Vanderbilt University; they are not members of the Board of Trust unless so elected by the General Conference."

Under the decision of the commission the Board of Trust has not absolute control of the University, nor is it a self-perpetuating body. The commissioners say, "under the statutes of Tennessee, if the General Conference does not act in the matter of electing trustees, then the Board of Trustees may elect members to fill vacancies in that Board, and that Board, of course, may also elect any or all of the Bishops to membership, that being a matter also within their discretion."

It is a remarkable fact, as stated by an editorial writer of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, that "in the application for the new charter the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, did not appear, and there was no reference to the relationship that obtained between the University and the Church." From this it is easy to see that, if the new charter had been granted, and passed unchallenged into the hands of the Board of Trust, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would not only have lost all property rights in the University, but also all voice in its control. Both are now assured.

To those who, like the Nashville American, and others, believe that a great university cannot be maintained by any denomination of Christians, it may sound like a death knell to say that Vanderbilt University belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It may disgust them to hear it said that the General Conference will elect no one to the Board of Trust who is not a member of, and in hearty sympathy with, the Church. But we venture to say it. Those who entertain any fears may rest assured that the denomination which has heretofore furnished ninety per cent of the patronage, will not forsake the University because it has been declared to be the property of the Church.

PERSONALS.

Rev. Wm. Schuhle, of Jackson, La., and Rev. H. W. VanHook of Biloxi, Miss., were in the city last week and kindly remembered the Advocate office, for which we thank them.

A short note from Rev. Theo. Copeland, 1927 St. Louis Ave., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I am happy in my work." This his many friends in Mississippi and Louisiana will be glad to hear.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, missionary secretary for the Mississippi Conference has established headquarters in Jackson. Brethren interested in his work will bear his address in mind.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Carrollton Avenue Church, is spending the Christmas holidays with his parents in Mississippi. His pulpit, Sunday last, morning and evening, was filled by Dr. F. N. Parker.

A word of encouragement comes to us in a personal note from Rev. R. W. Tucker, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, La. He says: "The Advocate is receiving much praise these days, from many quarters."

Rev. B. P. Fullilove has entered upon his work, Potts Camp Circuit, and has been cordially welcomed by the people. They have expressed their appreciation, not only in word, but "in deed and in truth." Brother Fullilove is likewise full of gratitude.

Brother J. W. Applewhite, one or our friends, and a member and worker in our church, died at his home in Kosciusko, Miss., Nov. 15, 1906. His illness was only of a few days' duration. His many friends mourn his departure, but not without hope.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, who served Trenton Circuit as a supply, has this year been secured as supply for Scotland Circuit, both in the Mississippi Conference. Brother Nolen, in a note, tells us that he had spent one day on the work and obtained one subscriber and four renewals for the Advocate.

The Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative gives a fine account of the services conducted by Rev. C. P. Moss the first Sunday of his new year in his important charge. He was welcomed by a large congregation, preached a good sermon, which pleased and enconraged the people. Brother Moss has before him the prospect of a good year.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, writing from West Point, Miss., says: "A splendid audience greeted me yesterday at my first service. My worthy predecessor left the work well organized and in good condition. I entered upon the year's work with high hopes and great expectations. This is a good field and our church is thoroughly intrenched here. I anticipate a year of large prosperity."

Rev. O. W. Bradley of the North Mississippi Conference was married Dec. 20 in the Baptist Church at New Hebron, Miss., to Miss Annie Berry, Rev. T. M. Bradley, brother of the groom, officiating. The bride is an active and efficient Christian and will be much help to Brother Bradley in his work. We wish them great happiness and success.

Rev. T. W. Adams sends us a correct list of the appointments in his district—the Brookhaven. We thank Brother Adams. We felt sure that some of the appointments were wrong, but we could do no better, following, as we did, the list in the daily paper. If the secretary of the Conference will furnish us a correct list we will take pleasure in printing it. We have received everything in the way of reports, etc., except the appointments.

Bishop McCabe, known throughout the country as Chaplain McCabe, was stricken with apoplexy less than two weeks ago, and died in New York after a few days' suffering. He was among the older Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was remarkably popular as chaplain in the army, and afterwards as one of the missionary secretaries of his church. He was a gifted and notable singer—to which fact was largely due his popularity and usefulness.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Black has been transferred from the Mississippi to the North Mississippi Conference, and has been appointed to Tupelo. Rev. T. W. Lewis has been appointed Commissioner of Education for Millsaps College.

A NOTE FROM REV. T. W. LEWIS.

Dear Advocate: Having been appointed agent of Millsaps College for this Conference year, I hereby call upon all the preachers and people called Methodists in the State of Mississippi to aid me in this work. We are planning a great foward movement for Millsaps College this year. Major R. W. Millsaps' proposition to duplicate every dollar raised by the people of the Conferences is a standing challenge to our loyalty and liberality. Our resources are entirely inadequate to meet the growing demands upon us. We must enlarge. I hereby call upon all the preachers to write to me, inviting me to visit their charges. Name a time when I may visit you. Cordially yours, T. W. LEWIS.

on an increase in the number of societies and the number of houses of worship erected during the past year. According to the general minutes for 1905, the total number of societies is 18,505, an increase of 409 for the year. The houses of worship number of 15,735, being an increase of 536 for the year. From the same sources we find that there was an increase of $2,235,358 in the value of houses of worship. This reveals the fact that there are 2770 spiritual families which have not been provided with houses in which to worship. During the fiscal year ending March 30, 1906, the General Board aided churches by donation amounting to $50,219, and thirty-eight churches by loans aggregating $40,250. The Conference Board aid 437 churches, amounting to $51,655. In the same period the General Board had 232 meritorious applications asking for $123,784 in donations, and $155,080 in loans. The General Board needs $125,000 annually for donations, and the working capital of the loan funds should be increased to $500,000. Our Conference contributed $3,154.60, or 94 per cent of the Church Extension Assessment last year.

Our board regrets not being able to give to each applicant all asked for, but when we consider that there is $5,500 asked for, and we have only $1,561.90 at our disposal, we carefully and prayerfully considered the claims and distributed as per treasurer's report.

We recommend that the presiding elder of each district bring the matter of Church Extension prominently before his district conference and urge full collections.

The receipts of the treasurer for the two quarters already ended for this fiscal year are largely in excess of the two corresponding quarters of last year. At the last Annual Meeting appropriations were made to the following parsonages, which are being paid as they fall due:

REPORT OF THE JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear brethren: Your Joint Board of Finance reports as follows: We glean from a communication from the trustees of the endowment fund for Superannuate Preachers and the Widows and Orphans of Deceased Preachers some facts which are gratifying because of the success to the fund indicated thereby. To date there has been received into the funds from all sources, $190,003.26. Most of this amount is now loaned on good security at from 6 per cent to 8 per cent interest.

The trustees remind us that the modest sum of $2 from each church in our connection would add to this fund $30,000 annually. We, therefore, recommend that all of our pastors present this cause to each of their congregations and endeavor to raise not less than $2 at each place. One of our claimants, Rev. W. W. Hurst, went to his final reward this year.

We have collected this year for Conference claimants $7,389.30 from the several districts as follows:

District.	Ass'd.	Paid

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear brethren: Your committee on Sabbath Observance submit the following report:

The Christian Sabbath is an institution of God, and its proper observance is essential to the highest physical, moral and spiritual good of man. The obligation to keep the Sabbath sacred is a moral obligation, and the violation of that obligation is an immorality. Insofar as the Sabbath is protected by the civil law its observation is a civil obligation, the violation of which cannot be reconciled with good citizenship.

The discipline of our Church expressly prohibits the "Doing of ordinary work" and "Buying and selling" on the Sabbath, so that the profaning of the day by doing secular work, or by buying or selling goods, is a positive violation of the solemn obligation assumed before God at the altar of the Church and cannot be consistent with the spirit of our holy religion.

Notwithstanding all this, we find that in very numerous instances the Sabbath is being violated in the interest of business and pleasure. There is a growing tendency to operate railroads and mills and factories, and in some sections to sell goods, without regard to the Sabbath. Men who are citizens of our commonwealth, men who recognize God, and are members of the Christian Church, are violating the laws of the country, the laws of the Church, and the law of God by running these industries, or by laboring therein on the Sabbath. These things ought not so to be.

We recognize the fact that in this as in all moral issues, the Christian ministry must take the lead; therefore, we urge all our preachers to give proper [illegible] and emphasis to this question in their [illegible] ing the people that the civil law, the [illegible] and the vows of Church membership, all require strict observance of the Holy Sabbath; also we urge them to live above reproach in this matter. We would also urge all our laymen to be true to the law of God and the Church at this point, and to use every possible means to preserve the sanctity of this holy institution.

W. W. SIMMONS,
H. J. MOORE.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Bishop and Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear brethren: Your committee on Temperance beg leave to submit the following report:

After reviewing the condition of the temperance cause in our Conference territory, we find ground for gratitude to God for the growing strength and steady gains made by the temperance forces, and for the prospect of soon ridding more of our territory of the vile and hurtful traffic in intoxicating liquors; for the general denunciation of the violation and evasion of the prohibition laws; for the vigorous efforts made to apprehend, prosecute and mete out justice to such offenders; and for the "persistent effort made to abolish the licensed saloon where it still exists."

Resolved, first, That we take this method to again show our confidence in the wisdom and counsel of our fathers who taught us to abstain from spirituous liquors, unless in cases of necessity, and this should be governed by the enlightened conscience, and to express our uncompromising attitude toward the liquor traffic in every form and urge the use of every honorable means for its final suppression.

Resolved, That while we rejoice in the victories already gained by the temperance forces, we heartily condemn every method that is used to bring liquor into prohibition territory, namely the delivery of same by railroad and express companies under false representation, as glaare, etc., to unidentified persons whose charrs and means of gaining a livelihood are unwn.

We would call attention only to condemn the practice of se mail carriers in rural districts who handled, deliver for others, intoxicating liquors, and those merchants, who are members of the Church who allow their places of business to become very points of same; and therefore, call on our preachers and people to use every legitimate means to have such practices discontinued.

We are glad to commend and endorse the action of every express carrier in the State which has honored itself of the good people in this important matter.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that discipline should be more strictly adhered on the temperance question as laid down in paragraph 28, and in chapter five, pages 04 and 05 the discipline of 1906.

Resolved, That in order to quicken the conscience, the membership of our Church and to be understand more intelligently this evil, we commend that our pastors preach upon the subject least once a year to each congregation.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION CALENDAR FOR 1907.

The new Youth's Companion Calendar for 1907 is both useful and ornamental. The calendar proper is in bold, clear type, and is given plenty of space. For its decorative side it is exceptionally beautiful. Each of the four panels presents a masterly reproduction of an original painting. On the first leaf will appear "A Venetion Scene," by Thomas Moran; on the second, "A Group of Children," by Maud Humphrey; on the third, "A Study in Bird Life," by Giacomelli; on the fourth, "The Blacksmith Shop," by F. Luis Mora. Each is worth separate framing, and for this purpose the panels are loosely tied together, so that each may be exposed in turn, yet all preserved. The panels are 12 inches high by 7 3-4 inches wide. The calendar is copyrighted and published by The Youth's Companion exclusively for those who send $1.75 for The Companion for 1907.

I put MACBETH on my lamp-chimneys as I am satisfied to be known as the maker of the only good lamp-chimney.

There are other lamp-chimneys, but their makers fail to own them. It's no wonder.

My Index is useful to everyone who owns a lamp, and it's free.

Address, MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

LESSON FOR JAN. 6, 1907.

(Gensis i, 1-25.)

Golden Text: "In the beginning God created the heaven and earth."—Genesis i, 1.

Having spent the past twelve months in the study of the life and works of our Lord while on earth, we have before us for the next twelve months a study of the Old Testament Scriptures, and in this work let us never for one moment deviate from the one great truth, that all that has been revealed to us in God's Word points directly or indirectly to the Savior of fallen man.

We of our day and time are blessed by being able to apprehend the types and shadows used by the Father to show his plan of redemption, for Jesus, the Savior, has come and prophesies of old concerning him have been fulfilled, and we have the help of the Holy Spirit, a part of whose work is to "show us the things of Christ." So then, if Jesus said to the students of his day concerning the search of the Scriptures, "They are they which testify of me," how much greater are the advantages enjoyed by us in the persuit of the same blessed object?

How plain and simple is Moses' account of the creation, a subject so stupendous that a modern writer would almost exhaust a vocabulary in his account of it! Moses' account is characteristic of the man, for "the man Moses was very meek, above all the men on the face of the earth." (Numbers xii, 3.) The language is within the mental scope of all; the wayfaring man may readily read the facts and be impressed with the great power of God; also may the profound scholar find the foundation on which to build the most impressive theories. Some have told to others of kindred minds the story of the creation in strains of sweetest music. The poet, too, has given the labor of inspiration in his song of the great beginning.

When we think of the Almighty speaking worlds and heavens and firmaments into existence, we are filled with awe and shrink from the presence of such might and power; then we remember all that Jesus has told us of his Father and our Father, and how he has so loved the world, then love casteth out fear and our interest is heightened, for is he not indeed our Father? With this thought, let us read and think of all that "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" to tell the world of the greatness of its Creator.

The subject of our lesson is God, the Creator, and we are to place our mind on him more than on the act of creation or the things created. It was after the world was made that we are told it was without form and void, and that darkness was upon the face of the deep. Then the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. Then began the work of development. All the vast resources of the earth were made in the beginning, to be discovered and applied in God's own good time for the benefit and happiness of man. Geologists and other scientific men can tell us the exact age of the world—that is, they can do so to their own satisfaction, for have they not calculated to a nicety how much time a certain strata of the soil would consume in order to have its present appearance?

The Christian Bible student has also made a deep study of the question, and he can tell us "that the worlds are formed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." (Hebrews ii, 3.) So, after the scientist and the student have exhausted all effort, they can but exclaim as did Job: "Lo, these are parts of his ways, but how little portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power, who can understand?" (Chap. xxvi, 14.) If at the humble wedding at Canan Jesus made a wine that was complete in its purity and ripeness, could he not by the same power make a world, with all its varied resources, just ready for man to be instrumental in its development?

At first all the world was darkness, and such darkness as is in contrast with the light of the glory of God—not the darkness of night, that we compare with the light of the shining sun. So the first of creation, after the world was made, was that which was needed. "Let there be light," came the command, "and there was light." What a problem for the scientist! The elements heeding a command! The sweetest picture to us that love the Lord is that figure in the bow of the storm-tossed boat, commanding the wind to be at peace and the waves to be still.

In regular order, day by day, God made ready this beautiful world. Everything created appeared in its maturity, the grass, the herb, the fruit tree yielding fruit—all were ready to cast its seed to produce more of its kind. It seemed that all was finished in the glorious summer days, when all nature is glad, for, after the work of each day, God looked upon it and pronounced it good. Jesus was there—the beloved disciple tells us that in the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God.

Are we not to learn from this study that God, in his triune power, gave light for man's happiness on earth, and that he sent Jesus, the light, for man's happiness in the way and after he is taken to his eternal home? After we have learned to love the Creator as our rather, all that is told of his wonderful works make us to rejoice the more. The redeemed soul says: "My Father hath made this great world, and in his power he has saved me for eternal joy." The work of creation goes on, although it was complete in the first week of the world; that was the setting in motion that which has continued through all ages. This subject is vast and great, almost beyond our comprehension; yet the Creator has taught each one of us to pray for a spiritual creation: "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

FAMILY ANTAGONISMS.

The sense of pride which bids us be silent about our domestic difficulties cannot do away with the fact that in many a household certain antagonisms exist which go far toward destroying the happiness of the home. The ideal family where each child seeks the wish of the other rather than its own, and yields unquestioning obedience to the will of the parents, may exist in heaven, but it is rarely seen on earth.

There are mothers who train children from infancy to dwell together in unity; there are others who cannot do this, and through no fault of their own. Radical differences of temperament often cannot be reasoned or persuaded away, but go so deep that they will persist while flesh and blood endure. With children born to such antagonisms, there is but one hope for the peace of the home-life—separation.

Two boys may be obliged to room together. One is healthy and boisterous, and loves to collect birds' nests and dead reptiles and keep them close at hand; the other is fastidious, and appalled by the noise and confusion in which he has to live. The parent says they must each give up to the other and punishes them when they quarrel, and the inevitable consequence is that the breach between the two widens daily. Two sisters of opposite dispositions, one nervous, orderly, peaceable, the other strong, wilful, and helter-skelter, have to endure daily an enforced companionship, constantly rebelling against it and those who insist upon it. Naturally, as soon as they are grown they drift apart at once, the farther the better, as they think. In both these cases how simple it might have been to have separated the children, if necessary, give them different homes for a time, and so since history proves the fact, let absence make their hearts grow fonder.—Caroline Benedict Burrell.

FORGETTING THE PAST.

Paul says, "Forgetting those things which are behind and reaching to those things which are before." This is a good motto for every day. Let us forget the past wherever its memory hinders present duty. Let us make a success in spite of past failures. It is not the man who makes no mistakes that makes the most of life. It is the man who, like a good general, knows how to win victories out of defeats who will be crowned victor at the end of the warfare. Who has not had his failures! The only ignoble thing in this world is discouragement and cowardice on the battlefield of life.—New York Observer.

Mrs. SALLIE ESTRADA, the daughter of J. M. and C. E. Rogers, departed this life at her home in Trout, La., Aug. 26, 1906. All was done for her that loved ones and kind friends could do, but God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to take her unto himself. She was born in Smith County, Miss., Feb. 15, 1874. She came to this State with her parents in 1879, joined the M. E. Church when young, and lived a Christian life till she was called to her heavenly home, where there will be no more parting. She leaves a husband, one little girl, a mother, two brothers and five sisters to mourn their loss. She has gone to meet her father, sister, brother and son who have gone on before. May her loved ones follow on and meet her in the better land. Her sister,

MARY ELIZABETH WEST (nee Smith) was born March 22, 1862, and was married to W. M. West, Nov. 8, 1882. She was the youngest child of T. J. and Feba Smith. After a painful illness of several months, died July 2, 1906. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in July, 1880, and lived a devoted Christian all her life, and was strong in faith that God knew best for her, and was ready and willing to go at his call. She leaves a husband and three children, with many friends and relatives to mourn their loss. She left her influence that will live on through the endless ages of eternity. Its sweetness is not lost, but still lives in the hearts and minds of husband and children. She left her prayers for her loved ones, closed her eyes, and with a smile, said she was going. It was my privilege to know Sister West but a short while. But we have the assurance that it is well with her. She had been a great sufferer for many years, but bore her sufferers with patience, and leaned on and trusted in him who is able to help. She was ready to meet her God, and her loved ones may know where to meet her. Her pastor,

J. F. WALTMAN.

CHAS. F. SLOCUM was born in St. Helena Parish, La., Feb. 7, 1854, and died in Livingston Parish, Aug. 6, 1906. He was a sufferer for fourteen years and went to New Orleans several times for treatment. All was done that loved ones, friends and physicians could do, but God said, "Come up higher." I visited Brother Slocum a number of times during his last illness, talked to him of death. He said he was ready to go, and his only regret was leaving his family. Brother Slocum was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Brother Barney Pipkins in a revival at Pipkins chapel in 1873. He was married to Miss Lula A. Van Norman by Rev. J. A. Parker. He leaves a wife and ten children to mourn his going away. While they miss him in the home, they weep not as those who have no hope. He is shouting on the other shore. His dying words were: "I am walking the golden streets." What a blessed hope of meeting our brother again in the sweet by and by. Look up loved ones and trust in him, who has promised you grace in these trying times. Our God has promised to be a father to the fatherless and the widow's God, and we know his promises are true. He was prepared to go, and the loved ones may all gather one by one if they only trust their father's God. His pastor,

J. F. WALTMAN.

Real happiness consists not in material things round about you, but in spiritual things within you. Not what you have, but what you are, is the true basis of a happy life. What you are, determines your interpretation of the things without. You cannot but be wretched if you insist on pulling to-morrow's burden back into the realm of to-day. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." It has been well said that no man ever sank under the burden of the day. It is when to-morrow's burden is added to the burden of to-day that the weight is more than a man can bear. Never load yourselves so. If you find yourselves so loaded, at least remember this—it is your own doing, not God's. He begs you to leave the future to him and mind the present.—George R. Lunn, D.D.

How You Can Rid Yourself of Catarrh

In the practice of my profession many years ago, I very quickly found out that the treatment of catarrh as laid down in medical books and taught in medical colleges did not give satisfactory results, and I determined to find something better.

I reasoned that as the catarrhal germs enter the nasal passages with the breath, and catarrh is always aggravated by breathing cold and raw air, the most likely cure would be by the inhalation of a warm, medicated, germ-destroying vapor; and, after nine years of effort, I at last found a combination of healing herbs, leaves and flowers which, being burned and the warm fumes inhaled, promptly relieved and in due time cured this disease where other remedies had completely failed.

THE ACCOMPANYING ILLUSTRATION shows the route by which the vapor of my Catarrh Cure is carried directly into all the parts that are affected by the disease. It searches out and wipes out catarrh where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly reach it. This treatment is so simple that it can be applied at home, and so harmless that it may safely be employed by any man, woman or child.

I have found in thirty-two years' experience that it cures not less than ninety-five in every one hundred cases, where it is given a fair trial.

Free Trial by Mail

Write me a postal (or letter) and I will send you by mail a liberal trial treatment entirely free. When you try this free sample you will see that the pleasant, warm, medicated vapor goes directly to every spot where the disease might possibly have reached, and when you experience the soothing effect produced you will be convinced that it is the proper and necessary treatment.

If you are afflicted with Catarrh, Bronchits, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness or other catarrhal troubles, you cannot afford to allow it to run longer, for if you do the probability is that it will either extend to the middle ear destroying the hearing, or else it may spread to the throat and lungs, with fatal results.

My remedy is curing cases of catarrh of the head, nose, middle ear, throat and lungs after various other remedies have failed; therefore, there is every reason for believing it will cure you, however severe or long standing your case may be.

Remember, a postal with your name and address will bring you this free trial treatment, and also my illustrated booklet HOW I CURE CATARRH. Write today, before you forget it.

COOLING OFF.

"Every auxiliary must carry its earnest individual responsibility, and be fired with zeal in carrying on and extending missionary work."

"Are any of your auxiliaries cooling off? Is the missionary spirit kept up in your Conference society?" asked a lady the other day—a lady from a distance, herself much interested in the work.

"Cooling off?" I said slowly, running over in my mind the possibilities of such a mischance. "God forbid! 'Cooling off,'" I repeated when new fields are opening, fresh opportunities multiplying; when the way to them is so straight and the means of reaching them so swift; and when, in consequence of all this, Christ's command to carry his Gospel to every creature has a new significance and authority to us living in this day? "Cooling off," I again said—"the drying up of a thousand springs of faith and prayer and gifts which feed the vast network of churches and schools for redeeming the races from their idolatry and degradation? God forbid!"

"Well," she said in a tone of discouragement, "there is always danger lest a good work may lose its first zest. Things are always happening to cool our ardor, you know."

A well-rooted work, having its aim and motive in that which constitutes the very life of the church—to evangelize all nations—cannot lose heart or zest, nor can it wither or fail.

"See," she said, "how much arts and accomplishments and pleasures are taking up the time of Christian women, to the exclusion of nobler things. These have their places, no doubt; but they are allowed to absorb time, thoughts, and means, leaving little or nothing for Christian work, which usually has to give way to them."

Ah, yes! Ever since the Lord told us in the parable of the sower, how "the lust of other things" choked the world and made it unfruitful, we have those things to guard against, to choose between, or to root out. Some of these are good in their place; a weed is but a plant out of place, and yet careful husbandry may need its check or removal. Let us more than ever as Christ's work presses upon us help each other, and help the young people who are soon to take our places, to keep subordinate the mere embellishments of life, in order to theirs. uN i etaoin hrdlu dlu lulu make supreme in our lives and theirs the authority, the love, the self-denia of Christ's life. Let us insist upon it with our own selves, and to teach it to others. There is nothing so wholesome as self-denial for Christ's sake. Self-denial for its own sake is hard and unlovely, and has no moral excellence to boast of; but having a favorite pursuit, giving up a comfort, keeping our promises, at some cost for a higher good, is a sure measure of spiritual increase. A young person who declined joining an excursion the other day for the sake of contributing at least her presence to a missionary meeting will find, I know, a strange and sweet potency in all her inner life for the year to come.

A clear, quick, uncompromising choice of Christ's distinctive work in and for the world will dispel much doubt, settle many disputed points of doctrine, and leave no uncertainty about the sincerity of our faith. "Cooling off" under these conditions is hardly possible.—Selected.

A friend of mine one day brought me a beautiful mineral specimen. It was what the geologists call a geode. From the outside it looked like simply a coarse, round stone. No one ever discovered anything of beauty or attractiveness in it. It had lain for years in a roadway and the wheels of the passing vehicles had scarred and scratched it. One day an unusually heavy wheel had struck it a severe blow and broke it in half. Then the beauty was revealed. Lining the entire inside, for it was hollow, was a layer of limpid quartz crystals, as sparkling as diamonds, that caught the rays of sunlight and broke them into ten thousand rainbows that dazzled the eyes. So with man. Only through the crevices of the broken heart does the Christ light shine.—Henry Stiles Bradley, D.D.

Only what thou art in thyself determines thy value; not what thou hast.—Auerbach.
